"I'll begin by asking what you think a reasonable fee for an attorney in a case of this kind. I hope you will act for me."

"You don't want to spend it all in a lump, do you?" asked Mr. Grant, smiling. "We can hardly act as counsel for both you and Mr. Jones."

"But I must have a lawyer, and the will limits the number of my co-defendants. What am I to do?"

"We will consult Mr. Jones in regard to the question. It is not regular, you see, but I apprehend no legal difficulties. We cannot accept fees from both sides, however," said Mr. Grant.

"But I want attorneys who are willing to help me. It won't be a help if you decline to accept my money."

"We'll resort to arbitration," laughed Ripley.

Before night Montgomery Brewster began a career that would have startled the world had the facts been known. With true loyalty to the Little Sons of the Rich, he asked his friends to dinner and opened their eyes.

"Champagne!" cried Harrison as they were seated at table. "I can't remember the last time I had champagne."

"Naturally," laughed Subway Smith. "You could not remember anything after that."

As the dinner progressed Brewster explained that he intended to double his fortune within a year. "I'm going to have some fun, too," he said, "and you boys are to help me."

Nopper Harrison was employed as "superintendent of affairs." Elton Gardner as financial secretary, Joe Bragdon as private secretary, Subway Smith as counsel, and there were places in view for the other members.

"I want the smartest apartment you can find, Nopper," he commanded. "Don't stop at expense. Have Pettigill redecorate it from top to bottom. Get the best servants you can find. I'm going to live, Nopper, and hang the consequences."

CHAPTER VI.

FORTNIGHT later Montgomery Brewster had a new home. In strict obedience to his chief's command, Nopper Harrison had leased until the September apartments of one of the most expensive buildings in New York city.

The rental was $25,000, and the shrewd financial representative had saved $1,000 for his employer by paying the sum in advance. But when he reported this bit of economy to Mr. Brewster he was surprised that it brought forth a frown. "I never saw a man who had less sense about money," muttered Nopper to himself.

"Why, he spends it like a Chicago millionaire trying to get into New York society. If it were not for the rest of us he'd be a pauper in six months."

Paul Pettigill, to his own intense surprise and, it must be said, consternation, was engaged to redecorate certain rooms according to a plan suggested by the tenant. The rising young artist in a great hurry of excitement agreed to do the work for $500 and then blushed like a schoolboy when he was informed by the practical Brewster that the paints and material for one room alone would cost twice as much.

"Petty, you have no more idea of business than a goat," criticised Montgomery. And Paul lowered his head in humble confession. "That man who calculates your studio could figure on a piece of work with more intelligence than you reveal. I'll pay $2,500. It's only a fair price, and I can't afford anything cheap in this price."

"At this rate you won't be able to afford anything," said Pettigill to himself.

And so it was that Pettigill and a corps of decorators soon turned the rooms into a confusion of scaffolding and paint buckets, out of which in the end emerged something very distinguished. No one had ever thought Pettigill deficient in ideas, and this was his opportunity. The only drawback was the time limit which Brewster so remorselessly fixed. Without that he felt that he could have done something splendid in the way of decorative panels—something that would make even the glory of Puvion de Chavannes turn pallid. With it he was obliged to curb his turbulent ideas, and he decided that a rich simplicity was the proper note. The result was gorgeous, but not too gorgeous—it had depth and distinction.

Elated and eager, he assisted Brewster in selecting furniture and hangings for each room, but he did not know that his employer was making conditional purchases of everything. Mr. Brewster had agreements with all the dealers to the effect that they were to buy everything back at a fair price if he desired to give up his establishment within a year. He adhered to this rule in all cases that called for the purchase outright of substantial necessities. The bump of conscientiousness in Montgomery Brewster's head was growing to abnormal proportions.

