

LEAVES HUSBAND, ACCUSES MOTHER.

Mrs. Purcell of Chicago Settles With Millionaire Malster for $45,000.

Chicago, Ill., May 8.—A scandal of startling interest to the residents of Oak Park, as well as to the older members of the Presbyterian circles by the return of Mrs. Charles Purcell of 308 Forest avenue, Chicago, has been brought to view after a narrow escape from death in the San Francisco disaster.

Mrs. Purcell, after 26 years of married life, has separated from her husband, Charles Purcell, the millionaire malster, whose offices are at 169 Jackson boulevard. Added to the sensation is Mrs. Purcell's bitter criticism of her mother, Mrs. William C. Gray, widow of the late editor of the Interior, official organ of the Presbyterian Church.

"For 12 years I have been ignored and insulted and reviled by my husband and my mother," says Mrs. Purcell, "and I could not stand it any longer, so did not believe that my mother had a spark of human feeling in her for me. Ralph has told me that she has asked me twice during the time it was thought that I had perished in the San Francisco earthquake."

In lieu of a divorce Mrs. Purcell has accepted $45,000. "I agreed not to sue for divorce," she said, "and in any contingency not to mention the name of my mother in such a suit."

Mrs. Gray, with dignity and emphasis, denies the allegations and insinuations of her daughter which she describes as the victim of hallucinations. The Grays are among the oldest residents of Oak Park, where they have lived 35 years. They are relatives of Whitelaw Reid, ambassador to Great Britain.

GRAYS RELATIVES OF REIDS AND OF LATE SENATOR BRICE.

Mrs. Purcell was visiting her cousin, the wife of Judge Harrison of San Francisco and a niece of Whitelaw Reid, at the time of the earthquake. The Grays are also relatives of the late United States Senator Calvin S. Brice of Ohio.

Mrs. Gray is perhaps 65 years old. Mrs. Purcell is 44 years old, but does not look more than 30. She is tall, well built, with a fine mouth, merry eyes and rosy complexion. The Purcells have two sons, William, an architect, now in Rome and Ralph, 17 years old, who lives with his father.

Mrs. Purcell showed some reluctance at first in using her mother's name.

"I could not bear to make such statement before," she said. "It seemed too shameful a charge to make against the woman who should be the nearest and dearest in the world to me. But I have been driven to it at last by the treatment to which I have been subjected."

"I have not spoken to my mother for 12 years. My husband went to her home at 319 Kenilworth avenue, on the street just next to the one where we lived nearly every evening. He spent his Sundays there and he went there mornings before he took the train for the city. I have myself seen my mother meet him at my very door."

"Even now when I look at the story from a calmer standpoint, I can see that it seems ridiculous and absurd that a grandmother should be so interested in her own son-in-law, but every one of the family has known of this unnatural fascination."

LITTLE BOY TOLD OF HEARING HIS FATHER CALLED DARING.

"The first I knew of this state of affairs was when my own little boy came home and told me that he thought it was queer to see grandma hugging and kissing papa and calling him 'darling.' I spoke to Mr. Purcell and remonstrated with him about it, but he would do nothing different. Last winter while I was in Florida with my boy, who is an invalid and who needs my care, my mother went to California with my husband. Every one in Oak Park—neighbors, servants, tradesmen—known of the way she has treated him. Why, a committee of three women from the Presbyterian Church called on her to remonstrate with her on her conduct. When I charged Charles Purcell with this in the presence of my lawyer, and of his, he admitted it. Then he made the settlement of the $45,000."

"Ever since our relatives have espoused my side she has been desperate in her attacks on me. Several years ago, during my father's lifetime, he and my mother gave a dinner in New York for the Whitelaw Reids. The fact that I have been entertained by Mrs. Harrison and my cousin, Judge Gray of Indianapolis, has made her frantic."

"I was only 18 when I married Mr. Purcell, and my mother declared that she would not allow me to go out with any one else or to receive any one else. I actually had to marry him if I were to have any freedom at all. But I do love him, and no one can say a word against me. Even he himself cannot do that, and he has admitted as much."

Mr. Purcell, in discussing the matter today, said: "It is a fact that Mrs. Purcell and I have separated. I gave her $45,000. Mrs. Purcell's charges against her mother, Mrs. Gray, are without an atom of truth or foundation."

MURDER LIKE BOSTON SUIT CASE TRAGEDY.

Nude Body of Woman Thrown Into Lake at Chicago—Victim of Operation.

