Upon Monty's return from his trying hour with the lawyers he had been besieged with questions, but he was cleverly evasive. Peggy alone was insistent. She had curbed her curiosity until they were on the way home, and then she implored him to tell her what had happened. The misery he had endured was as nothing to this reckoning with the woman who had the right to expect fair treatment. His duty was clear, but the strain had been heavy, and it was not easy to meet it.

"Peggy, something terrible has happened," he faltered, uncertain of his course.

"Tell me everything, Monty. You can trust me to be brave."

"When I asked you to marry me," he continued gravely, "it was with the thought that I could give you everything tomorrow. I looked for a fortune. I never meant that you should marry a pauper."

"I don't understand. You tried to test my love for you?"

"No, child, not that. But I was pledged not to speak of the money I expected, and I wanted you so much before it came."

"And it has failed you?" she answered. "I can't see that it changes things. I expected to marry a pauper, as you call it. Do you think this could make a difference?"

"But you don't understand, Peggy. I haven't a penny in the world."

"You hadn't a penny when I accepted you," she replied. "I am not afraid. I believe in you, and if you love me I shall not give you up."

"Dearest!" And the carriage was at the door before another word was uttered. But Monty called to the coachman to drive just [illegible] around the block.

"Good night, my darling," he said when they reached home. "Sleep till 8 o'clock if you like. There is nothing now in the way of having the wedding at 9 instead of at 7. In fact, I have a reason for wanting my whole fortune to come to me then. You will be all that I have in the world, child, but I am the happiest man alive."

In his room the strain was relaxed, and Brewster faced the bitter reality. Without undressing he threw himself upon the lounge and wondered what the world held for him. It held Peggy at least, he thought, and she was enough. But had he been fair to her? Was he right in exacting a sacrifice? His tired brain whirled in the effort to decide. Only one thing was clear—that he could not give her up. The future grew black at the very thought of it. With her he could make things go, but alone it was another matter. He would take the plunge, and he would justify it. His mind went traveling back over the graceless year, and he suddenly realized that he had forfeited the confidence of men who were worth while. His course in profligacy would not be considered the best training for business. The thought nerved him to action. He must make good. Peggy had faith in him. She came to him when everything was against him, and he would slave for her, he would starve, he would do anything to prove that she was not mistaken in him. She at least should know him for a man.

Looking toward the window, he saw the black, uneasy night give way to the coming day. Haggard and faint, he arose from the couch to watch the approach of the sun that is indifferent to wealth and poverty, to gayety and dejection. From far off in the gray light there came the sound of a 5 o'clock bell. A little later the shrieks of factory whistles were borne to his ears, muffled by distance, but pregnant with the importance of a new day of toil. They were calling him, with all poor men, to the sweatshop and the forge, to the great mill of life. The new era had begun, dawning bright and clear to disperse the gloom in his soul. Leaning against the casement and wondering where he could earn the first dollar for the Peggy Brewster that was Peggy Gray, he rose to meet it with a fine unflinching fearlessness.

Before 7 o'clock he was downstairs and waiting. Joe Bragdon joined him a bit later, followed by Gardner and the minister. The DeMilles appeared without an invitation, but they were not denied. Mrs. Dan sagely shook her head when told that Peggy was still asleep and that the ceremony was off till 9 o'clock.

"Monty, are you going away?" asked Dan, drawing him into a corner.

"Just a week in the hills," answered Monty, suddenly remembering the generosity of his attorneys.

"Come in and see me as soon as you return, old man," said DeMille, and Monty knew that a position would be open to him.

To Mrs. Dan fell the honor of helping Peggy dress. By the time she had had coffee and was ready to go down she was pink with excitement and had quite forgotten the anxiety which had made the night an age.

She had never been prettier than on her wedding morning. Her color was rich, her eyes as clear as stars, her woman's body the picture of grace and health. Monty's heart leaped high with love of her.

"The prettiest girl in New York, by Joye!" gasped Dan DeMille, clutching Bragdon by the arm.

"And look at Monty! He's become a new man in the last five minutes," added Joe. "Look at the glow in his cheeks! He's beginning to look as he did a year ago."

A clock chimed the hour of 9.

* * * * * * *

"The man who was here yesterday is in the hall to see Mr. Brewster," said the maid a few minutes after the minister had uttered the words that gave Peggy a new name. There was a moment of silence, almost of dread.

"You mean the fellow with the beard?" asked Monty uneasily.

"Yes, sir. He sent in this letter, begging you to read it at once."

"Shall I send him away, Monty?" demanded Bragdon defiantly. "What does he mean by coming here at this time?"

"I'll read the letter first, Joe."

Every eye was on Brewster as he tore open the envelope. His face was expressive. There was wonder in it, then incredulity, then joy. He threw the letter to Bragdon, clasped Peggy in his arms spasmodically and then, releasing her, dashed for the hall like one bereft of reason.

"It's Nopper Harrison!" he cried, and a moment later the tall visitor was dragged into the circle. Nopper was quite overcome by the heartiness of his welcome.

There is a young Frenchman in the sophmore class at Harvard says Success, sent hither by his father at the earnest desire of his wife, an American woman by birth.

The Frenchman was once invited to a musical entertainment given by his classmates, where there were sung, in honor of the foreigner, a number of French songs, rendered in the best American French.

"I say, old man," said one of the sophomores, after the entertainment, "I suppose these French songs made you feel a little homesick."

"No," responded the Frenchman, "only sick."

The speech was heard in silence, and not a movement broke the rigidity of the ranks as Colonel Drummond stepped forward to reply.

