EVIDENCE OF CORDIAL RELATIONS.

Hon. Solicitor General Lemieux Tells of the Great Sympathy Shown at Mr. Prefontaine's Death.

Montreal, Jan. 26.—Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux, Solicitor General, who arrived here last evening, after having accompanied the remains of his colleague, Hon. Raymond Prefontaine, from Paris until they were given over to the Dominion and civil authorities for the final obsequies, related in an interview the principal incidents of the long journey.

The Solicitor-General is suffering from the fatigue of his trip and the touching and pathetic circumstances of his colleague's death have evidently made a deep impression on his mind. He speaks in the most appreciative terms of sympathy that had been felt and expressed on the other side of the Atlantic at Canada's great loss. Such unity of sympathy and depth of sentiment he regarded not only as a tribute to Canada of a magnificent kind, but the most tangible evidence of the cordial relations now subsisting between the United Kingdom and France. The late Minister's efforts for the establishment of the naval reserve and the commanding personality of the Prime Minister of Canada contributed to the drawing forth of the warm tributes of regard that were conspicuous both in France and England.

Mr. Lemieux gave at some length the details of the late Minister's sudden demise. It was while watching the procession of the unemployed in London that Mr. Prefontaine first complained of the heart trouble that proved fatal as soon afterwards during his visit to the French capital.

At the close of his speech at the Paris Chambre de Commerce the Minister of Marine and Fisheries said he felt as if a fainting fit was upon him when he rose from his seat. It was not emotion due to the impressive surroundings and association for Mr. Prefontaine remarked that he had passed such ordeals often; but said he: "I never felt like this."

THE TRIP TO DUNKIRK.

The trip to Dunkirk was really a more arduous journey than the Minister ought to have undertaken. He was not in a condition for work, but his energy was as great as ever.

The Northern Railway of France and the people of Dunkirk were most anxious that that port should become a rival of Havre, and it was to inquire into the feasibility of one of their projects in the establishment of a line of steamers with the St. Lawrence that Mr. Prefontaine went there. They did not ask for any aid from the Canadian Government, but they wanted to put the facts before the Minister in the hope that he might awaken the interest and enlist the support of some of the Canadian steamship companies in the project.

On his return and when he experienced the first shock at his hotel the Minister did not regard his condition as serious. "I am not sick, I have never been sick in my life," he told Dr. Brault, the famous physician who was called in.

But Dr. Brault had misgivings, although he evidently did not realize the end was so near. He asked if Madame Prefontaine was in France and when told that she could reach Paris in ten or twelve days, he said to me, "you had better wire for her to come. We will treat the Minister and I think he will be all right, but," said he, "in such cases the unexpected happens very often."

PATHETIC DETAILS.

"On that ill-fated Christmas Day," said Mr. Lemieux, with evident emotion, "Mr. Prefontaine's mind seemed to revert to Canada. He talked about the scenes in St. James street and mentioned the names of many of his friends and especially alluded to his family. He was particularly delighted to receive a letter from his son Adrien on that day. He read it twice and towards evening when Mr. Clement, his secretary, entered the sick room, the Minister, with tears in his eyes, was reading the letter a third time, as if he had some presentiment that he would not see his family again."

"I need not recapitulate details that are already well known," observed the Solicitor General, "but I would like to mention the religious ceremony at La Madeleine and the homage paid by the French Government. I had witnessed the funeral of General Saurier some time before, but it did not compare with that of Raymond Prefontaine. The chief actors of the entente cordiale, Mr. Lemieux said, seemed to be waiting for something to take place that would show the whole world the true sincerity of the feeling of friendship between England and France and the Canadian minister's death seemed to seal the compact."

One of the most touching incidents at the Madeleine was the arrival of a deputation of poor workmen, who advanced to the casket and deposited their floral offering in honor of the man whom they had learned to love and for what reason? Because, three years ago, while Mayor of Montreal, Hon. Mr. Prefontaine, during his sojourn in Paris, had in the goodness of his heart subscribed 500 francs to aid what is known as la soupe populaire, or soup kitchen, where hundreds of the poor, too proud to beg, come and partake of their morning meal.

ASTONISHING MILITARY DISPLAY.

"The military spectacle was of such an impressive character that some astonished Parisians were heard to exclaim, 'Has war been declared?' I was so busy communicating with London, Montreal and Ottawa that I had little time to notify the press of the French capital. And a military display of such a character was so unusual that war was at once thought of as the probable explanation of it."

Mr. Lemieux related the incident of having met an old man as he was leaving the church who shook him by the hand and declared that he had voted for Mr. Prefontaine in the county of Chambly. The old man declared that he had voted for him three times at Longueuil, but he little thought his remains would have been given so much honor in France. "But he deserved it all," was the old man's reflection.

Mr. Lemieux went on to remark that at Cherbourg the French Republic did all that any nation could to honor the representative of a friendly country. "I never expected," said he, "to see anything so imposing again as when all that was great in official France handed over the remains to the mighty naval power of England. The Dominion lay two miles away in the roadstead, and the salute of her 800 men was a sight to behold. No praise can be too great for the British ambassador in Paris and the British Admiralty. With what delicate attention did the captain and officers of the Dominion receive the minister's remains, and what great respect did they show those who accompanied them, as well as to their religious faith."

Swaggers (gently but firmly)—Sorry, old chap! Money's very tight, just now.

Touchstone—Eh? Yes, but perhaps you've some loose cash about you? What?

BOY OF 14 SHOT SISTER.

Cornelius Hogan's Young Daughter Victim of Unintended Shooting.