Chicago, Ill., May 8.—The discovery by the coroner's physician that a woman whose nude body was found in the lake at the foot of Thorndale avenue last night was dead before her body was cast into the water is another mystery which the police of Chicago are investigating.

That the woman was of social position was shown by her hands and the two articles of clothing on the body. Indications suggest she was the victim of an illegal operation and was thrown into the lake, practically nude, after death. The police are searching for every bit of evidence which may throw light upon the mystery, which is likened to the Boston suit case tragedy.

Clews to the identity of the woman are few. The body, decomposed as it is by the water, is that of a woman of apparent refinement. The hands and feet are delicately formed and show signs of care. The teeth are perfect and the age of the woman is given as about 30 years. Two articles of clothing were found, a slipper and a stocking. Both of these are of high grade.

That the woman died in the office of a physician is indicated by the presence of a slipper. Necessity for quick disposition of the body is believed to have suggested to the parties involved the plan of disrobing and throwing it into the lake. No police reports of missing persons have been made which tally in any way with the body found. Investigations have been started in several other cities.

BLOCKADE RUNNER'S FATE.

Fast in the ice and all Hands Dead.

New York, May 6.—The Sun has the following cable from London:

With all hands dead on board, the German steamship Soerabaya, a Russian blockade runner, which had been missing for six months has been found near Nicolaiavsk, 25 miles from the Amur river. The vessel was incased in ice and the crew had been frozen to death.

Early in the war the Soerabaya was engaged in carrying coal to Japan. Then she entered the Russian service, took on a cargo of arms and ammunition and undertook to elude the Japanese scouts and get into Vladivostok with her supplies. She could not pierce the blockade. To escape capture she took refuge in the Amur River.

This was in October, and the Soerabaya was not heard of until this week.

INDUSTRIAL BOOM FOR NOVA SCOTIA.

Mr. J. F. H. Wyse Believes Use of Electric Power Will Revolutionize N. S. Industries.

Montreal Herald.—"I am confident that Nova Scotia is destined to become a great industrial centre in the near future. The province has been destined by nature to become such. It has abundance of coal and iron, is easily accessible by rail and water, is within six days of the British markets, and almost within a stone's throw from the New England coast cities. There will never be any trouble in placing the manufactured products on the world's markets. All the province lacks is cheap power to drive its industries and already plans are under way to supply into this deficiency."

This was the opinion advanced by Mr. J. F. H. Wyse, senior member of Wyse and Middleton, electrical and civil engineers, of Toronto, who was seen at the Windsor yesterday by the Herald representative. He had just returned from a trip to Nova Scotia, where he had been employed by the Maritime Coal, Railway and Power Company, Limited, to inquire into and report on the company's project to generate power and transmit electricity from Chignecto Mines to Amherst, Sackville and other nearby centres.

Mr. Wyse said the scheme was absolutely practical, and would be rushed ahead. Similar projects had proven very satisfactory in Ontario, and at the present time several were under way, among them being a scheme to supply Hamilton and Brantford with power from the Welland Canal. The Maritime Coal Railway and Power Company intend to build a big electrical generating plant near the mouth of their mines, six miles from Amherst, and transmit power by wire. There are eleven big manufacturing enterprises in Amherst now run by steam at a combined cost of $16,000. Electrical power could be supplied from Chignecto Mines for a much lower sum, and still leave the company a good profit on their investment. Amherst manufacturers are enthusiastic over the project.

Mr. Wyse said that this was only the beginning of the use of electrical power on a large scale in Nova Scotia. This project would be followed by several others, and he believed in a few years the province would enjoy a great industrial boom. Referring to the advantages of electrical power over water power, Mr. Wyse said that water power was often interfered with by droughts, by floods and by ice in winter time. Supply of electrical power would be perfectly steady. Nova Scotia lacked water power, and therefore this was out of the question.

In conclusion Mr. Wyse said he believed that Canada will make wonderful strides within the next 20 years, and he expects to see Nova Scotia a second Pennsylvania, with several Pittsburghs within its borders.

WHAT WEALTH CAN DO.

At Montreal Sir Montague Allan Created Dining Room for One Day's Use.

Montreal Herald, Monday.—Sir Montague and Lady Allan are leaving nothing undone to make the stay of Prince Arthur of Connaught under their roof one which will be in every way worthy of their Royal visitors.