MANY SWINDLES WORKED BY MAIL.

Gullible Americans who are Tricked by Advertisements—Some Examples.

The records of the post office department are rich with examples of the gullibility of citizens of the home of the brave and the land of the free. time to time, they nevertheless continue to make a good living for men and women who are anxious to learn the future. It is one branch of the prophet business in which there is no lack of prophet in its own country.

These readers of the future seem to inspire the greatest faith in their followers, and no amount of advice or caution from the authorities seems able to shake it.

Time was when the magazines and papers were flooded with advertisements which purported to represent a get-rich-quick company. The persons who answered this little notice were informed by return mail that the best possible way to get rich in a short time was to work like the devil and not spend a cent.

Good advice this was, too, and if it were followed the schemes of charlatans would be much more apt to "gang-a-gley."

No matter how often some one may think of a new device for fooling the people he can always find a ready market for his wares says the Washington Post.

Old stories about the singed moth do not hold good when the average person hears that he can make an unusually large amount of money investing a correspondingly small sum. Previous experiences have taught him nothing—he is willing to pay for another very expensive lesson, which will have, in all probability, as little effecyt on him as the previous one.

Puzzles and the reward which their solutions may bring have always appealed very strongly to the American public. If a man can be made rich for life by solving a mere puzzle he is more than willing to risk the amount of a subscription to the paper that makes him such a magnificent offer.

When the post office department learns that a person is engaged in using the mails for such fraudulent purposes an order is issued forbidding the delivery of mail to him or his agents. The matter of preventing the continuation of the project so far as he is concerned is not so easy.

An instance when the government received no complaints from the persons defrauded and no thanks from them for exposing the swindle was that of the "Franco-German Electric Pad Company."

This alleged company advertised for agents to sell its goods, offering to pay a large salary and expenses, but before one could qualify for such a position he was expected to buy two of the electric pads, the electricity of which consisted of a mustard plaster. These were to be sold and testimonials secured celebrating their virtues. After this had been done the prospective representative of the company was supposed to be on the road to wealth.

That was as far as he got. The next communication from his future employer stated that he would now be able to sell the pads for $4 each; and as they would cost him only $2, he would make a clear profit of 100 per cent. on his investment. The salary and expenses had vanquished.

Upon the discovery of this fraud its author was arrested, gave $1000 bail and skipped. He had made enough out of his Utopian scheme to indulge in this little extravagance. Not a word was heard from his victims. By American greed they had been fooled; by American spunk they would stand for it. The fiddler always was to be flaid sooner or later.

Another undertaking that had for its sole object the benefit of mankind was instituted by a magazine. "The Fireside Favorite" will be its designation for charity's sake.

The men back of this publication thought it would be quite a nice little thing for them to offer a puzzle to the public for solution. This thought was parent to the action, and in a short time the puzzle appeared with the advertisement that the solver would receive a quarter of the money which it brought the owners of the paper. And then the inevitable stipulation—a subscription costing $1.

The puzzle was solved. The fortunate ones received 25 cents, just one-quarter of what the advertisement brought from each reader. The residue of the profits was spent by the proprietors in the law courts defending themselves against the order issued by the post office department.

Ten yards of silk for ten cents was a bait that no feminine fish could resist. The originators of this project made a tremendous haal. What woman could afford to miss such a chance? Ten yards of silk to flaunt on state occasions. Alas and alack! They received silk, and the promised ten yards—but it was sewing silk. It might have passed muster as material for a dress in the Pacific islands, but hardly in this country.

Stomach Cramps. COLIC.

THESE are very painful, and their attacks are often sudden and sometimes fatal. The principal seat is in the stomach and bowels, producing severe twisting, cramping pain, and often accompanied by vomiting. If you are troubled in this way, there is only one remedy to cure you, and that one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has a record of cures extending over 60 years and we have yet to hear of it failing to either relieve or cure.

MRS. M. SECORD, Bristol, N.B., writes: "I was terribly troubled with cramps for some time and had several doctors attend me, but their medicine did not do me any good. I got two bottles of Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry and they completely cured me. I would not be without it in my house."

REFUSE ALL SUBSTITUTES.

RATES TO TRAVEL ARE LOW.

The buildings for the Dominion exhibition are in splendid shape for the fair, which will open on September 22nd. That the live stock show will be the largest ever seen in Canada, barring none, east or west, is assured.

The Railway rates to Halifax will be very low. Return tickets from St. John to Halifax will be as low as $4.00 by the D. A. R. and $4.75 by the I. C. R.

It will be possible to come from Sydney to Halifax, enter the fair and return for $3.25.

From Amherst to Halifax and back, with exhibition entrance, the railway charge will only by $1.75.

Every day during the exhibition visitors may come from Yarmouth and return for $3.00. Those are but samples of the low rates that will prevail all over the country during the two weeks of the Dominion exhibition.

The I. C. R. is doing for the Dominion exhibition what it never did before in the history of exhibitions in eastern Canada. It is, in addition to the low rates that prevail all through the show, giving four special excursions from Amherst, New Glasgow, and the east. There are as follows:

1st excursion, Sept. 26th.
2nd excursion, Sept. 28th.
3rd excursion, Oct. 1st.
4th effcursion, Oct., 3rd.

Ask your station agent for all information as to rates for excursions and other days.

The horse racing will be the very best ever seen in eastern Canada; the vaudeville and "Carnival of Venice" will be magnificent; and the whole exhibition, with its premium list of $100,000, will be on a splendid scale.
