Dr. Horatio Parkins, the medical expert, described at a medical banquet the vicissitudes and excitements in the life of a young ambulance surgeon.

He was summoned to the police station to examine an unconscious prisoner. The prisoner, muddy and disheveled, lay on the floor of the cell. The physician bent over and examined him and then, rising, said in a loud, stern voice:

"This man's condition is not due to drink. He has been drugged. A policeman turned pale and said in a timid, hesitating voice: 'I'm afraid you're right, sir. I drugged him all the way from Carney's saloon, a matter of a hundred yards or more.'

TOP OF SKULL GONE, DISCUSSES HIS END.

Clinton Man, Horribly Hurt in Indiana, Calmly Plans for His Funeral.

Cincinnati, Aug. 6.—With the top of his head torn off by contact with a bridge beam while riding on the top of a passenger coach on the Monon railway, James Jennings of Clinton, Mass., sat at the railroad station at Logansport, Ind., last night, and calmly discussed with the bystanders his approaching death.

Although he was alive this morning, surgeons say that he cannot live more than ten hours. All who saw him were surprised at his remarkable exhibition of nerve and gameness. Local doctors say that the case is without a parallel, as the young man's wounds ordinarily would have caused instant death. But today Jennings was conscious and told his physicians that he was not afraid to die. He requested that his body be sent to his mother, Mrs. Katherine Jennings, 250 Woodland Street, Clinton, Mass.

The dead boarded Monon north bound passenger train No. 4 at New Albany and climbed to the top of the coaches, intending to beat his way to Chicago. Just as the train was pulling in, an overhead bridge caught him and tore away the top of his skull. He got down from the coach unaided and walked to the station, asking that a priest be summoned.

"CHUTE THE CHUTE" ELEPHANTS.

The World's Greatest Performing Elephants at the St. John Exhibition Sept. 1st to 8th.

When the New York Hippodrome uses an act for a headliner, all may be certain that such is a marvel of excellence and the best procurable in its line. Consequently on the very first announcement that F. G. Spencer had procured Barlow's elephants for the St. John Fair, the people fairly sat up and stared, because what reader of the daily papers was not familiar with the wonder of animals which did every night for six months the famous "Chute the Chutes" at the hippodrome into a tank of water large enough to accommodate a herd of elephants. Watch for the chute the chutes elephants at the St. John exhibition, Sept. 1st to 8th.

BE DONE WITH CATARRH!

Why allow this filthy disease to poison your system? It drains your strength, ruins digestion, pollutes the breath, makes you repulsive. The one certain cure is "Catarrhazone," it cures because it destroys the cause of the disease, cures thoroughly because it goes wherever the catarrh is, cures every case because its vapor destroys the catarrh germ instantly. To get well and stay free from catarrh get Catarrhazone and use it; satisfaction guaranteed.

According to a well known railroad man interested in construction in the west, the Indian, though himself not overly fond of work, evinces the greatest contempt for the indolent white man. To sit by and watch the latter toil is to the red man a source of never failing pleasure.

A number of Blackfeet in Montana, were according to the railroad man, one day squatting on the ground watching a group of laborers who were constructing a grade for a branch line in that state. In their laconic fashion they were commenting upon the workmen when a surveyor riding a bicycle, the first that the Indians had ever seen, came along. He had left the train at the last station and was going to the fort, a little farther on.

The Blackfeet watched the wheelman without a word until he had passed beyond a hill. Then they expressed their sentiments with regard to him.

"Light grunted one, white man take easy."

Yes, assented another, white man heap lazy. Sit down and walk.

THE LATE JUDGE SEDGEWICK.

Distinguished Career of the Deceased Nova Scotian Tribute from a Co-worker.

Halifax, Aug. —Mr. Justice Sedgewick of the supreme court of Canada died at a quarter to five this morning at the summer residence of J. J. Stewart, Chester.

Judge Sedgewick was a son of the late Rev. Dr. Sedgewick of Musquodoboit. He was born in Aberdeen on May 10th, 1818, and was but a year old at the time of his father's removal from the Musquodoboit valley. He graduated from Dalhousie in 1867.

He was for several years president of the Alumni Association and a governor of the college. He was also for many years the lecturer on equity jurisprudence in the law school of the university.

His legal education was obtained in the office of John Sandfield MacDonald Cornwall, Ont., premier of Ontario. He came to Halifax in 1873 was admitted to the Nova Scotia bar by special act and at once began practice. Howard MacLean had just died leaving a considerable practice, and this was taken up by Mr. Sedgewick in conjunction with J. J. Stewart, under the name of Sedgewick and Stewart.

Mr. Sedgewick had been a profound student of the law in all its branches, but particularly in the doctrines peculiar to the court of chancery. He liked the law for its own sake and for years it was his favorite reading. He was an excellent draftsman—exact and rapid. He was careful in the preparation of his cases, a shrewd examiner both in chief and in cross-examination of great shrewdness and fertility in argument and a fluent and forcible though by no means eloquent speaker.

