AUTHOR LE CHIEN D'OR

PASSING OF A MAN WHO ENRICHED CANADIAN LITERATURE.

Wm. Kirby, Who Wrote Its First Great Historical Romance—A Loyalist Poem in Twelve Cantos—Also Wrote Three Plays—Romance of Manuscript of His Greatest Work—Praised by Tennyson.

After combatting for over a year the disease which finally proved fatal—a naturally rugged constitution permitting him to bear up surprisingly under the disabilities of old age and sickness—William Kirby, the noted journalist, novelist and poet, passed away peacefully at Niagara-on-the-Lake on Saturday, June 23, in the 89th year of his age.

Whatever Canadian novelists may do to enrich the writing of fiction in Canada for the future, there can be no question that when William Kirby wrote "The Golden Dog," he made for Canadian romantic fiction an honorable and memorable beginning.

It was the great achievement of his life, which was a long, happy, and useful one; and his former fellow-citizens may feel sure that to be remembered as one who gave an early and lasting impulse in the direction of making Canadian literature pure, elevated and enduring, was Kirby's final and most satisfying choice at the end of his life.

Sketch of His Career.

William Kirby was born at Kingston-upon-Hull, on the 13th of October, 1817. His mother was a Miss Watson, of a family who belonged to that place and his father a descendant of an old York-sire family, the Kirbys of Kirby Wiske. Mr. Kirby's poem, "The Bells of Kirby Wiske," first published in 1882, now forms part of his "Canadian Idylls," published six years later. Coming to Canada with his parents in 1832, Mr. Kirby received part of his education in Cincinnati, Ohio, in a school kept by Mr. Alexander Kinnmont, a Scottish educationist. After spending a short time in Montreal, Mr. Kirby removed to Niagara in 1839, and was for twenty years editor and publisher of The Mail newspaper of that place. He was appointed Collector of Customs for Niagara in 1871, a position which he kept until his retirement from public service in 1895.

Poem in Twelve Cantos.

Mr. Kirby's imagination found a singular attraction in the history and tradition connected with the Loyalist settlement in Canada, and it is to this circumstance that we owe his first book, "The U. E.," published at Niagara in 1858, a poem in twelve cantos of Spenserian stanzas, which consists of a series of pictures of the people and the life of Loyalist times.

Its chief merit is to be found in its graphic description and in a certain sweet nobility and purity of character which belonged to everything that Mr. Kirby wrote. The opening stanza represents the artistic level of the whole poem very fairly, and may be taken as indicating the character of all Mr. Kirby's poetical work:

"In lone Canadian woods I raise my song,
Where lingering suns the summer days prolong,
And rugged oaks, their lengthening shadows fling,
Await the sunshine of the silent spring.
While blue Ontario, sparkling through the trees,
With grateful breezes fans the hour of ease."

Selected For Royal Society.

A complete list of Mr. Kirby's prose, as well as poetical writings, may be found in the bibliography of the members of the Royal Society of Canada, which is included in the twelfth volume of their proceedings. He was one of the twenty original members of the English section named at its formation by the Marquis of Lorne.

Besides "The U. E.," "The Golden Dog," and "The Canadian Idylls," a collection of his short poems named above, Mr. Kirby's chief prose publications were, "The Memoirs of the Servos Family," and the "Annals of Niagara."

Mr. Kirby was for several years president of the Niagara Historical Society, and took a deep interest in everything connected with the preservation of historical monuments and scenes. This interest was notably manifested in a letter which he wrote with his own hand while confined in bed during an illness last year, and addressed to Miss Carmichael, president of the Niagara Historical Society.

Also Wrote Three Plays.

Mr. W. D. Lighthall, of Montreal, is authority for saying that Mr. Kirby was the author of three unpublished plays, "Beaumont," "Joseph in Egypt," "The Queen's Own."

But it is as the author of that romantic story, "The Golden Dog," that Mr. Kirby will be long remembered by the rest of the world, as well as in Canada. An account of the origin of the novel is given by the author himself in a letter written to Sir James Le Moine in 1879. "I happened to be in Quebec in 1865, my business being to attend to a bill then pending in Parliament. I bought one of your 'Maple Leaves' and the account you gave of the Chien d'Or took my fancy very much. Suite and I were sitting in the window of the St. Louis Hotel one day, and I spoke to him about the story, and wanted him to write it out and jestingly said that if he would not write a novel on it, I would. Suite did not take the fancy, and I thought no more about it until my return home, when I found the Chien d'Or sticking like a burr to my imagination. And I wrote the story as I got the time."

