

DO MEN UNDERSTAND

THE ART OF PROPOSING?

Honestly, now did you like the way in which your lover and husband proposed to you? Didn't it leave something to be desired in the way of electric thrills and a sudden blaze of roselight?

Confess, honey, no one will know. A woman who has been married three times certainly ought to know a few things about this auspicious moment, since she has had a fair sample, yet this thrice blessed woman declares that men have much to learn in this respect. Listen:

"An unconfessed grievance that every married woman has against her husband is the way he proposes to her," declares the wisely matron. "She was probably glad enough to get him on any terms, but there is a difference between having the thing you want tendered to you on a silver salver and having it thrown at you."

"Women crowd the theatre to see the counterfeit of the romance they missed, yet how poorly even an actor generally does it!"

"It is only once in a blue moon that you find a stage hero of the old stock company type who clutches the heroine to him in a way that loosens her back hair and makes every woman in the audience sit up with a gasp."

"Off the stage each man has his own individual system of love making and reaches the critical point of proposing by his own route."

"One of the most popular is by way of the confessional. When a man begins to get sentimental he yearns to tell a girl all about his past life. He confesses his own sins to her, and those of his friends."

"Then he tells her that she is the only person who ever really understood his intense nature, and that he only needs her angel influence to enable him to lead the higher life."

"The really bashful man who has made a study of the subject always proposes suddenly, and when you least expect it. He doesn't waste a word in preliminary compliments, because he has screwed his courage up to the sticking point, and he dare not let a turn of it go."

"There is a silence, and then he catches his breath and takes the plunge, as if he were jumping into a sea of ice and didn't know and didn't care whether he came up again or not."

"A disappointing lover, but an eminently satisfactory husband, is the business type. You have been good friends, and he had confided to you that he was getting on in the grocery trade, and last month's sales were double those of the month before."

"Then one Sunday afternoon he steers you round to some new flats or cottages, and, after pointing out that the plumbing is exposed and so forth, he says: 'I say, Mary, how would you like to live here and be my little housekeeper?' And if you have any sense you say 'Yes.'"

"That night you may shed a few tears in the silence of your own room over the beauty of the romance you have missed, but you will never have to weep over bills you can't pay."

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Some Interesting Information for Busy Housewives.

Odds and ends of soap accumulate in every household, and are generally thrown away. To utilize them, take a piece of stout flannel about six inches square, bring two of the edges, also one of the ends together and sew strongly and with worsted. You gave then a long bag 6 by 3 inches, open at one end. Into this from time to time put all scraps of toilet or kitchen soap. Fold the open top down and you will have a square pad. The bag will be found most useful for greasy hands.

To render stained water bottles beautifully clean and bright put in salt and pour on vinegar; stand a few hours, then shake.

Damp salt will remove tea stains from crockery.

Turpentine is the best preventive for moths. Saturate pieces of brown paper with same, and place in boxes.

A gas stove can be kept clean and clean by wiping each time after using and once a week washing with turpentine.

To boil eggs without the risk of cracking, hold them in a spoonful of boiling water before immersing them.

Equal parts of turpentine, linseed oil and vinegar, make a splendid polish for furniture, etc.

To turn out a cake from a tin without breaking, wrap it around with a damp cloth for a few minutes.

To turn out a pudding boiled in a basin, hold it for a few moments in cold water; this will prevent it sticking to the cloth.

If you want your cakes and pies to come to the table with that glossy brown-baked appearance which is so appetizing to look upon, sprinkle the oven with sugar and close the door tight. To prevent baking meat brown, stand a cup of water in the oven.

A simple way to relieve sore throat is to take a lump of resin about as large as a walnut, put it into an old teapot, pour on boiling water, then put the lid on and place the spout to your mouth; the steam will prove very beneficial in allaying the inflammation.

Do not throw away your lemon peel. Fill a bottle with rind of lemons, and when using lemons, cut off the yellow part of the rind and place in the bottle. You will find this quite as good as the essence of lemon which is sold in the shops. Essence of orange can be made in the same way.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

An application of ammonia on table salt will relieve insect stings.

The value of a mustard poultice for coughs and sore throats was well known to our grandmothers, and the remedy is still used successfully in many households.

The woman who appears taller in proportion when sitting down than when standing has a good chance to live long. If the body is long in proportion to the limbs, the heart, and lungs and digestive organs are large.