In retaining his rooms at Mrs. Gray's he gave the flimsy but pathetic excuse that he wanted a place in which he might live quietly. When Mrs. Gray protested against this useless bit of extravagance his grief was so obviously genuine that her heart was touched, and there was a deep, fervent joy in her soul. She loved this fair faced boy, and tears of happiness came to her eyes when she was given this new proof of his loyalty and devotion. His room was apt for him just as if he had expected to occupy them every day and every night, notwithstanding the luxurious apartments he was to maintain elsewhere. The Oliver Optic books still lay in the attic, all tattered and torn, but to Margaret the embodiment of prospective riches, promises of sweet hours to come. She knew Monty well enough to feel that he would not forget the dark little attic of old for all the splendors that might come with the new dispensation.

There was no little surprise when he sent out invitations for a large dinner. His grandfather had been dead less than a month, and society was somewhat scandalized by the plain symptoms of disrespect he was showing. No one had expected him to observe a prolonged season of mourning, but that he should disregard the formalities completely was rather shocking. Some of the older people, who had not long to live and who had heirs apparent, openly denounced his heartlessness. It was not very gratifying to think of what might be in store for them if all memories were as short as Brewster's. Old Mrs. Ketchell changed her will, and two nephews were cut off entirely. A very modest and impetuous grandson of Joseph Garity also was to sustain a severe change of fortune in the near future if the cards should correctly. Judge Van Woort, who was not expected to live through the night, got better immediately after hearing some one in the sickroom whisper that Montgomery Brewster was to give a big dinner. Naturally the heirs-to-be condemned young Brewster in no uncertain terms.

Nevertheless the dinner to be given by the grandson of old Edwin Peter Brewster was the talk of the town, and not one of the sixty invited guests could have been persuaded to miss it. Reports as to its magnificence were abroad long before the night set for the dinner. One of them had it that it was to cost $3,000 a plate. From that figure the legendary price receded to a mark as low as $500. Montgomery would have been only too glad to pay $3,000 or more, but some mysterious force conveyed to his mind a perfect portrait of Sweeney Jones in the act of putting down a large black mark against him, and he forbore.

"I wish I knew whether I had to abide by the New York or the Montana standard of extravagance," Brewster said to himself. "I wonder if he ever sees the New York papers."

Late each night the last of the grand old Brewster family went to his bedroom, where after dismissing his man, he settled down at his desk, with a pencil and a pad of paper. Lighting the candles, which were more easily managed, he found, than lamps and much more costly, he thoughtfully and religiously calculated his expenses for the day. Nopper Harrison and Elton Gardner had the receipts for all money spent, and Joe Bragdon was keeping an official record, but the "chief," as they called him, could not go to sleep until he was satisfied in his own mind that he was keeping up the average. For the first two weeks it had been easy—in fact, he seemed to have quite a comfortable lead in the race. He had spent almost $100,000 in the fortnight, but he realized that the greater part of it had gone into the yearly and not the daily expense account. He kept a "profit and loss" entry in his little private ledger, but it was not like any other account of the kind in the world. What the ordinary merchant would have charged to "loss" he jotted down on the "profit" side, and he was continually looking for opportunities to swell the total.

Rawles, who had been his grandfather's butler since the day after he landed in New York, came over to the grandson's establishment, greatly to the wrath and confusion of the latter's valet, Emmeline. The chef came from Paris, and his name was Dettuit. Ellis, the footman, also found a much better berth with Monty than he had had in the house on the avenue. Aunt Emmeline never forgave her nephew for these base and disturbing acts of treachery, as she called them.

One of Monty's most extraordinary financial feats grew out of the purchase of a $14,000 automobile. He blandly admitted to Nopper Harrison and the two secretaries that he intended to use it to practice with only, and that as soon as he learned how to run an "auto" as it should be run he expected to buy a good, sensible, durable machine for $7,000.

His staff officers frequently put their heads together to devise ways and means of curbing Monty's reckless extravagance. They were worried.

"He's like a sailor in port," protested Harrison. "Money is no object if he wants a thing, and—hang it—he seems to want everything he sees."

"It won't last long," Gardner said reassuringly. "Like his namesake, Monte-Christo, the world is his oyster, and he wants to eat it."