That neither pains nor expense are being spared is evidenced by the fact that a large temporary annex has been built to their beautiful residence, "Ravenscrag," specially for the Prince's visit. This wooden annex has been erected in the rear of the house and runs the whole length of the hall-room and reception-room. It is one hundred feet long by twenty-five feet wide, and although three weeks have been occupied in the building of it, yet this addition will be torn down on Thursday next, after it has served the purpose for which it was built. It is now practically complete, and the builders have given way to the decorators and electric light men, who are working like beavers to have everything in readiness for tomorrow.

It is principally as a dining-room that that building will be used, the dining-room in "Ravenscrag" already large in itself, not having the dimensions required to accommodate the large number of guests expected there to dinner on Wednesday evening. It will also be used as a buffet for a ball on Tuesday evening, and it will contain a large heater by which the various dishes can be kept at the proper temperature.

The decorations of the annex will be on a lavish scale, as the place will be practically smothered in plants, palms and flowers. It is to be brilliantly illuminated by numerous electric lights and the grounds will also be made to glow with many incandescent lights.

A PRINCESS DRESSING SAQUE.

With the Princess in such marked favor it is not surprising that its vogue should extend to dressing saques, and even full-length house gowns, a fact which brings to mind the one time popularity of the princess wrapper. A creamy white challis scattered with pink roses, is cut on princess lines, the skirt of the jacket coming almost to the knees. There is a prettily shaped broad collar of the challis, lined with white silk, trimmed with a broad edge of Torchon lace, and inset with insertion to match. The fastening is made straight up the front, with hooks and eyes beneath the front pleat, on which are set white silk-covered buttons. The sleeve is of full length, bishop pattern, and gathered into a lace trimmed band. It might be well to note that the jacket is made over a fully boned and fitted lining.

too active in the parish work to suit the rector and his daughters.

The curate tried to establish a parish house, and it was over this that the first open rupture came. The rector opposed his ideas. During a stormy interview between the rector and the curate the Misses Crary say that Mr. Williams became so demonstrative that they ran into the rector's study to find him in a fainting condition.

Dr. Tutill, the Crary family physician bundled the rector off to Atlantic City and the curate went to Chicago. Mr. Williams returned 10 days ago to find that the rector's daughters had locked him out of the church. He has told the young women that Dr. Crary's gray hairs will not save him from a suit.

NOT ENOUGH GIRLS COME.

Most of the Women Arriving are Already Married.

"Out of nearly 11,000 immigrants who have come under our attention since the first of this year, not ten per cent. of them have been women and girls," said an officer of the Ontario Immigration Office at Toronto.

"I think I would be safe in saying that they did not number more than eight per cent.," he continued, "and nearly all the gentler sex were married women at that," he added. This is one of the facts which an hour in the busy immigration office at the Union Station revealed. It goes to show, however, that there is good ground for the statements from the west that men there are unable to find wives. Granting the number of women and girls who have come in were ten per cent. of the total arrivals, that would mean only 1,100 in an army of 14,000 men, or one woman for every 10 men. "This seems rather an amusing situation," concluded the officer, "but it is none the less true."

Speaking of the nationality of new-comers, he remarked that nearly all who had come into Toronto and were sent out through western Ontario were from the British Isles. A large number were from the north of Ireland, many from Scotland, and most from the more crowded centres of England. Most of the women and girls were from London and have come out with their husbands and fathers. Quite a number of the Scotsmen were married men, but they, with few exceptions, left their wives and daughters home, promising to bring them out later.

As a class of people this year's arrivals are said to be a sturdy lot of men, few of whom are past 45 years and most of whom are between 20 and 35 years of age, and they are fairly well-to-do. Some, it was learned, had considerable money.

LOCK HIM OUT.

Rector's Daughters Add to Assistant Pastor's Troubles.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., May 8.—Locked out of his church by the daughters of the rector, the Rev. E. Reginald Williams, curate of the Episcopal church of the Holy Comforter, has sent a written appeal for relief to Bishop Potter. The row bids fair to cause a split in the church.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Fulton Crary, a grandson of the inventor of the steamboat is rector of the church. He has served there for the last 39 years. Last autumn he advertised in a religious publication for a curate and the successful candidate was the Rev. Mr. Williams, who came here from Washington. The curate soon became

SICK HEADACHE

Many varieties of headache exist, these most prevalent being sick or bilious headache, nervous headache, headache from constipation, etc.

Headache is an effect of disease, the cry of the suffering body for relief from some depressing disorder.

Undoubtedly the cause must be removed in order to cure the headache permanently. Wrong action of the stomach, liver or bowels is responsible for nine out of ten cases of headache.

In nearly all forms of headache
