NEW HOME FOR THE GLOBE.

Will Build in the Very Heart of Toronto.

Toronto Globe.—The Globe Printing Company purchased yesterday from Senator J. K. Kerr, K. C., the property on the north side of Queen street east, adjacent to the Bank of Montreal property, which occupies the northeast corner of Queen and Yonge streets, and extends east on Queen street for 104 feet. The land and buildings bought by The Globe extend easterly from the boundary of the Bank of Montreal 103 feet, with a depth of 127 feet, and comprise Nos. 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 Queen street east. The purchase price was $130,000, and Senator Kerr after the deal was closed stated that since negotiations with The Globe began he had been offered an advance upon the figure agreed upon. The buildings on the site at the present time are not of a substantial sort, with the exception of that immediately adjoining the Bank of Montreal, and it is the intention of The Globe Printing Company to proceed at an early date with the erection of a modern office building and publishing house.

The Globe's new home will be in the very heart of Toronto, in the centre where for a generation at least people will most congregated. One need not be the oldest inhabitant to remember the time when the corner of Queen and Yonge was altogether secondary to the corner of King and Yonge. The location of the City Hall on Queen street, the upbuilding of the great departmental stores of the Eaton and Simpson Companies around the corners of Queen and Yonge and the concentration of business resulting therefrom, have made a marvellous change within the last ten or fifteen years, and the corner of Queen and Yonge is now undoubtedly the heart of Toronto. That is why the Street Railway Company has been putting up such a fight for loops around the corners of Queen, Victoria and Richmond streets. The new Globe office will be in keeping with the requirements of Canada's national newspaper in design and appointment. There is every indication that most of the old buildings in the immediate vicinity will be swept away before long. The bank of Montreal has been credited with the intention of building a fine structure on the corner as headquarters for its Ontario business, but Mr. Angus Kirkland, the manager, said last night that the bank's plans had not been matured. The crown life is putting up a six-story office building on the corner of Queen and Victoria, and there is talk of a new theatre to be built on the corner of Victoria and Richmond streets.

The present Globe building, situated on Yonge, Melinda and Jordan streets, is built upon land leased from the Cawthra estate. The unexpired term of the lease is seven years. Several financial institutions, including a bank, have been negotiating informally for the purchase of The Globe building, which is in the "Wall street" quarter of the city. In the area between Yonge and Bay on King Melinda, Jordan and Wellington two-thirds of the city's great financial institutions are concentrated, and the district is becoming more and more the home of banking and broking. It was felt that The Globe's place was farther uptown among the people, and the demand for accommodation by new institutions invading the financial quarter makes removal easy.

TROUGH TO THE COAST.

Transcontinental Line Will Surely Be Built.

Montreal, April 1.—Mr. Charles M. Hays, General Manager of the Grand Trunk, and President of the Grand Trunk Pacific, who returned to-day from England, evidently well satisfied with the result of his trip, made an absolute statement to The Globe correspondent, confirming what the General Manager, Mr. Frank W. Morse, had already said in contradiction of the reported abandonment of all intention to extend the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway west of Edmonton.

"It is only a question of which is the best pass through the mountains," said Mr. Hays, "and as soon as we have decided that, tenders will be called for the work of construction. Reports to the contrary were merely political attacks."

Mr. Hays added that all money necessary to carry on work was easily forthcoming. His trip to London was to arrange with the directors of the G. T. R. about the details of the issue of five million dollars' worth of G. T. R. 4 per cent guaranteed bonds, all of which had been oversubscribed in a remarkably liberal manner. The money is to be used largely in the construction of a new union station at Toronto and increased facilities connected therewith. The issue of these bonds convinced Mr. Hays that British capital was ready for investment in legitimate Canadian enterprises, but there was always a chance that some persons might take advantage of the circumstances and leave a bad impression. Fear of burdensome taxation was perhaps the greatest barrier against the investment of British and foreign capital in this country.

Mr. Hays announced that there had been lots bought recently near Trafalgar square, London, and the intention was to build imposing offices there. The height of the building would be limited only by civic regulations.

NOT SLEEPING WELL.

Without sleep there can be no bodily or mental vigor, consequently sleeplessness is a dangerous condition. Nothing so surely restores sleep as Ferrozene; it's harmless—just a nourishing, strengthening tonic. Ferrozene vitalizes every part of the body, makes the nerves hardy, completely rebuilds the system. The cause of sleeplessness is removed—you can work, eat, sleep—feel like new after using Ferrozene. CROWD CHEERED WOMAN'S ACQUITTAL.

Remarkable Scenes at Three Rivers at Conclusion of Mrs. Slater's Trial.

