"I understand, Monty," said Bragdon, and both he and Harrison went among the people carelessly asking one another if Brewster had come to withdraw his money. "No, he has over $200,000, and he's going to leave it," the other would say.

Each excited group was visited in turn by the two men, but their assurance seemed to accomplish but little. These men and women were there to save their fortunes; the situation was desperate.

Colonel Drew, outwardly calm and serene, but inwardly perturbed, finally saw Brewster and his companions. He sent a messenger over with the request that Monty come to the president's private office at once.

"He wants to help you to save your money," cried Bragdon in low tones. "That shows it's all up."

"Get out every dollar of it, Monty, and don't waste a minute. It's a smash as sure as fate," urged Harrison, a feverish expression in his eyes.

Brewster was admitted to the colonel's private office. Drew was alone and was pacing the floor like a caged animal.

"Sit down, Brewster, and don't mind if I seem nervous. Of course we can't hold out, but it is terrible, terrible! They think we are trying to rob them. They're mad—utterly mad."

"I never saw anything like it, colonel. Are you sure you can meet all the demands?" asked Brewster, thoroughly excited. The colonel's face was white, and he chewed his cigar nervously.

"We can hold out unless some of our heaviest depositors get the fever and swoop down upon us. I appreciate your feelings in an affair of this kind, coming so swiftly upon the heels of the other, but I want to give you my personal assurance that the money you have here is safe. I called you in to impress you with the security of the bank. You ought to know the truth, however, and I will tell you in confidence that another check like Austin's, which we paid a few minutes ago, would cause us serious though temporary embarrassment."

"I came to assure you that I have not thought of withdrawing my deposits from this bank, colonel. You need have no uneasiness"—

The door opened suddenly, and one of the officials of the bank bolted inside, his face as white as death. He started to speak before he saw Brewster and then closed his lips despairingly.

"What is it, Mr. Moore?" asked Drew as calmly as possible. "Don't mind Mr. Brewster."

"Oglethorp wants to draw $250,000," said Moore in strained tones.

"Well, he can have it, can't he?" asked the colonel quietly. Moore looked helplessly at the president of the bank, and his silence spoke more plainly than words.

"Brewster, it looks bad," said the colonel, turning abruptly to the young man. "The other banks are afraid of a run, and we can't count on much help from them. Some of them have helped us and others have refused. Now, I not only ask you to refrain from drawing out your deposit, but I want you to help us in this crucial moment." The colonel looked twenty years older, and his voice shook perceptibly. Brewster's pity went out to him in a flash.

"What can I do, Colonel Drew?" he cried. "I'll not take my money out, but I don't know how I can be of further assistance to you. Command me, sir."

"You can restore absolute confidence, Monty, my dear boy, by increasing your deposits in our bank," said the colonel slowly and as if dreading the fate of the suggestion.

"You mean, sir, that I can save the bank by drawing my money from other banks and putting it here?" asked Monty slowly. He was thinking harder and faster than he had ever thought in his life. Could he afford to risk the loss of his entire fortune on the fate of this bank? What would Swearengen Jones say if he deliberately deposited a vast amount of money in a tottering institution like the Bank of Manhattan Island? It would be the maddest folly on his part if the bank went down. There could be no mitigating circumstances in the eyes of either Jones or the world if he swamped all of his money in this crisis.

"I beg of you, Monty, help us." The colonel's pride was gone. "It means disgrace if we close our doors even for an hour; it means a stain that only years can remove. You can restore confidence by a dozen strokes of your pen, and you can save us."

He was Barbara's father. The proud old man was before him as a suppliant, no longer the cold man of the world. Back to Brewster's mind came the thought of his quarrel with Barbara and of her heartlessness. A scratch of the pen one way or the oth-

THE BIG CIRCUS.

Some Features of Barnum and Bailey's Great Show

Dancing one's way into popularity is not a new accomplishment. Silhouetted here and there through the years of modern amusement history are the names of dainty, clever, nimble-footed women who have won their way into the hearts of the public by their poetic poses and graceful gyrations in the dance. There have not been many stars of the first magnitude in this galaxy of tripping Terpsichoreans, but those who like the great Fanny Elssler, the German danseuse have basked in the highlight of popular favor, have won a fame that will be perpetuated through many generations of amusement lovers.

In recent years the number of really effulgent Terpsichoreans stars has been notably small. It was therefore a matter of surprise and also for felicitation that in Berlin, last winter, there literally burst upon the public a company of dances of such surpassing merit, such airy grace and athletic nimbleness as to constitute the most sensational amusement feature that the Germancapitol had seen in years.

The troupe consisted of seven young girls and one man. Three of the girls impersonated male characters, the others wore skirts. Their costuming was not only novel and unique, but also beautiful beyond comparison. The usually unemotional Berlinese newspapers raved over the new sensation, and the Winter Garden, where the Vorlops appeared, was crowded at every performance to see their startling "Dance du Tourbillon."

An act that could create such a genuine furore in the German metropolis was considered sufficiently meritorious even for the greatest show on Earth, and it was secured. The price, if announced, would fairly stagger the American public. That the money has been well spent is attested by the enthusiasm that this remarkable dance has created in the United States. There has been nothing equal to it in a decade.

