

WAS MR. SAGE'S CHIEF ADVISER.

Mrs. Sage Was Also Husband's Comrade and Nurse— An Ideal Helpmate.

New York, July 27.—All who knew Russell Sage in his same life say that he could not have chosen a better helpmate than Mrs. Sage proved to be. He and his wife, who he married thirty-seven years ago, knew each other in youth, when the then Margaret Olivia Slocum was a close friend of the first Mrs. Sage.

It is said that the latter often used to tell her friend that in case of her own death she hoped that Mr. Sage would have the good sense to see that there was no woman so well fitted to be her successor. Miss Slocum is said to have laughed at her friend's suggestion and to have disclaimed any matrimonial ambitions whatever.

Like her husband, she cared little for society and she would have found as much happiness in a country cottage as in Fifth Avenue. She has on more than one occasion said that she took no pleasure in her husband's wealth and regarded it as an onerous trust.

HE HAD ENOUGH MONEY.

Mrs. Sage had often endeavored to persuade her husband to give up his activity in the street, telling him repeatedly that they had enough money and more than enough. Several years ago she made one of her rare visits to the Stock Exchange and for several months after that kept urging Mr. Sage to quit the game and spend the rest of his days in peace. But at last she gave up the effort, saying: "He has become a business so long that it has become a necessity to him. Perhaps I am wrong, after all, for, outside his home, he would have nothing else to occupy his mind."

Mr. Sage's reputation for extreme frugality was a sorrow to his wife, who often took occasion to defend him. She insisted that he was a liberal man, despite what she termed "popular superstition," and in his views of life very liberal. As proof of this statement she once said that when she desired to publicly connect herself with the movement for woman's suffrage she hesitated to do so, but was overjoyed to find that her husband was a thoroughgoing woman suffragist as herself.

PUPIL OF EMMA WILLARD.

Mrs. Sage as a girl was a pupil of Emma Willard. She often refers to her old teacher as "my heroine." Among her schoolmates at Troy were Elizabeth Stanton and Louise Chandler Moulton. Another one of her associates in the Willard School was the girl who afterwards became the wife of Matthew Vassar, founder of Vassar College.

Mrs. Sage was interested with Miss Helen Gould in many charities and societies looking toward the improvement of the condition of the working women of the city. The business relations between the late Jay Gould and Mr. Sage had been accompanied by a personal friendship between the two families, which had continued, more particularly between Miss Helen Gould and Mr. and Mrs. Sage, since the elder Gould's death.

Miss Gould often speaks of Mrs. Sage as her "second mother" and was always the first to hurry to the Sage house on the occasion of a report about Mr. Sage's illness. Miss Gould is now in Europe as is also George J. Gould.

SHOULD STAY AT HOME.

Two of Mrs. Sage's nephews, both in the army, were favorites of Mr. Sage. They are Capt. Stephen L.H. Slocum of the Eighth Cavalry, just ordered from Manila to join the General Staff at Washington, and Major Herbert J. Slocum of the Second Cavalry, lately at Fort Riley, Kan. Capt. Stephen Slocum was some years ago a United States military attaché to Cape Town. Later he went to St. Petersburg in a similar capacity. A few days after he had been appointed military attaché at St. Petersburg Mr. and Mrs. Sage were talking with an acquaintance about the appointment and Mrs. Sage said:

"Tell me, do you think that is any billet for a poor young man?"

"Not much," said the acquaintance. "St. Petersburg is the most expensive court in Europe."

"How much do you think a young man in his position ought to have to be properly provided for?"

"At least $10,000 a year," was the reply.

"My, why!" exclaimed Mrs. Sage in the gentle way she has. "What do you think of that father?"

"I think he better stay at home," replied Uncle Russell sententiously.

But Capt. Slocum took the billet and kept his end up.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Some Information of Interest to the Busy Housewives

RECIPES.

Black Currant Vinegar.—To four pounds of black currants, very ripe, add three pints of cider vinegar; let it stand in a stone jar three days, stirring occasionally; then squeeze and strain the fruit. Boil the juice ten minutes and to every pint add a pound of cane sugar; then boil twenty minutes longer, bottle and cork. To serve, fill a glass half full of crushed ice, fill to the top with the vinegar.

Black Currant Jam.—Wash, stem, top and mash the currants. Weigh and allow the proportion of one pound of cane sugar to a pound of fruit. Put the fruit and one-quarter of the sugar into a porcelain kettle; when boiling add another quarter of the sugar; let boil ten minutes, then add another quarter; in ten more minutes stir in the last quarter and let boil till very thick, then jar or place in a crock. Putting only a little of the sugar at a time prevents the fruit from becoming hard.

VEGETARIAN SUBSTITUTES FOR MEAT.

Protose Roast with Olive Sauce.—Put one small minced onion, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, one tablespoonful of butter in to the cupful of boiling water, cook ten minutes; add two cupfuls of the bread crumbs and one-half teaspoonful of salt. Stir to mix well; remove from fire, stir in one hard-boiled egg chopped fine and bind with one raw egg. Put one-third of this mixture in a buttered baking pan, then a layer of protose cut in thin slices, then a layer of the bread mixture, a second layer of protose and finish with the bread mixture. Sprinkle with dried bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake one hour in a moderate oven. Serve with:

Olive Sauce.—Take one-fourth cupful of ripe olives, and, after extracting the stones, chop fine. Put in an enameled stew-pan with water enough to cover well, and simmer for two or three hours. Brown together one tablespoonful of olive oil and three tablespoonfuls of flour, strain in the water the olives were cooked in stirring hard meanwhile (there should be a coffee cupful), then add the olives and a light seasoning of salt if required.