Three Rivers, Que., April 2.—Rarely has the old city at the mouth of the St. Maurice witnessed such scenes as those which attended the acquittal of Mrs. Slater on Saturday night. The whole population seemed to be out, and the little woman and her father, as well as the lawyers who had defended her, were cheered to the echo all along the way from the court house to the hotel, where she joined her mother.

All day her fate had been hanging in the balance. Mr. Alphonse Coe had opened the proceedings in the forenoon with the French address to jury, and in eloquent language described the life and habits of the woman, reviewed the events of the fatal Sunday on which her husband was killed, and declared that it was impossible that a woman lying ill for two weeks should have planned her husband's death. He then took up the admissions she made to Chief McCaskill and to Constable Beaulieu. He declared that with a woman of her character Chief McCaskill could obtain any admissions he had a mind to place in her mouth. She would say yes to almost anything he suggested. As to Beaulieu, he was a mere seeker after notoriety. He had always taken care to keep the members of his family out of the room when the little woman was supposed to have made the dangerous admissions. He asked the jury to set aside Beaulieu's evidence, and restore the little woman to her babies and her parents.

Mr. R. A. R. Greenshields, K. C., began at 11.40 and finished before noon. Yet in that brief space he covered the whole ground of the real tragedy, touching the points where his client was concerned and throwing aside all the other circumstances. So powerful was his short appeal to the jury to return the little woman to her three babies that not only the jury and spectators, but even the judge on the bench was moved to tears.

Throughout these addresses the mother of the prisoner was in court, and sat with her husband right behind her daughter's life. She wept copiously, but the old man Skene tried hard not to betray the feelings which once in a while struggled to the surface. The prisoner kept her head bowed out of sight, and was in a state of great nervous excitement.

PARENTS WERE WROUGHT UP.

Mr. Philippe Bigue opened at two o'clock with the French address on behalf of the Crown, and for an hour and more detailed the circumstances, pointing out wherein the Crown found that the prisoner had failed in her duty and become the accomplice of Wallace McCraw. Mr. Guerin, K. C., made a mastery of, fort, expressing sympathy with the prisoner, but demanding that justice should be done, regardless of consequences, and that the jury should consider only the evidence. During this charge Mr. and Mrs. Skene weined, and while the father betrayed his feelings only a couple of times the mother wept and the prisoner could be seen only by those at the side of the dock, where it was located that she was in a high state of excitement.

Mr. Justice Cannon charged the jury in both languages. He explained the law on the admissions, and declared that so far as he could see there was no reason for rejecting the admissions made. The reputation of Chief Detective McCaskill was above all reproach, while nothing had been shown in evidence to disprove Beaulieu. Still, it was for the jury to decide whether this woman should be found guilty.

CROWDS SOUGHT ADMISSION.

The jury was sent back to deliberation until eight o'clock. At that hour hundreds were clamoring for admission to the court house, but they were not allowed in. Still, quite a number secured admission, and every seat was taken when the court was called to order and the jury filed in. The entrance by which they came is dark, and as they came into the glare of electric light, anxious faces all over the room tried to read in their faces the fate of the woman who came in right behind them and took her accustomed place in the dock.

Only one juror manifested any sign, and that was merely a smile, yet it reassured the defenders of the prisoner. When the jury took their seats, however, they all looked solemn and despite the efforts of the lawyers, it was impossible to catch their eyes. Again hope fell for a moment. The judge came in and the clerk of the Crown, after calling the names of the jury, put to them the question: "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon your verdict, and if so, who is to speak for you?"

The reply was in the affirmative, and Mr. George Spargo was named as the spokesman of the jury. Then amidst dead silence the voice of the clerk was again heard: "What say you, is the prisoner at the bar guilty in the manner and form set forth in the indictment, or not guilty?"

There was a moment's pause. Men stood up in their places. Then in a strong voice, Mr. Spargo spoke: "Not guilty."

A glad cry broke from the woman in the dock, and she leaped up, her face wreathed in smiles and ran for the opening of the dock. The men in the room, regardless of the solemnity of the court room, cheered and clapped their hands, and for a second even the judge could not stop them. Mr. Justice Cannon rebuked the crowd, saying: "Order; this is absolutely indecent," and Mr. Greenshields joined his voice to that of the court and order was at once restored, while Mr. L. Gordon Glass, her solicitor, made his way to the dock and congratulated the little woman.

Mr. Greenshields moved that the prisoner be discharged, and Mr. Guerin declared that he had no objection. At the same time he recalled that there was a charge of contempt against her, but under the circumstances he did not think it necessary to press that charge at the moment. Mr. Greenshields thanked Mr. Guerin for his consideration, and the judge discharged the prisoner.