The Anglicized meaning of the "Dance du Tourbillon" is the "Dance of the Whirlwind". The name is not overdrawn. No other words could so fitly express the grace, the rapidity and the wild abandon of this Terpsichorean revel. It begins with a series of quiet, poetic poses by two companies of the same troupe four on each stage. Theinaugural movements suggest nothing of the whirle wind. They are slow, rythmic-dreamy. It is a minuet a graceful, radiant picture reflected from the days of the is accelerated. The minuet merges into a waltz the waltz into a kind of Latinized Schottische. The Schottische in to the impassioned Dance du Folie arms and head keeping time with the swiftly moving foot steps the music swelling louder, and faster and still faster in a stirring, fascinating, exhilirating frenzy, of rotating motion.

The first movements serve to arrest the attention of the audience. The gracefulness of the dancers—the beauty of the costuming—the dreamy catchy strains of the orchestration—take hold upon the eye and the imagination. As the dance proceeds the interest is intensified. But as yet the applause comes only in staccato ripples. The swifter the movements of the dancers the more profound is the breathless attention. The audience seems appalled. All eyes are turned upon the platforms and the dancers.

Now comes the climax—the whirlwind finish. Faster than the senses can follow the dancers spin round and round. Without a second's pause one dancer clasps the hands of another, and send her spinning into a dizzy sircle. Still without interruption a second girl, joining hands with the centre of this revolving human wheel, is caught up, and the two girls go twirling through the air at maddening speed. The others, on platforms, whirl in unison. The effect, dazzling, daringly delightful delirium movement.

And it "brings down the house," The great audience bursts into a roar of applause, and the Vorlops, bowing and smiling their appreciation, gracefully retire. It is a triumph that comes to but few dancers—and that only once or twice in a generation. The Vorlops have literally "danced their way into the hearts of the audience."

Next Friday, July 27, is circus day in Fredericton, and the Vorlops will be one of the special attractions.

W. B. HOWARD, ACT. D.P.A., C.P.R., ST. JOHN, N. B

A wealthy manufacturer in the Liverpool potteries is at present the subject of a good joke. While on a continental tour he purchased a Sevres vase for some hundreds of pounds and brought t home most carefully. Thinking that the foreman of his works might gather a hint from the design he called that gentleman in and showed him his treasure.

"How do you like it?" he asked.

The foreman took the vase in his hand, turned it over and returned it with the brief reply:

"I don't think I can learn much from it."

"Why not?" asked the manufacturer.

"I don't like telling you sir."

"Came—out with it."

"Well, I designed that vase myself. It is a foreign imitation of our own work, and is worth £5 at the outside."

Simeon Ford tells of a woman in a Chicago hotel who was known as the most inveterate "kicker" the hostelry had ever known, according to Success Magazine.

One evening at desert the lady who was always complaining, asked the waiter why the dish served her was called "ice cream pudding."

"If you don't like it, ma'am, I'll bring you something else," suggested the polite negro.

"Oh, it's very nice," responded the lady. "What I object to is that it should be called ice cream pudding. It's wrongly named. There should be ice cream served with it."

"Yes, ma'am," replied the waiter, "but that's jest our name for it. Lots o' dishes that way. They don't bring you a cottage with a cottage pudding, you know."

WE HAVE THE COUNTRY.

Rev. W. J. McKay Enthusiastic About Canada.

Toronto Globe—Rev. W. J. McKay, editor of the Canadian Baptist, who has just returned from a trip to the west coast, accompanied by his brother-in-law, Mr. Harry L. Stark, speaks enthusiastically of the scenery, the growth and the future of Canada. He was impressed particularly with Fort William and Port Arthur, with Winnipeg—but a few years ago only a small town and bow a city of 101,000 inhabitants—with Calgary, which has 20,000 to 30,000 people; with Brandon, which has doubled in five years; with Vancouver, a city of 50,000, where only nineteen years ago Rev. J. B. Kennedy now of Memorial church, this city, was sent into the forest, and with Victoria, an older city, the government seat, having a population of 30,000.

Mr. McKay spoke in the highest terms of appreciation of the excellent service and courteous attention of the C. P. R., whose road he considers the great feat of the country.

American and European tourists, he said, are astonished and enraptured with the Rockies. For 200 miles the train goes through a panorama of beauty among the mountains, surpassing in grandeur even the Swiss Alps.

MUST GET BREAKFAST.

Recorder Weir's Order in a Wife-Beating Case.

Montreal, July 23.—In the Recorder's Court recently Patrick McGuire was ordered to get up early every morning and get his wife's breakfast for one year, otherwise he would have to go to jail for six months. That was Recorder Weir's method to cure the man of wife-beating.

When McGuire was asked to plead he said:

"Your honor, I am guilty but I believe I am perfectly justified in my actions for the simple reason that every morning I have to get up at five o'clock to go to the gas works, where I am employed. My wife never gets up to get my breakfast ready. Every Saturday when I arrive home I give her all my money and she does not give me a cent. But what I complain of most is that every night when I arrive home she gets me to scrub the floors."

After hearing the evidence Mr. Recorder Weir rendered judgment by saying:

"After today you will get up every morning and get ready your wife's breakfast, besides your own, for one Sear. You will still have to give her all Sour wages, and you will vave to appear before me at any time when called for, and if not, a bench warrant will be issued against you, and that will mean six months in jail."