RECTOR DIBBLEE'S REPORT.

Churches in Sunbury Parishes Enjoying Prosperity.

Following is a summary of Rev. H. E. Dibblee's report on the parishes of Burton, Gladstone, Lincoln, Maugeville and Blissville, presented to the synod on Tuesday:

Owing to the assistance of Mr. Carson, lay reader, the scope of the work became enlarged and now embraces five parishes.

The rectory at Burton was painted and the W. A. A. now propose placing a furnace in St. John's church. Burton has already pledged in excess of its apportionment for missions—$67.25 set apart for this purpose.

In this connection reference was made to Canon Richardson's strong appeal for missions.

Blissville and Gladstone.—Regular services throughout the year by the aid of Lay Reader Mr. Carson.

Eighteen candidates were confirmed and another class for this autumn. There are three Sunday schools now working in this mission.

Financially the year was one of marked progress. $150 was paid on the indebtedness of the church. $140 on Dio. Mission Assessment. $200 for new church bells and a considerable sum towards the lay reader's salary.

Mr. Dibblee referred feelingly to the deep attachment with which the people of this mission regard the Bishop who has always been so generously helpful in their work.

Maugeville.—$150 expended on the foundation of the church; $200 on painting the church and upwards of $30 contributed towards the mission funds.

A guild of women workers was formed and is doing good work.

"Algernon is interesting," said the stockbroker's daughter.

"What does he talk about?" inquired the father.

"He's ever so well posted in Shakespearean quotations."

"Young woman," said the financier sternly, "don't let him deceive you. Don't let him make sport of your ignorance. There isn't any such stock on the market. I ought to know for I've been on the exchange long enough."

Orders of the Swan. There are two Orders of the Swan—one in Flanders and the other a private order in Prussia.

A Four Years' Drought. In 954 a drought began in Europe lasting four years. The summers were intensely hot, and the famine prevailed everywhere. Three million died of hunger.

"Old Dog Tray." "Old Dog Tray" was in its time one of Foster's most popular songs, 120,000 copies being sold in eighteen months. It was written in the back room of a combined grocery and grocery in New York city and was immediately sold by the author to a firm of publishers that made a fortune from its sale.

Spain's Hunchbacks. Spain has more hunchbacks than any other country. In some of the villages of the Sierra Modena 7 per cent of the people are deformed in this way.

Good Metal Polish. A good metal polish may be made as follows: Take half a pound of powdered rottenstone, one pound of soft soap and one quart of soft water. Boil all together for half an hour and then set in this for use. Apply with a flannel and polish with soft rags.

Domestic Service in Brazil. In Brazil servants will not sleep in the house in which they work, as a rule, but expect to leave at 7 at night and not return till 7 or 8 the next day. As a result some houses have a pane of glass in one of the windows taken out, through which the baker and the milkman pass their goods on their early morning rounds without troubling a member of the family to get up and open the door.

England's Oldest Drug Store. The oldest chemist's shop in England is said to be at Knaresborough, a quaint old Yorkshire town. The earliest date to which it can be traced back is 1720, but how much older than that it may be cannot be ascertained.

London's Lady Mayoress. The lady mayoress of London can appoint maids of honor and a train-bearer, and she has her own private state carriage and four. At the lord mayor's procession if she comes direct from her country residence a guard of honor is sent to meet her and to escort her to join in the pageant.

A Vatican Manuscript. In the Vatican Library there is a treatise on dragons, a manuscript in a single roll 300 feet long and a foot wide, the material of which is said to be the tanned intestine of a great dragon.

WOMEN WITH WEAKNESS.

From all weakness from which girls and women suffer, no sure remedy exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. They maintain that bracing health every woman so earnestly desires; they purify the blood, and bring strength that lasts till old age.

ficial than Dr. Hamilton's Pills. "No medicine could be more benevolent," writes Mrs. Mary E. Ayton of Victoria. "I have been strengthened by my digestion is better, I have improved in color and feel considerably better since using Dr. Hamilton's Pills.