EXCITEMENT ON THE STREETS

As soon as the court room was left, the excitement began in earnest again. Crowds pressed forward to press the hands of Mrs. Slater and her lawyers. Coming to the front door Messrs. Comeau and Glass took their client, one on each side, and ran through the crowd to the street, while all around were men, women and children, applauding. Down town, to the Dominion hotel they went quickly, for the crowd was gathering there, and within a few minutes it was impossible to gain an entrance. The mob outside yelled and cheered, and Mr. Comeau had to come to the window and speak to them, expressing on behalf of the woman her appreciation of the sympathy manifested. This was followed by more cheers and cries for Mrs. Slater. The little woman and her mother showed themselves at the window of their room, and the crowd went frantic.

THE WORST KIND.

After Piles have existed for a long time and passed through different stages, the suffering is intense—pain, itching, troubling, tumors form, filled to bursting with black blood. Symptoms indicating other troubles may appear to a thoroughly Pile-sick person.

This is when Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid, the only absolute Pile cure, brings the results that have made its fame.

It will cure the most stubborn case in existence and a bonded guarantee to that effect goes with each package. Hem-Roid is to be had for a $1.00 at the drug store, or from the Wilson-Fyle Company, Limited, Niagara Falls, Ont.

ORANGE LODGE.

Grand Master McLeod Reports Steady
Extension of the Order in N. B.

Woodstock, April 4.—The annual meeting of the Grand Orange Lodge of New Brunswick opened here last evening.

In addition to the address of welcome a number of reports were read. The statement of the grand secretary showed an increase of nearly 500 in the membership of the order and the establishment of several new lodges during the past year.

The proceedings opened at 8 p. m., R. W. G. M. Harry F. McLeod in the chair. The attendance was the largest ever known in the history of the Grand Lodge and among the distinguished visitors was Rev. E. McLean, P. G. M., of P. E. Island.

An address of welcome was presented by the master of Carleton County, which was responded to by the grand master in an eloquent and stirring address.

The grand master referred to the plans made at the last annual meeting, and of the responsibility he had felt on being chosen grand master. He had striven to prove worthy of their trust and hoped that he had been of assistance. They were permitted by Divine Providence to meet again in the 63rd annual session. They must always draw closer to the lofty ideals that make the order great, to open up to men a nobler conception of Canadian citizenship. In the month of June it had been his privilege to attend the annual session of the Grand Lodge of B. N. A., which met at Owen Sound. It had been astounding to listen to reports of the marvellous advances that the order was making.

The Grand Lodge had pronounced strongly against separate schools. He praised Grand Master Sproule's attitude in parliament in this connection.

Reference was also made to the last provincial celebration at Fredericton. He spoke of the loss sustained by the death of Senior Deputy Grand Master W. S. A. Douglas, of Charlotte County.

Four hundred and fifty new members had been added during the year, and four fine new halls had been dedicated. Ten lodges had been incorporated during the year.

He also spoke of the stand the order had taken on separate schools as it affected the new provinces. In conclusion the grand master urged the lodge to live closer together and hold fast to their principles.

A committee was appointed to frame a reply to the grand master's address.

It was announced that owing to the serious illness of Donald Munroe, the mayor of Fredericton, he was unable to be present to officially welcome the grand lodge.

A THIRD TRANSCONTINENTAL RAILWAY.

Hill's Line Completed in Three Years

St. Paul, Minn., April 4.—The report that President James H. Hill of the Great Northern is building through Canada a third transcontinental line, which would enlarge his present of Pacific railways, is confirmed in effect by Vice-President Louis W. Hill.

"The report might be called approximately correct," said Mr. Hill, cautiously. "It contains more facts than are usually found in stories of that sort."

Mr. Hill said: "Our line includes only 800 or 900 miles that are still to be constructed west of Winnipeg. We could complete the line within three years."

RELIGION AND ATHLETICS.

At the St. John Proslavery meeting Tuesday, a discussion arose over the recommendation of a committee that the Christian Endeavor Society and the Guild should pay less attention to literature, science and athletics and give more time to study of the Bible.

Rev. Mr. Ireland strongly urged that such was not the case and that in order to have success in these studies these branches should be taken up.

Rev. Willard McDonald wanted to know what was meant by athletics. A voice from the audience "Golf." Mr. McDonald said that he did not know anything about golf but he wanted to have athletics introduced into his church if there was any benefit to be obtained from having such athletics.

The French Baron Rothschild once had his service as a valet named Alphonse—first class, but an acknowledged "red." This valet obtained permission once a week ago to attend the meetings of his Socialist lodge.

Suddenly the Baron noticed that Alphonse no longer desired his office of night porter, having into the cause was informed that the valet's late Socialist colleagues had worked out a calculation that if all the wealth of France were divided equally per capita each individual would be the possessor of two thousand francs.

MORE DEADLY THAN FAMINE.

