NORWEGIANS SUFFER.

Trondhjem, Norway, March 3.—A fishing fleet consisting of 300 boats operating off Trondhjem, was caught in a terrible storm Friday and it is feared the greater portion of it was wrecked as many boats are reported to have been seen floating keel upwards. Thus far 79 of the boats have been reported safe at Platanger Koksik, and the Gjeslengern Islands and possibly others have reached shelter at some of the thousands of islands dotting the coast. Steamers are crushing in the hope of picking up survivors.

The fisher boats are usually manned by three or four men, so that the loss of life must be great. The weather is bitterly cold and even if the shipwrecked fishermen reach uninhabited islands they must perish unless they are rescued immediately. The village of Gjeslervær is the greatest sufferer as most of the fleet had headquarters there.

The waters continuous to the Gjeslengern Islands are well known fishing grounds, especially for the cod in the autumn. This was an unusually good season and the fleet assembled in the islands which are several miles off the mainland. Three hundred boats put to sea Friday when the weather seemed most bright, but the lines were hardly cast when the storm broke with a violence never seen before by the hardiest of the Norse fishermen. The fleet immediately dispersed, discarding its tackle the only thought being to reach the mainland. Steering was out of the question. The boats were tossed helplessly by the mountainous seas in a blinding snow squall and the crews had no recourse but to await the end.

Eleven boats and thirty-three lives are known to have been lost.