For a dangerous wound made by a rusty nail or a jagged knife the best remedy is to apply pork rind for several days when the wound will be entirely drawn and there will be no inflammation.

No matter what the nature of your complexion is the face should be bathed every night with warm water, a pure soap and a correct complexion brush.

Since this cleansing process removes the natural oil as well as dust and grime, a simple emollient or skin food should be applied to keep the skin from becoming dry or rough.

This is the diet that makes for roselight: Cheesecake, plenty of milk, eggs, rip fruit, green stuffs cream and milk pudding. No smoked or salted meat or smoked or salted fish. Very little tea, coffee, cake, sugar or sweet stuff. Good beef or mutton, underdone, at one meal daily. A meal of bread and butter and tea is at direct enmity with the result sought.

Few people can consume milk largely without a growing distaste. But one can take it in other ways. Thus one may eat butter liberally. There is no more nutrient fat used at the table. Then there is cheese, which is very rich in proteid material. Cream may be used as an addition to many articles of food. Lastly, skim milk which, so far from being valueless, has more value for its price than does any other food in common use.

each grape. Heat the pulp gradually and cook until the seeds come out easily. Ten or fifteen minutes will be required. Pass through a sieve just fine enough to keep back the seeds. Cook the skins and pulp ten minutes then add the sugar and continue the cooking until the liquid thickens slightly. Store it into earthen or glass jars.

PEARS PRESERVED WITH GINGER.

Parse, quarter and core eight pounds of pears; cut or break one-fourth of a pound of ginger root into pieces. Grate the rind of two or three lemons. Put the pears, ginger and grated lemons into a saucepan in layers, with six pounds of sugar, add a cup of water—two if the pears are dry. Let it heat very slowly and cook until the pears look clear. Add the juice of six lemons when the fruit is rather more than half cooked. Two hours of cooking will often be needed.

PRESERVED WATERMELON RIND

Remove the green outer skin of the rind and cut the rest into pieces of small size. Cover with cold water and add a tablespoonful of salt for each quart of water. Let it stand over night in the salted water until transparent. Drain carefully. For each pound of rind make a syrup of three-fourths of a pound of sugar and half a cupful of water and skim carefully; then add the rind and let it cook each pound put in half an ounce of ginger root and a lemon cut in slices. Cook about twenty minutes. Then add the rind and let it cook until the ginger and lemon, take out the preserves from the syrup with a perforated dipper and put it into jars. Boil the syrup until rich and thick, and pour it over the fruit in the jars.

APPLE AND QUINCE PRESERVES

To one peck of sweet apples pared and quartered take fifteen quinces, cut in eighths. Weigh the whole and for each pound of fruit take three-fourths of a pound of sugar. Place alternate layers of fruit and sugar in a preserving kettle, add two cups of water and let it stand overnight. In the morning cook it over a slow fire until the fruit is tender and the syrup is clear.

FRENCH GARTER DRAWERS.

Very dainty women are more choice of their undergarments than of those worn outside and one of the latest fashions is for the short garter drawers. These are so short that they may be worn beneath the corset and garters and not interfere with the latter's fastening on the stockings. When once tried they are very much liked for they are not at all bulky or cumbersome and while fitting the hips perfectly they end in full ruffles above the knees. Those sketched here may be short or long so as to please any one. In the medium size the drawers of garter length require 1 1/2 yards of 36-inch material, 67-64—sizes, 20, 24, 28 and 32 inches waist measure.

HEARST AND HEARTISM.

Some General Reflections Upon the New York Editor and Publicist.

No other American of equal celebrity is as little known personally as our foremost champion of unrestrained journalism. The character of Hearst himself has been hidden in the shadows behind the searchlight whose rays he has so mercilessly directed against the affairs of other men. It would seem as if his own adjutant, by his own convenience, has surrounded him with an air of mystery, in order to whet public curiosity.

Long before Hearst was running for office journalistic circles were asking: Is it Hearst or is it Brisbane? as interestedly as the general public were asking after the battle of Santiago. Was it Sampson or was it Schley? From one source you may hear that Hearst is the sole creator of the movement of which he is head, as the public generally believes; from another you may hear that Hearst is only the name for the millions which a staff of brilliant innovators has used to conjure him.

