FOR LOVE OR HONOR.

"A few more broadsides, sir, and they are ours!" he cried impetuously. "They are in a sinking."

"The ship have struck, sir, and you are my prisoner," interrupted Dale quickly, seeing the necessity of promptitude.

"Struck! This ship! Your prisoner!" cried the astonished Englishman.

"Yes, yes. Your sword!" demanded Dale.

"Disarm him!" cried the American. Two or three of the boarding party closed around them.

"Sir," asked the lieutenant, turning to his captain, "is it true that we have struck?"

"Yes, sir," answered Pearson hoarsely.

"My God," cried Pascoe. "There was a momentary silence."

"I have nothing more to say, sir," he added. "I will go below and call off the men."

"No sir," interrupted Dale. "You will accompany your captain on board our ship at once. Pass the word to cease firing. The ship has struck."

As the English captain and his first lieutenant stepped over the rail upon the high poop of the Richard the roar of the guns died away, this time for good. Seizing a dangling rope, they swung themselves inboard and found themselves face to face with a little man in a tattered uniform, hatless, covered with dust and smoke, powder stained and grimy with the soil of the battle. Blood spattered from a wound on his forehead and had congealed on his cheek. He was a hideous looking spectacle. The red fire light played luridly over him. Nothing but the piercing black eyes that burned and gleamed out of his face in the darkness bespoke the high humanity of the man.

"Is it?"

"Captain John Paul Jones, at your service, gentlemen."

"My sword," said Pearson, tendering it to him formally. "I regret," he added ungraciously, "at being compelled to strike to a man who has fought with a halter around his neck."

"Sir," said Jones, with a magnanimity as great as his valor, "you have fought like a hero, and I make no doubt that your sovereign will reward you in ample manner. Mr. Brooks, escort these gentlemen to my cabin."

The two ships were now cut adrift, Dale remaining on the Serapis to take command. He had sat down a moment for rest, and as he attempted to rise to his feet he fell to the deck, discovering only in that way that he had been severely wounded.

By the most heroic efforts of the prize crew on the Serapis and the remaining men on the Richard, the English prisoners were driven back into the hold, the flames subdued and some semblance of order restored. Cotton- eau had captured the Scarborough after an hour of hard fighting, and the victory was entirely with the Americans. But it had been purchased at a fearful cost. There is no battle on land or sea in the world's history where the percentage of loss was greater than the battle between the Serapis and the Richard.

About 70 per cent on the Serapis and over 50 per cent on the Richard had been killed or wounded, and the Bon Homme Richard was in a sinking condition. She had been literally beaten to pieces. It was not safe to remain upon her decks. Consequently the prisoners and the wounded, groaning and crying in anguish, were removed to the Serapis. In the early morning of the day following the brave ship which had earned undying immortality in her worn-out old age, because for three hours John Paul Jones and his men had battled upon her decks, sank forever beneath the sea.

The refitting of the prizes for the returning voyage was at once begun. To anticipate events, it is recorded that Captain Landals, the jealous and false hearted Frenchman who had so treacherously maneuvered the Alliance, was subsequently court martialled and dismissed from the service.

CHAPTER XXIII.

On Board the Serapis Again.

"The battle is on," said O'Neill, in the small boat, to Elizabeth, "and I am not there. O God, give us a little breeze!" he cried. In anticipation he swung the oars inboard, stepped the mast once more, letting the sail hang, and then resumed his place by her side.

"God is good to me," she said at last. "He will not let you be there to be killed. You have had trouble enough and run enough risks. He wishes to keep you for me."

He shook his head. "My place is there. My duty is on yonder deck. Would that I had returned to the ship without going up to the castle!"

"Why, then," she said reproachfully, "you would not have seen me!"

"I know," he replied, "but then I would be in my rightful place, fighting where I should be. Coventry would be honored in doing his duty. The admiral would be happy. Your marriage would take place."

"And you," she cried, womanlike, placing him in the balance as opposed to all the rest, "would you have been happy?"

"Happiness has nothing to do with that," he answered impatiently. "It is a question of duty. I have been a fool."

"Has the fool been rewarded in accordance with his folly?" she asked him. "Nay, look at me before you reply," she cried imperiously, turning his head until his eyes looked into her own. In the face of that girl, in the limpid light of her magic glance, in that mystic night, there was but one answer to be made.