USES OF SALT.

Immerse an article in a pot filled with cold water, to which some salt has been added. Boil the water well then cool slowly. Glass treated in this way will resist any sudden change of temperature.

Salt and water is used as a gargle for a sore throat.

A strong salt water bath to the feet will take out all tiredness.

A cup of salt water, warm, drunk before meals in the morning, will relieve constipation.

A little salt put on a child's tongue when in spasms will relieve instantly.

Before drinking coffee, those prone to indigestion should always put a pinch of salt in it.

Consumptive night sweats may be arrested by sponging the body nightly in salt water.

To beat the white of eggs quickly add a pinch of salt. Salt cools, and cold eggs froth rapidly.

Salt and vinegar will clean copper better than anything else. It will also take spots off chinaware.

NEW VEILS.

The return of veils with long hanging ends behind has had its result in several novelties in this connection. Some of the newest examples which are intended to be draped over the hat are designed of coarse net in the same color as the chapeau they accompany, and are finished with two or three edgings of ribbon half an inch in width. The ends of the veil sometimes reach below the waist, as well as supplying a light covering to the flowers which trim the hat. Lace veils have come back to fashion, but these are used more as a drape to the hat itself than as a covering to the face, and are frequently supplemented with a fancy edge of some description.

Transvaal Delegates in England Issue Stinging Appeal to Colonists in All British Colonies.

London, July 30.—The Transvaal delegates now in England, have issued an appeal to fellow colonists of other British colonies and it asserts that this is the most critical moment in the history of South Africa so far as Great Britain is concerned. It has come after great loss of money and human life, and disturbance of trade, industry and commerce, consequent upon a long war. Great Britain has more at stake now in the sub-continent than in the whole course of her past history or at such a critical period as the retrocession of the Transvaal in 1881.

"Then we had not a territory stretching from Zambesi to Table Bay. Orange Free State was an independent republic and our interests were more uncertain. To-day any peril to the permanence of British institutions in South Africa means the dismemberment of the Empire, if through mistaken magnanimity on the part of the British Government, the Transvaal should have Dutch administration and Orange River colony be given practical independence, for there would not be five British representatives in the Legislature of the Orange River colony."

The future of the flag and of all that British civilization means would be the merest gamble. Every colony in the empire must be awaiting with intense anxiety the announcement of the Prime Minister next Tuesday in the House of Commons as to the details of the new constitution for responsible government to be given the Transvaal. There is reason to fear the safeguard which the government will include in the constitution will not be sufficient to prevent the first representative and responsible administration in a country lately won by the same ministers who acted for Kruger in one of the most reactionary administrations of modern times and who denied equal rights to all white men. It is impossible to believe that any colony in the Empire would not insist so far as their influence by an appeal may have on the British government, on making absolutely secure to the crown our new colonies through administration. In the hands of British men, the voice of the colonists now, even more than during the war, can assist to bring about a decision on the part of this government in keeping with such past Liberal traditions as were included in Lord Durham's report, which, while establishing equal rights demanded British government.

DROPPED ALL OTHERS.

"I dropped all liniments but Nerviline because I found Nerviline the quickest to relieve pain," writes E. S. Benton of St. John's. "If my children are croupy or sick, Nerviline cures. If a case of cramps or stomach ache turns up, Nerviline is ever ready. We use Nerviline for Neuralgia, rheumatism and all kinds of aches and pains; it's as good as any doctor." The great Canadian remedy for the past fifty years has been Polson's Nerviline—nothing better made.

"Look here!" complained the victim "you said the house was only five minutes' walk from the station. To say the least I'm disappointed in you."

"No more than I'm disappointed in you," retorted the agent. "I thought you were a fast walker."

A CHARMING WAIST DESIGN.

The fashion fairy puts a touch of softness upon all of her new creations. It is the day of gentility in gown evolved and every article of apparel must be as fine and exquisite as the human brain can devise. The waist sketched here is one of Dame Fashion's prettiest designs. A rare shade of lavender veiling develops the body of the waist while a dainty embroidered net forms the yoke and sleeves, and appears as a soft background between the strap of the front. The crushed ribbon encircling the waist and ending in a fancy bow above the centre of the corsage ribbon encircling the waist and ending in a saucy bow above the centre of the corsage ribbon in places in back and gives a pleasing finish. The waist is not so difficult to construct as it appears and will prove very smart and becoming for nice occasions. In the medium size the pattern calls for two yards of 36 inch material for the outside and 2 1/2 yards of 8 inch lace. 6567—sleeves—32 to 42 inches bust measure.

Servant—Signora, you must call the doctor as Master Frederico feels ill.

Mother—If he has no other symptoms the doctor can wait. He has said so many times that he was not well and it has passed at once.

Servant—Yes, signora, that is true, but he has never said so before on a holiday.

An entertainer and humorist one afternoon recently had just made his bow and was about to begin when a cat walked in and sat down on the stage. With quick wit he said severely:

"You get out. This is a monologue, not a catalogue."