In 1880 he was made a Q. C., and subsequently vice-president of the Bar Society, and an active member of the council. He was for four years an alderman of the city and in 1885, on the appointment of the late J. N. Ritchie to the bench, became recorder of the city, which office he held until his appointment as deputy minister of justice in 1888. As deputy minister he was associated with Sir John Thompson in drafting the criminal code. In 1891 he was appointed to a seat on the bench of the supreme court of Canada, which he held until his death. As a judge he was invariably patient and courteous, and many of his judgments displayed great learning and ability. In politics Mr. Sedgewick was an active supporter of the Conservative party. In 1874 he unsuccessfully contested Halifax for the house of assembly.

He was one of the founders of the Halifax Herald and for many years assisted in and contributed to its editorial columns. An active member of the North British society, for some years its secretary, and eventually its president. In religion he was a Presbyterian. Personally, both in professional and private life, the late judge was most popular. In private life the judge was a charming companion, a bright and most interesting talker and keenly interested in the doings and welfare of his many friends. He was married in 1873 to Mary, daughter of William McKay, merchant, of this city. His widow survives him.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Aug. 4.—Sir Louis Davies pays the following tribute of appreciation to his late lamented colleague, Mr. Justice Sedgewick. "As a jurist he was looked upon by his colleagues and the bar of the Dominion as a strong man. He was well versed in the principles of law and possessed in addition a common sense which added to his long experience as deputy minister of justice, and as a barrister gave to his judgment great weight. He was one of the most modest and unassuming of men, kind hearted, genial and greatly beloved by all. The younger barristers always found him ready to assist them in their practice whether on or off the bench. He was affable and approachable, more so than most of the judiciary are credited with being. His special knowledge of legislation and practice of maritime provinces rendered him especially qualified to deal with maritime litigation. He was a good sound judge, well versed in legal principles, with common sense and experience to enable him practically to apply the principles in the cases which came before him, and possessed ability to express the conclusions he reached in clear, terse English. His death will cause a vacancy on the supreme court bench that will not be easily filled."

GIRL'S FRANTIC EFFORTS

TO RECONCILE LOVER.

Bella Campbell's Novel Scheme to English Sympathy of Midland Young Man Who Had Been Insulted by Anonymous Letters.

Toronto News: Detective Rogers, of the Attorney General's Department has this week dispelled the air of mystery which had developed over the case of Bella Campbell, who was, during the latter part of July, the central figure in an alleged sensational episode in Midland.

A letter received by the department from Mayor Finlayson states that the young woman was bound, grossly ill-treated, and left unconscious in a closed house. Her recovery, it is stated was brought about with difficulty by attending doctors.

The result of Detective Rogers' investigation shows that the girl was actually the victim of her own peculiar undertaking.

As the result of her affection has been spurned by a young man, she had secured a rope, bound her own hands and feet thrown herself on the veranda fronting the house where her sometime lover lived. She had, it appears, hoped thus to attract his attention on his return home at night, arouse his sympathy and thus affect a reconciliation.

Letters Annoyed Him.

Detective Rogers found that she had been keeping company with a young man in Midland for about two years, and recently the couple had been receiving anonymous letters and announcements of their wedding, from some source apparently unknown, had found circulation, he became suspicious and informed Miss Campbell that if the letters did not cease he would stop. He did stop about three months ago, and subsequently he received letters from her expressing a wish to see him.

On the 24th of July, according to the young woman's story, she went down town with a lady friend. While returning, she was almost within a block of her home when some person, unknown and unseen, delivered a blow which rendered her unconscious. She remembered nothing more until, reviving, she found herself in a buggy with her hands tied and a rope around her neck. She was forced to take a drink of something and after that remembered nothing. She endeavored to scream, but the rope was drawn tighter. About two o'clock in the morning she was discovered upon

THE GIRL WROTE THEM.

The detective on looking through the anonymous correspondence, was struck by the similarity of certain letters. The writing was all in back-hand slope while samples given by her girl were in Spencerian style. He questioned the girl on the points of similarity, however, and she finally confessed that she had carried out the entire scheme herself.

All of the letters were written on the same kind of paper, and on one occasion she had written the young man telling him that she was in a position to tell him the name of the anonymous letter.

A poor girl named "Pearl" living at 280 Seaton street, had, on her deathbed, according to the story, admitted being the guilty party. The detective, on examining the envelope in which the letter was said to have been sent, found that the Toronto post mark was missing, but the microscope revealed the date, October, 1905. Bella Campbell's statement was that the letter had been received but a few days previous during July. The young woman made a complete confession.

She would not tell the detective why she went to the house, but he assumes that she had expected to attract the young man's attention as he returned home, and that he, seeing her predicament, would unfreeze his heart to a reconciliation. Three knocks at the door had been heard during the night but the young man's sister, on going to the window, had seen nothing.

"What can we do?" replied the detective when asked what action would be taken by the department.