"I say no more," he replied, kissing her softly. "You are right. I have you. You are worth it all. I will try to be a philosopher about all the rest."

Meanwhile the intermittent reports had been succeeded by a steady roar of artillery which reverberated and rolled along the surface of the water. The Scarborough, some distance from the Serapis and the Richard to the northwest, was apparently hotly engaged with the Pallas, while the Alliance seemed to be sailing back and forth between the two groups of combatants, pouring in a random fire upon friend and foe alike. Great clouds of smoke, punctured by vivid flashes of light, overhung the ships.

The feelings of the young officer could be imagined. Adrift in that little boat, watching the awful combat, not even the presence of the woman he loved could compensate him for his absence, in spite of his attempted philosophy. The fever of the conflict possessed him. His breath came hard. The sweat stood on his forehead. He prayed as never before for a breeze to take him to the fight. He murmured incoherent words which told to the tender listener something of the terrible struggle which raged within his bosom. So the long hours wore away.

POLITICS GETTING HOT.

Fight on the Market Square at Kingston.

Kingston, Jan. 24.—A fistic encounter occurred at 4 o'clock this afternoon on the Market Square, the contestants being Donald McIntyre, Conservative candidate in the bye-election, and Michael Sullivan, a prominent Liberal worker here and widely known as a government contractor. The episode has caused a great sensation as the police court may result.

The two politicians stopped on the street to discuss election matters. Mr. Sullivan accused Mr. McIntyre's supporters of breaking the purity agreement and collecting money for bribery.

Mr. McIntyre retorted that Sullivan was the biggest corruptionist in Kingston.

Sullivan immediately called the Conservative a liar.

The latter struck him and a pitched battle ensued. Passers-by hurried to the square to see the encounter.

To Mayor Mowat belonged the honor of stopping the fight. Just as the combatants separated the police came on the scene but did not make any arrest. The matter was reported to the chief of police with the result that Mr. McIntyre must go before the police magistrate. Mr. Sullivan charges that Mr. McIntyre called him an unsavory name after he called him a liar.

ONLY A Common Cold

BUT IT BECOMES A SERIOUS MATTER IF NEGLECTED. PNEUMONIA, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, CATARRH or CONSUMPTION IS THE RESULT.

Get rid of it at once by taking

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup

Obstinate coughs yield to its grateful soothing action, and in the racking, persistent cough, often present in Consumptive cases, it gives prompt and sure relief. In Asthma and Bronchitis it is a successful remedy, rendering breathing easy and natural, enabling the sufferer to enjoy refreshing sleep, and often effecting a permanent cure.

We do not claim that it will cure Consumption in the advanced stages, but if taken in time it will prevent it reaching that stage, and will give the greatest relief to the poor sufferer from this terrible malady.

Be careful when purchasing to see that you get the genuine Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. Put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark.

Mr. Wm. O. Jenkins, Spring Lake, Alta., writes: "I had a very bad cold settled on my lungs. I bought two bottles of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup but it only required one to cure me. I have never met with any other medicine as good."

Price 25 cts., at all dealers.

BABY'S TONGUE TELLS.

Little tongues that cannot talk tell mothers just as plainly that their owners are not well. When baby's tongue is white or coated or yellow especially toward the root, it is a sign of stomach trouble, indigestion, cold or feverishness. Baby's Own Tablets act like magic in curing these and the other minor ills of babyhood and childhood. They are as good for the new-born baby as for the well grown child. Absolutely safe and absolutely harmless. Mrs. C. F. Kerr Elgin, Ont., says:

"Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine I have ever used for stomach and bowel troubles and destroying worms. I could hardly feel safe without the Tablets in the house."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box by writing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

There cannot be different degrees of purity any more than there can be different degrees of honesty.

If a man be honest, that is all he can be. There is no superlative.

One flour cannot be purer than another. It can only be more nearly pure.

In these times when all flour manufacturers are claiming purity you should remember these two things:

Actual purity in flour can only be secured by the use of electricity.

Royal Household Flour

is the only flour, made and sold in Canada, that is purified by electricity.

You can get Ogilvie's Royal Household Flour from your grocer.

Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., Limited,
