"Perfectly," Barbara answered in a still voice. "As your friend I shall try to be civil to him."

The colonel was not satisfied with so cold blooded an acquiescence, but he wisely retired from the field. He left the girl silent and crushed, but with a gleam in her eyes that was not altogether to be concealed. The story had touched her more deeply than she would willingly confess. It was something to know that Monty Brewster could do a thing like that and would do it for her. The exultant smile which it brought to her lips could only be made to disappear by reminding herself sharply of his recent arrogance. Her anger, she found, was a plant which needed careful cultivation.

It was in a somewhat chastened mood that she started a few days later for a dinner at the DeMilles'. As she entered in her sweeping golden gown the sight of Monty Brewster at the other end of the room gave her a flutter at the heart, but it was an agitation that was very carefully concealed. Brewster was certainly unconscious of it. To him the position of guest was like a disguise, and he was pleased at the prospect of letting himself go under the mask without responsibility. But it took on a different color when the butler handed him a card which signified that he was to take Miss Drew in to dinner. Hastily seeking out the hostess, he endeavored to convey to her the impossibility of the situation.

"I hope you won't misunderstand me," he said. "But it is too late to change my place at the table."

"It isn't conventional, I know, Monty. Society's chief aim is to separate engaged couples at dinner," said Mrs. Dan, with a laugh. "It would be positively compromising if a man and his wife sat together."

Dinner was announced before Monty could utter another word, and as she led him over to Barbara she said: "Behold a generous hostess who gives up the best man in the crowd so that he and some one else may have a happy time. I leave it to you, Barbara, if that isn't the test of friendship."

For a moment the two riveted their eyes on the floor; then the humor of the situation came to Monty.

"I did not know that we were supposed to do Gibson tableaux tonight," he said dryly as he proffered his arm.

"I don't understand," And Barbara's curiosity overcame her determination not to speak.

"Don't you remember the picture of the man who was called upon to take his late fiancée out to dinner?"

The awful silence with which this remark was received put an end to further efforts at humor.

The dinner was probably the most painful experience in their lives. Barbara had come to it softened and ready to meet him halfway. The right kind of humility in Monty would have found her plastic. But she had very definite and rigid ideas of his duty in the premises, and Monty was too simple minded to seem to suffer and much too flippant to understand. It was plain to each that the other did not expect to talk, but they both realized that they owed a duty to appearances and to their hostess. Through two courses at least there was dead silence between them. It seemed as though every eye in the room were on them and every mind were speculating. At last in sheer desperation Barbara turned to him with the first smile he had seen on her face in days. There was no smile in her eyes, however, and Monty understood.

"We might at least give out the impression that we are friends," she said

"More easily said than done," he responded gloomily.

"They are all looking at us and wondering."

"I don't blame them."

"We owe something to Mrs. Dan, I think."

"I know."

Barbara uttered some inanity whenever she caught any one looking in their direction, but Brewster seemed not to hear. At length he cut short some remark of hers about the weather.

"What nonsense this is, Barbara," he said. "With any one else I would chuck the whole game, but with you it is different. I don't know what I have done, but I am sorry. I hope you'll forgive me."

"Your assurance is amusing, to say the least."

"But I am sure—I know this quarrel is something we'll laugh over. You keep forgetting that we are going to be married some day."

A new light came into Barbara's eyes. "You forget that my consent may be necessary," she said.

"You will be perfectly willing when the time comes. I am still in the fight and eventually you will come to my way of thinking."

"Oh! I see it now," said Barbara, and her blood was up. "You mean to force me to it. What you did for father?"

Brewster glowered at her, thinking that he had misunderstood. "What do you mean?" he said.

"He has told me all about that wretched bank business. But poor

"If it had not been for him we might have been ruined."

father thought you quite disinterested. He did not see the little game behind your melodrama. He would have torn up your check on the instant if he had suspected you were trying to buy his daughter."

"Does your father believe that?" asked Brewster.

"No, but I see it all now. His persistence and yours—you were not slow to grasp the opportunity he offered."

"Stop, Miss Drew," Monty commanded. His voice had changed, and she had never before seen that look in his eyes. "You need have no fear that I will trouble you again."

CHAPTER XV.

A TYPOGRAPHICAL error in one of the papers caused no end of amusement to every one except Monty and Miss Drew. The headlines had announced, "Magnificent Ball to Be Given Miss Drew by Her Financier," and the Little Sons of the Rich wondered why Monty did not see the humor of it.

"He has too bad an attack to see anything but the lady," said Harrison one evening when the Sons were gathered for an old time supper party.