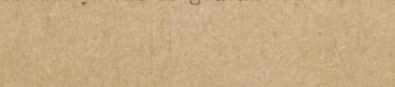

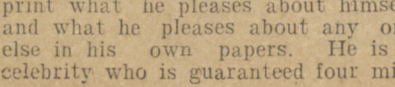

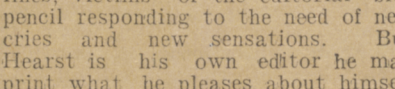

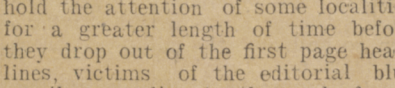

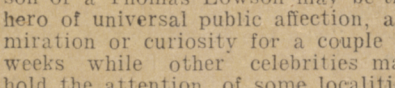

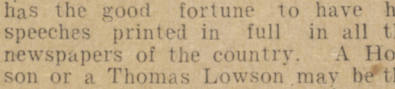

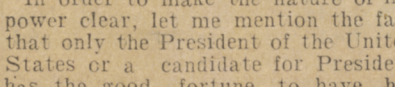

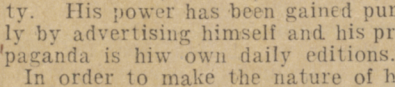

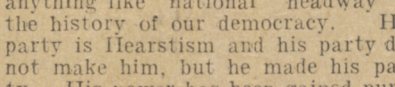

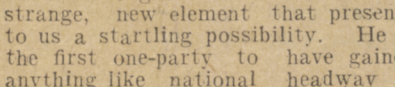

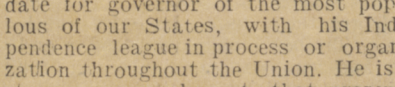

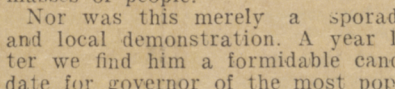

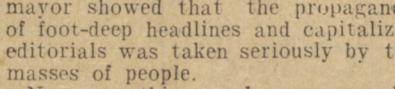

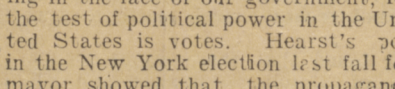

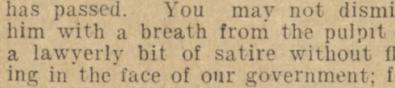

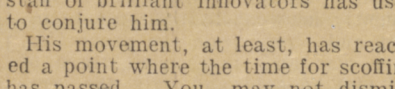

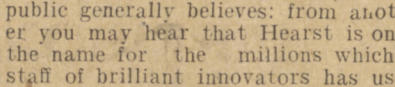

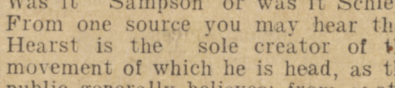

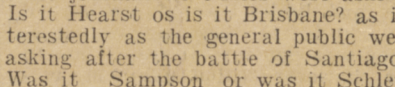

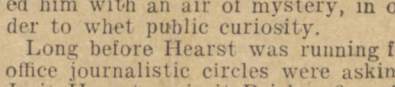

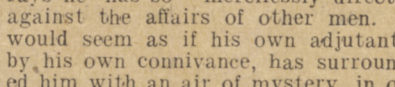

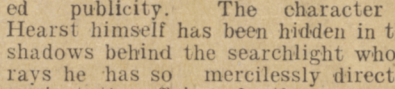

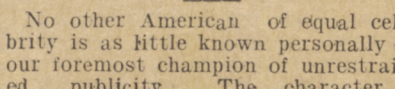

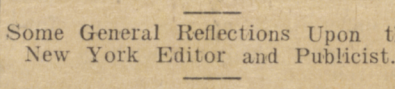

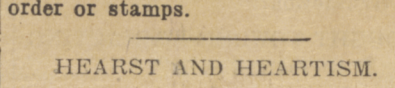

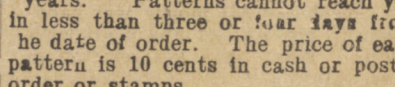

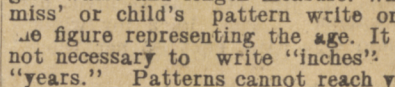

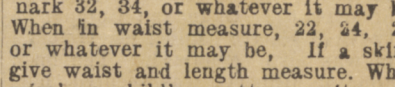

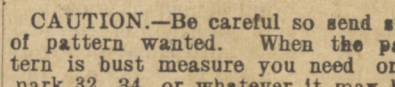

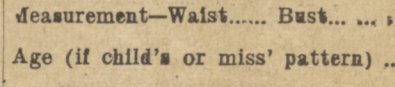

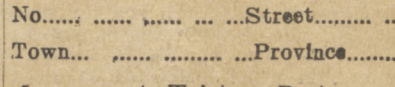

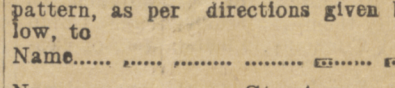

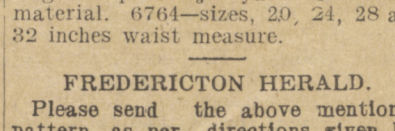

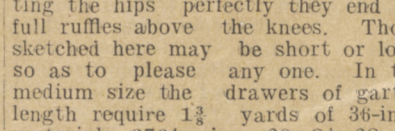

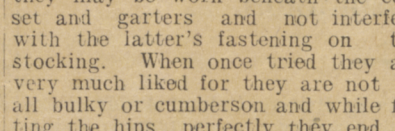

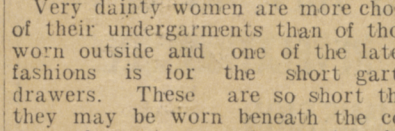

His movement, at least, has reached a point where the time for scoffing has passed. You may not dismiss him with a breath from the pulpit or a lawfully bit of satire without flying in the face of our government; for the test of political power in the United States is votes. Hearst's poll in the New York election last fall for mayor showed that the propaganda of foot-deep headlines and capitalized editorials was taken seriously by the masses of people.

Nor was this merely a sporadic and local demonstration. A year later we find him a formidable candidate for governor of the most populous of our States, with his Independence league in process of organization throughout the Union. He is a strange, new element that presents to us a startling possibility. He is the first one-party to have gained anything like national headway in the history of our democracy. His party is Hearstism and his party did not make him, but he made his party.