Manuscript of Book Misplaced.

The manuscript was sent to a London publishing house, and mislaid for several years. Finally it was discovered in the Grand Trunk station at Toronto, and the author, after having remodelled it, gave the story to Mr. John Lovell, of Montreal, by whom it was published in 1877. A French translation appeared seven years later.

The merit of the book was slow in being recognized at first, but it gradually took a strong hold on the attention of those who loved a fine romance, and travelers at Quebec began to ask for the whereabouts of the stone with a rude drawing of a dog gnawing a bone which had been set over the door of the Bourgeois Philibert's door in the Rue Buade. It is now built into the Quebec postoffice which replaces the house of the Bourgeois.

Praised by Tennyson.
Mr. Morgan, in the Canada Men and Women of the Time, says that Lord Tennyson wrote to Mr. Kirby saying that few novels had given him more pleasure, and that he would like to write a poem on the subject.

The lovely and good Amelie De Repentigny; her brother, the unfortunate Le Gaudet; the wicked and beautiful Angeline des Melouses; the Bourgeois' son, Col. Philibert; Caroline de St. Castin, who kept Bigot's heart, although even her fate could not altogether soften it; the infamous La Corriveau; as long as Quebec lasts, these shades, partly historical, partly of the imagination, are likely to be recalled by anyone who loves the beauty of the city and its association with romance; nor as long as they are remembered is there any likelihood that the name of William Kirby as a Canadian novelist will lack the honor which is so rightly his due.

POISONS IN TOBACCO.

Tobacco destroys the taste, smell and digestion.

Tobacco kills mental, moral and physical vigor.

Tobacco paralyzes the mucous membranes and glands.

Tobacco's most dangerous poison, nicotine, is without antidote.

Tobacco contains prussic acid, ammonia, carbonic oxide and nicotine.

Tobacco contains stronger poisons than opium, alcohol, absinth or chloral.

A single leaf of tobacco or a single cigar contains enough of this poison to kill a man if applied properly.

Nicotine is the most deadly poison known to the pharmacopoeia. A single drop or a grain will kill a large animal.

Nicotine resembles prussic acid in appearance, effects and activity. Nicotine's victims die in violent convulsions.

No Answer Handy.

This is only worth the telling, writes a correspondent, because it contains a retort which, though a triumph of inconsequence, seems to me quite unanswerable. I happened to be reading some obvious newspaper proofs in a train when the good natured man next to me, with the intention no doubt of making himself agreeable, asked, "Ah, are you connected with the press?" I intimated briefly and perhaps not over-courteously that it was none of his business. He persisted that it was a quite civil inquiry, which I met with the remark that I had not asked him whether he was a clerk or a shop assistant. As he was obviously neither, this nettled him. "If I knew," he said, "what newspaper you belong to I would never buy it again."—London Chronicle.

Buffalo Calves.
Buffalo calves, as a rule, are born in April and May. They are active, vigorous little creatures, mild eyed as domestic calves, but possessing much greater strength and endurance. In a few seconds after birth they can get on their feet, and in twenty minutes they are fit to fight for their lives. Usually it is unnecessary for them to defend themselves at this tender age, as a buffalo cow is quite capable of attending to any business which may arise in connection with the defense of her precious baby.

Pleasant Thoughts.

"Make yourselves nests of pleasant thoughts," counsels Ruskin. Bright fancies, satisfied memories, noble histories, faithful sayings, treasure houses of restful and precious thoughts which care cannot disturb or pain make gloomy or poverty take away from us—houses built without hands for our souls to live in—these things are not for earth alone; they are a part of the treasure that may be sent over.

Artful.

Young Mr. Fitts—What are you smiling at, dear? Mrs. Fitts—I was just thinking how you used to sit and hold my hand for an hour at a time before we were married. How silly you were! Mr. Fitts—I wasn't silly at all. I held your hand to keep you away from the piano.

The Regular Count.

The heart of a man who has lived to be seventy has beaten 260,000,000 times—not counting the times when he got scared and it worked overtime.—Somerville Journal.