New York, Jan. 29.—Kate Hogan, the 16-year-old daughter of Cornelius Hogan, a hotel man at Harway avenue and Bay Forty-third street, Gravesend Beach, was shot this morning at her home, by her brother Raymond, 14 years old. The injured girl was hurried off to the Norwegian Hospital and died there at 11.50 a. m. yesterday. The father of the young girl is prostrated and the boy who did the shooting was on the verge of convulsions this morning.

The shooting was purely accidental. Miss Hogan has been keeping house for her father for a week. Her mother is seriously ill in St. Peter's Hospital, having been removed to that place a week ago yesterday. The young girl was up early yesterday morning and while she was herself preparing breakfast for her brother and father, the latter went into the hotel part of the building to attend to some minor detail of the business.

He saw Raymond, followed him in, and according to the information gathered by Detectives Mulvey and Reilly of the Bath Beach station, went to a drawer in the cafe, where he knew an old unloaded revolver had been kept for more than a year. According to Mr. Hogan, the old revolver had been loaded by him last night. He said he had a handsome pearl handled revolver in the cafe and it was fully loaded. Last night he took out all the cartridges and gave the revolver to his friend, Richard Hayman. The shells were then placed in the old .32 caliber, English bulldog that lay in the drawer. The revolver is a six-shooter, but only four cartridges were put in it.

The police have as yet been unable to get a statement from the boy as to how the shooting occurred, but it is believed that when the lad picked up the revolver as his sister entered the room to call her father for breakfast he snapped the trigger on an empty chamber. When he pulled the trigger again the hammer landed on a shell, and the weapon exploded. The ball struck the young woman in the left side of the head, immediately above the ear, and made an ugly wound.

Her father heard the shot as he passed through into the kitchen he turned just in time to see the girl fall to the floor. She uttered no sound and the father thought she was dead. It was at least twenty minutes before he could locate a physician by telephone. He finally got an ambulance from the Norwegian Hospital and the surgeon observed at once that the wound was an extremely dangerous one.

After the young woman had been removed to the hospital the boy was taken across the street to the home of Mrs. Zimmerman and Mr. Hogan then notified the police. The boy was later taken before Magistrate Voorhees in Coney Island court where he was formally arraigned on a charge of felonious assault. Magistrate Voorhees paroled him in the custody of his father and both returned to their home in a prostrated condition.

Miss Hogan was exceedingly popular with the young women in the vicinity of her home and was interested in church work at the Church of Our Lady of Solace. Her father is a member of the Catholic Club of the church and is well known in political circles throughout the Seventh Assembly District.

BLOOMFIELD RIDGE.

Jan. 29.—Mr. Elijah Spencer is ill at present with a lame back. Mr. Spencer had to leave the woods and come home. A lame back is a very bad complaint.

Mrs. James A. Pond has broken the record for making mats this year as she has four of the handsomest mats that any one would see in a day's travel made from a western pattern.

Ex-Councillor John Hinchey was calling on his daughter, Mrs. John Spencer on Thursday, Jan. 25. The old blind watch peddler, Mr. Delaney, passed through here on Thursday.

James Cameron, teamster from Bartholomew's, passed through here on Thursday.

Among the visitors here were Eliza Haines, Durham; Charles Pond, Robert MacWing and Charles Gallen of Durham.

Mr. H. R. Pond has pushed his operations in the woods on the Taxicab river for the Miramichi Lumber Co. Mr. Pond is helping to build the train house two miles from the hill between Taxicab river and Main Southwest Miramichi.

Rev. and Mrs. Barnes, the Baptist preacher, passed through here on Friday en route for Hainesville, and are calling on Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Campbell.

Our esteemed teacher, Miss Jessie MacDonald MacKnight, was the guest of Mrs. Clarence E. Boies Jan. 25th. H. H. Gunter and J. Rundle, the head manager of the Miramichi Lumber Company, drove to the camps on Friday with their fancy drivers and returned on Sunday.

Our popular cook, Mr. Arthur W. Green, has been cooking for Ross Bros., returned home on Wednesday. Mr. Green has accepted a position with the Miramichi Lumber Company to cook in one of their camps. Mr. Saunders Price is boss of the Rorks. Mr. Green has cooked for a number of years out west. He is an up-to-date cook and a regular good fellow in all his business and is well liked by all.

Coasting seems to be the order of the evening at present. Nearly all our young people are enjoying themselves every evening coasting on Devil's Hill. The two men who are in charge of the coasting parties are Fordie Spencer and Percy J. Boies. Forde met with a slight accident the other evening while coasting.

Master John Hayes Spencer met with a serious accident on Friday about noon. While out in the barn playing he had a pole across the beams which gave way and he came headlong to the floor. He broke a bone in his wrist. He is a son of Elijah Spencer.

Rev. A. B. Murray, of Stanley, passed through here one day last week. On his way through he called at the residence of Mrs. James P. Boies and had prayers. He read from Chron. 8 chapter and 4 verse. Mrs. Boies is very low and no hope for her recovery is entertained. Heart trouble is the cause. Dr. Irvin of Stanley was called once to see her.

Miss Mary M. Pond entertained a number of her friends on Tuesday evening, Jan. 23rd. Miss Gertrude M. Green presided at the organ. The evening was spent with music and games. The party broke up about midnight all wishing there would be another good time soon.

Dr. S. King of Boiestown, had a call to this place on Saturday morning.

Miss Laura M. Smith, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Newton I. Smith, returned to Boiestown this morning with the mail driver.

Miss Annie Estelle Boies is visiting her friend, Miss Aggie M. MacLellan.