His power has been gained purely by advertising himself and his propaganda is his own daily editions. In order to make the nature of his power clear, let me mention the fact that only the President of the United States or a candidate for President has the good fortune to have his speeches printed in full in all the newspapers of the country. A Hobson or a Thomas Lowson may be the hero of universal public affection, admiration or curiosity for a couple of weeks while other celebrities may hold the attention of some localities for a greater length of time before they drop out of the first page headlines, victims of the editorial blue pencil responding to the need of new cries and new sensations. But Hearst is his own editor he may print what he pleases about himself and what he pleases about any one else in his own papers. He is a celebrity who is guaranteed four mil-

Dysentery

IS a form of diarrhoea, and consists of copious and frequent liquid discharges from the bowels, accompanied by painful straining sensations. Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry is a specific for diarrhoea, dysentery, and all summer complaints, and has been a well-known remedy for 60 years. You are not taking a new and untried remedy when you use Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry.

Mrs. M. A. SUMMERFIELD, Canboro, Ont., writes: "I have used Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in my family for years, and have always found it a wonderful remedy for Diarrhoea and Dysentery. I know of a great many others who have used it with the most satisfactory results."

lion readers every day. This is the largest continuous audience that any American public man has ever possessed. It amounts to a trust of publicity.

As he is a one-man power, as it is revolutionary, we ought to know more and not less about his personality than about Roosevelt. Taft and Bryan, who are the representatives of old and tried methods and subject to the inevitable discipline of party surroundings. It is time that the person who regards Hearst as a deliverer, the citizen who regards him as a political buffoon, and the citizen who regards him as a dangerous blackguard, he should know our man, his morals, his fitness for the office which he seeks; the sum of the sincerity in his propaganda, and his constructive ability and his material for accomplishing the reforms which he has committed himself to, with the enthusiasm of the agitator.

Being annoyed by persons who left his church before the sermon, a Devonshire vicar, says an English newspaper, has met the case by putting in a prominent position a notice which is written to this effect: "All adults who are baptised or possessed by devils should leave the church before the sermon. Otherwise they should remain till the conclusion of the service."

He got a day off, away from home, through the old dodge of saying he was going out shooting, but he had to bring his wife a fine fat rabbit for which he paid a good price at the butcher's.

"Ah!" said his deceived darling, after having sniffed a long time, "you did right to kill the poor thing. It was time it died."
