Quick as a flash came the retort: "The late Judge Andrew Wylie," said a New York lawyer, "had a happy gift of illustration. 'In an address on Lincoln I once heard him illustrate in an odd way the power of perseverance. 'Lincoln persevered,' he said, 'and it is only they who persevere succeed that who concentrate their energies. Don't give three years to journalism and then, discouraged, try the law while. Don't learn the grocery business and in a little while take up placer mining or plumbing. Consider rather the postage stamp, whose usefulness depends on its ability to stick to one thing till it gets there.'"

THE WORST OF A COLD.
Is how suddenly it comes. No time to run to a drug store, croup develops, the lungs are effected with too late. Keep Catarrhzone on hand, it kills colds instantly. Something magical about the way it cures Catarrh and Bronchitis. Catarrhzone is the best remedy because it cures in nature's way; it heals, soothes and restores permanently. Carry a Catarrhzone inhaler in your pocket, use it occasionally and you'll never catch cold—that's worth remembering.

REVIVAL OF WAR RUMORS.

Alarmist Reports Over Franco-German Issue.

Paris, Jan. 3.—Despite the improvement in the relations of France and Germany occasioned by the submission of the Morocco controversy to a conference, there is a distinct revival of war rumors, and a considerable element of the people and a number of journals are maintaining that war between France and Germany is inevitable. Some of these reports are taking an exaggerated form, but they all tend to stimulate the public apprehensions. The Patrie publishes a report that the Bank of France has taken extraordinary precautions, similar to those adopted in 1870 before the Franco-Prussian war. This is authoritatively denied.

Despatches from Belgium say the authorities there are adopting precautionary measures, anticipating that a conflict would reach Belgian soil. Specialists from Switzerland report that the German reservists have been summoned, and other despatches graphically describe the activity of French and German forces along the frontier and their extensive works and defenses.

These reports, it is said, are the outgrowth of the recent French yellow book, showing the acuteness of the Franco-German issue over Moroccan conference, to which the issue will be referred.

The agitation has produced two distinct elements, one holding that neither of the Governments desire war, and will make the necessary concessions to avoid it, and the other insisting that Germany has latent designs, and that France is surely being drawn toward a conflict. The pessimistic element is just now foremost, and its sentiment is reflected in a series of alarmist reports. The Government naturally is holding aloof, but the uneasiness extends to official circles. Thus far the alarm has not reached the Bourse, and rentes remain steady. Premier Rouvier is lending all his influence to calming the apprehension.

Much of the feeling of apprehension is attributed to the precautionary measures the Ministers of War and Marine are taking, which are not so much because of expectations of war as of a desire to have these services in a suitable state of preparedness should the former strained situation again prevail.

Members of the diplomatic corps who made inquiries found that preparations were going on systematically, and that considerable forces were being massed toward the frontier, but that nothing in the nature of an extraordinary military concentration was in progress.

LORD STRATHCONA.

Canada's High Commissioner at Montreal Talks on Current Topics.

Montreal Star—"I am here on business, official and otherwise, and will return in a very short time." The above remark was what Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal would say in regard to business connected with his present visit to Canada.

With a beaming smile the venerable peer said: "Why I am simply coming here for a while. This is my home, and it is in Canada it is always here; each time I return it is just as I have left it the previous time."

Speaking of the preferential trade question His Lordship stated he never hesitated to believe or feel that Canada was very sound and true in its attachment to the Mother Country, and that Canadians as a whole would most gladly join in anything mutually beneficial. He believed that any scheme of preferential trade within the empire that could be arranged would be a great benefit to the empire in a domestic way. Of course the legislatures of the different countries would have to deal with the matter in a way that would suit their case or circumstances.

Lord Strathcona said this was a matter which should be treated as high politics; that is a matter which should be treated above and beyond party politics; "but," said he, "I am afraid it is too often the case that it is dragged into party politics."

"Canada has already given a preference which is very valuable to the United Kingdom, and I have heard some of the best men say, who are recognized as free traders, that it was the preference given by Canada to Great Britain, which allowed the Britisher to trade with Canada, and, of course, added His Lordship, 'this is a great thing.'"

"You must understand," said he, "that I am not talking politics, but speaking generally, as I have not participated in party politics for ten years; not since I have represented Canada in England, as I believe no agent of Canada should allow himself to interfere in party politics while he is representing his country within the Empire."

Speaking of the entire cordiale between England and France. His Lordship said that this entente was of very great advantage in bringing about better and certainly more cordial relations between the two peoples. "The more such a feeling is cultivated on both sides of the Channel the better it will be for the two countries."

Regarding the extension of the friendly nations clause by Germany to all countries except Canada, Lord Strathcona said: "Canada is quite right in the course she took, and is well able to take care of herself."

In regard to the effect of Russian conditions on Europe, he said that conditions such as those existing in a mighty empire like Russia did effect more or less the other countries, but that there was no estrangement between England and Russia at the present time.

Upon the Star representative repeating to His Lordship the opinion of Sarah Bernhardt as regards the advance made by Canada in letters arts and sciences, His Lordship smiled blandly and said:

"Ah, Bernhardt; she is very delightful in her own profession, but we generally find in this world that it would be a great benefit for persons to reserve their opinions for that with which they are intimately acquainted."

Lord Strathcona is enjoying good health, and looks exceptionally well, and any disciples of the Oslar theory about men over sixty would have their beliefs rudely and emphatically shocked when shown into the presence of the hale, hearty and venerable Grand Old Man.

Roy (who has been out to tea)—Mrs. Freeman's cake is better than ours, mamma.

Mamma—I hope you said "Thank you" nicely.

Roy—Oh, yes, mamma, I said it five times.

Mamma—You need only have said it once.

Roy—But I had five pieces of cake, mamma.