"It's always the way," commented the philosophical Bragdon. "When you lose your heart your sense of humor goes too. Engaged couples couldn't do such ridiculous stunts if they had the least particle of it left."

"Well, if Monty Brewster is still in love with Miss Drew he takes a mighty poor way of showing it." Subway Smith's remark fell like a bombshell.

—thought had come to every one.

SEE how easily you can give the courage to utter it. For then Brewster's silence on the subject since the DeMille dinner seemed to have something ominous behind it.

"It's probably only a lovers' quarrel," said Bragdon. But further comment was cut short by the entrance of Mrs. Dan, and they took their place at the table.

(To be Continued.)

Rev. S. Poole, B. A., of Sable River, N. S., has been called by the people of the First Baptist church, Dorchester, N. B., to succeed Rev. B. H. Thomas, who recently resigned to accept the chaplaincy of Dorchester penitentiary.

As a result of the recent theft of liquor from the I. C. R. freight shed at Moncton, three well known employees of that department have been suspended. It is said that the suspended employees were caught in the act of breaking open a case and helping themselves.

The Westmorland County council has voted a reward of $500 for the production of the Creamer children, dead or alive. The council reserves the right to cancel the offer in six months if the mystery remained at time unsolved. The council decided that all cities in the maritime provinces and every detective agency in Canada be informed of the offered reward.

Tuesday afternoon the body of Marcus P. St. John, an importer and manufacturer, agent, who occupied an office in Montreal, was found lying across his desk. By his side was a bottle that had evidently contained prussic acid, and there seems to be little doubt that he committed suicide. He is supposed to have had some connection with stolen furs recaptured at Chatham, Ont.

PROPER MEDICINE FOR THE BLOOD

Drives Away That Tired Feeling; Makes You Feel Brisk.

To every one sure to come that tired, exhausted feeling. When the blood is weak, thin and debilitated, circulation is slow, and in consequence the system is congested with poisons and wastes that should be driven off.

The sensible person acts on the teachings of experience and cleanses his system with a course of Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. No medicine can be more certain to quickly cure. Convenient to take, just one pill at bedtime; safe, because entirely vegetable; unfailing, because proved by thousands that Dr. Hamilton's Pills set you up in a few days.

From Chebogue Pt., N. S., comes the following from Mrs. W. A. Reynolds: "A year ago my health began to fail, I lost appetite, became nervous and sleepless. My weight ran down, I became thin, hollow-cheeked, and had black rings under my eyes. I really felt as if the charm of life had left me and when spring-time arrived I was in the 'Blues.' I read of Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and got five boxes at once.

"Within a month my appetite and color were good. I gained strength and felt like a new woman. New life and vigor returned, and my friends scarcely knew me. A medicine that will do this should be in every home. Good health means much to you. Success and happiness depend upon it. The maintenance and source of health is found in Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers, or by mail from N. C. Polson and Co., Hartford, Conn., U. S. A., and Kingston, Ont.

HE DUG HIS OWN GRAVE.

Then Shot Himself and Fell Into the Hole.

Vancouver, B. C. July 24.—After digging his own grave, Rudolph Krashort committed suicide by shooting himself and his body fell into the excavation, says a report from Dawson just received here. Albert Pauli of Sulphur Creek, while on a trip to the dome of the Moosehide Mountain, found the remains and informed the Northwest Mounted Police. Inspector Woughton and Police Surgeon Thompson went to the spot and viewed the remains as they lay in the hole, which was seven feet long, three wide and two and a half deep. They came to the conclusion that the man had placed himself upon the edge of the excavation and then deliberately shot himself behind the right ear. Death must have been instantaneous, they say.

DEFAULTER RETURNED.

Montreal, July 25.—David Hobbs, the defaulting Canadian Pacific customs agent, was brought back from New York yesterday, where he was arrested some time ago, and pleaded not guilty to the charge when arraigned in the police court this morning. His case went over for a hearing at a later date.

Mrs. James Lipsett of Nashwaak spent a day in this place with Mrs. P. Woodworth.

Amos Jordan's hand is getting better, which he cut in a saw mill. J. T. McBean passed through this place recently.

James Davis was in this place buying beef cattle. Gus Craig is somewhat better. She is being attended by Dr. Moore of Stanley.

Alfred Craig has returned to McAdam to his work, where he is employed farming on the C. P. R. John Waltman spent Saturday in the city.

Richard Evans is wearing a very pleasant smile. A stranger has arrived at their home. It's a girl.

The children are getting better of the whooping cough, which some of them have had quite badly. Prof. Russell is quite busy giving music lessons in this place.