Neglected catarrh sooner or later causes consumption which destroys more human beings than famine and war combined. The way "Catarrh-ozone" cures catarrh is very simple. It first kills the germs that cause the irritation; then by soothing away the congestion and inflammation it cures the discharge, hawking and dropping in the throat. "I suffered so continually from nasal catarrh," writes Ernest R. Dakin of Rosemont, "that I scarcely knew what it was to be free from headache and pain over the eyes. Catarrh-ozone relieved me at once and in a few days I was cured. No other remedy cures like 'Catarrh-ozone'—try it for your next cold."

WINNIPEG TO VANCOUVER.

Great Northern's Invasion of the Canadian West.

Montreal, April 4.—The Star publishes what purports to be a semi-official statement of what J. J. Hill purposes to do in the way of railway building in the Canadian Northwest. The statement in part is as follows: "The invasion of Canadian territory by James J. Hill's railway system, concerning which many conjectures and rumors have been rife for some years, has begun in earnest. According to the lines now under construction, routes surveyed and projects under consideration, the Great Northern in the near future will be as important a factor in the British possessions and play as important part in their development as it has in the Northwest south of the international boundary line."

"In a nutshell, the plans of Mr. Hill contemplate the construction of a line from Vancouver to Winnipeg. Part of the route has been decided on, but as yet the course through the Territories of Alberta and Saskatchewan is a matter for future determination. Several surveying parties are now in the field. Active construction work is progressing at several points to make the invasion as quickly as possible. The Great Northern has now about 500 miles of lines under construction, and the plans call for approximately 1,800 miles. There are between 3,000 and 4,000 men at work now. As soon as the weather gets more favorable thousands more will be put to work, so that by summer the present force will be probably be doubled."

A BLOODLESS REVOLUTION.

Oldest of Republics Reasserts Democratic Principles.

New York, April 4.—The Post's London correspondent cables: Mr. William Miller writes to The Morning Post of a bloodless revolution accomplished in the oldest republic in the world. Last Sunday San Marino abolished her oligarchical constitution which had endured practically for six centuries, and re-established her ancient democratic Assembly, the Arringo or parliament of heads of families, dating fifteen and a half centuries back. The Stock Exchanges of Europe are as yet unaffected by this upheaval.

WE WANT MORE WOMEN.

Where Canada is Clearly Deficient.

London, April 4.—Canada received a large share of attention at the annual meeting of the British Women's Immigration Association. Lord Ashcombe referred to the reception of Earl Grey in New York as an evidence of the cordial relations between Canada and the United States. Other speakers were J. G. Colmer, W. T. R. Preston and W. H. James, agent for West Australia. They referred to the great disparity of sexes in Canada and Australia, and praised the work of the association as tending to remedy this. The annual report says a feature of the year was the extraordinary increase of women leaving for Canada. Of 603 handled by the association, 575 went to Canada.

A THRILLING ESCAPE.

Man Entangled in Cable Two Hundred Feet in Air.

New York, March 26.—A special to The Herald from Poughkeepsie says that Harry Barrett, a lineman of Georgetown, Conn., had a thrilling experience while removing some telegraph cable from the Poughkeepsie bridge last night. The bridge is 121 feet from tide water and is one of the highest in the world.

The bridge is being cleared of all wires preparatory to the expenditure of a million dollars for the purpose of strengthening and enlarging it by the New Haven Railroad Company.

Barrett was standing in a loop of a figure eight, made by the coils of heavy lead cable which was slowly paying out over the edge of the bridge when the cable got beyond the control of the men handling it and it slipped from their hands. One of Barrett's legs was entangled in the moving cable and he was carried swiftly towards the edge of the bridge, while his companions, who were powerless to aid him, expected to see him thrown into the river.

The cable caught on a section of the heavy steel railing and tore it away as if it were soft pine. It was momentarily stopped by a post of steel, which proved sufficiently heavy to stay it long enough for Barrett's comrades to cut it between him and the edge of the bridge, just in time to save him from being dashed to death.

ITALIAN RAILROADING.

Alberto, Frederick, the head of New York's rosiest chestnut train, an organization not to be despised, was praising Italy in a cafe.

"The only thing that could be improvement on in Italy is its train service," he said. "I shall never forget a winter experience of mine on the railway that runs along the Mediterranean from Ventimille to Genoa."

"I boarded this train at Ventimille one morning, bound for San Remo. Off we started, snow covered mountains to our left, orange groves and rose farms about us, the blue sea on our right, and after some minutes we stopped."

"Is this Bordighera?" I said to a guard.

"No, it's a cow," he answered. "There's a cow on the track."

"Well, after a while the cow was driven off, and we got under way again. Some few miles we traversed in a leisurely way, and then we stopped again."

"Another cow?" I said to guard, bitterly.
