COLLINS MURDER TRIAL.Damaging Evidence Given Against Prisoner by Detective Killen and Father McAuley.

Hopewell Cape, Sept. 29.—The most important evidence yesterday at the examination of Thomas Collins was that given by Detective Killen, of St. John.

The detective produced a bag containing articles which were taken from Collins when he was searched just after his capture at St. George. He told of the arrest of Collins and how he had met him on the road just after he had been caught. From a small book which he carried, Detective Killen read the story told him by Collins in St. John jail. In effect the story was that on the Thursday previous to the tragedy he (Collins) had gone to the lake to catch some fish for Father McAuley's breakfast. He was successful in getting only four, and Mary Ann scolded him for it and he had told her that the fish were not jumping.

On Monday Miss McAuley told him to hitch up the horse, as she wanted to go to town, and this he did about 6 o'clock in the morning. About 7 o'clock she came down and told him it was too hot and to put the horse back. While he was in the barn she came out and said something about cleaning the horse and he replied that she was trying to make a fool of him. She said that he was trying to make her a fool, going fishing and only getting four fish. He said he was tired of this, and thereupon got his clothes and left the house at about eight o'clock on Monday morning. Detective Killen referred to the gold watch which Collins was seen to be carrying at Spruce Lake. He had asked Collins in jail at St. John about this watch, and the prisoner had told him that he never had it, but later admitted that he had told a lie about it and had had the watch but lost it. In the parcel which Detective Killen produced in court was a silver watch, and roughly scratched on the outside case were the words Dad to Tom, with date August, 1905. There were four colored handkerchiefs, four white ones, some pieces of lead pencil, cuff links and collar button and a piece of brass chain.

REV. FATHER McAULEY.

Rev. Father McAuley, the next witness, said he was a R. C. priest of the New Ireland parish, which extended to Fredericton road, South Branch, Kings county, and other outlying districts. His residence was at New Ireland, near the R. C. church and his housekeeper was a second cousin, Mary Ann McAuley, 52 years of age. There were no other members of the household except the prisoner, who worked for him. The witness told of his engaging Collins at Mr. McNulty's at Albert, when he was going on a trip. Nothing very particular was said about wages, though McNulty mentioned $10 a month, which prisoner said he would take. Prisoner said his parents belonged to Sligo, Ireland, and that he had come to St. Mary's Point. Witness took the prisoner into New Ireland with him on Monday. On Tuesday the prisoner tried to split some wood but was not adept, and did not seem to know much about harnessing a horse. On Thursday he was given permission to go to the lake fishing and he was gone nearly all day. He came out with Mr. Gross and had a few fish. The witness told him he had been a long time away, and Mr. Gross said he had him cutting bushes for a time, which witness said was all right. Prisoner was taking care of Mr. Gross' horses, one at the priest's and the other at Duffy's. On Friday witness left for Albert enroute to Fredericton road. Mr. Teahan was left assisting the prisoner at the wood. The axe which the prisoner used was a two edged one, one edge being sharp. This was the only axe belonging to the witness. The witness told Miss McAuley she could go fishing if she liked during his absence and could take Collins with her. The witness described his house. His bedroom was down stairs, also his office, the housekeeper's room being upstairs. The closet in his room was locked. In this he had some clothing, and considerable money in a box. There was about $140. The box was on the floor. His winter underclothing was upstairs. Miss McAuley kept some of her clothing in the witness said he had also a telescope valise and identified the one shown in court as his. He also identified the underclothing in his valise as his own. Handkerchiefs shown were like those belonging to the housekeeper and one in particular he identified as one he had bought at the Pan-American Exposition and given to Miss McAuley, having had her name placed on it. The brush shown in court were also identified as his, as well as the smaller articles. A shaving brush and pair of drawers he did not recognize. The witness stated he had also missed some postage stamps and a pipe. The axe had never been found. He had asked the prisoner in St. John where the axe was and he said in the wood pile. Witness also asked him where he got the valise that was in his possession of the police, and he said it was in the room in which he slept. When asked about the other valise he did not answer.

Miss McAuley's money was put in the bank in Boston in her sister's name. There was probably a couple of hundred dollars. He paid the deceased regularly at the rate of $3 per month. Witness told of the door of the closet in which he kept some clothes, under the stairs, being broken in, but no clothes missing. He had not found the deceased's watch in looking over her clothes.

Father McAuley was the last witness called, and the court was adjourned until Friday, Oct. 5th, a week from today, in order to obtain two witnesses from St. John.

Ding—Shadboit, I've borrowed a good many little sums from you, at one time and another. Do you know just how much I owe you?
Shadboit (with alacrity)—Yes; it's exactly $95.
Ding—Then let me have $5, will you? That will make it an even hundred, and it will be easier for me to remember.—Chicago Tribune.Danger of Lead Poisoning.
Lead poisoning, even in a mild form—if such a serious thing can ever assume a mild form—cannot be too closely guarded against. One very simple form of doing so is to fill the night before the kettle that you use for boiling the water for breakfast. The water that has been lying in the water pipes all night, when these said pipes are made of lead, is not very safe to use. It may have become impregnated with the lead, and it is very improbable that people will wait patiently in the early morning until a sufficient quantity of water has been run off to render it perfectly safe to use, which will not be the case until all that which has been standing in the pipes has been run. Of course the water thus used may not do any harm, but still it is always wiser to be on the safe side.Little Mirrors Are Best.
In the mirrors of today the light is reflected by a layer of silver or an amalgam of tin, but a proportion of light is lost in the process of reflection, and the image is less luminous than the original. The value of a looking glass is usually estimated by the thickness of the glass, because the thicker it is the stronger it must be. But speaking scientifically thick glasses are defective, because the outlines of the image reflected are less clearly defined. An ideal mirror is one with a perfectly flat surface. But it is only possible to obtain this result in comparatively small glasses. The larger glasses do not reflect a true image, because they cannot be made flat.A Handy Tool.
An adjuster for curtains and pictures has been invented that will no doubt save many a fall, not to speak of sprains and bruises. It consists of a long wooden handle, on the end of which is a hooklike projection of iron. With this hook pictures may be removed from the molding and curtain poles may be adjusted with the greatest ease without having to climb on a chair or step ladder.Shavings.
"By the great omelet!" clucked the old hen, as she cuddled down upon the thirteen eggs, "this nest is made of excelsior. No doubt about it, this is going to be a shaving set."

"It's not necessary, but ophion, that makes men miserable, and when we come to be fancy sick there's no cure."
