"I know what you mean, an officer sent up to attach my belongings or something of the sort. No, dearest; I give you my word of honor I do not owe a dollar in the world." Then he recalled his peculiar indebtedness to Bragdon and Gardner. "Except one or two very small personal obligations," he added hastily. "Don't worry about it, dear; we are out for a good time, and we must make the most of it. First we drive through the park, then we dine at Merry's."

"But we must dress for that, dear," she cried. "And the chaperon?"

He turned very red when she spoke of dressing. "I'm ashamed to confess it, Peggy, but I have no other clothes than these I'm wearing now. Don't look so hurt, dear. I'm going to leave an order for new evening clothes tomorrow if I have the time. And about the chaperon. People won't be talking before tomorrow, and by that time"

"No, Monty, Merry's is out of the question. We can't go there," she said decisively.

"Oh, Peggy! That spoils everything," he cried in deep disappointment.

"It isn't fair to me, Monty. Everybody would know us, and every tongue would wag. They would say: 'There are Monty Brewster and Margaret Gray. Spending his last few dollars on her.' You wouldn't have them think that?"

He saw the justice in her protest. "A quiet little dinner in some out of the way place would be joyous," she added persuasively.

"You're right, Peggy, you're always right. You see, I'm so used to spending money by the handful that I don't know how to do it any other way. I believe I'll let you carry the pocket-book after tomorrow. Let me think. I know a nice little restaurant downtown. We'll go there and then to the theater. Dan DeMille and his wife are to be in my box, and we're all going up to Pettingill's studio afterward. I'm to give the Little Sons a farewell supper. If my calculations don't go wrong that will be the end of the jaunt and we'll go home happy."

At 11 o'clock Pettingill's studio opened its doors to the Little Sons and their guests, and the last "Dutch lunch" was soon under way. Brewster had paid for it early in the evening, and when he sat down at the head of the table there was not a penny in his pockets. A year ago at the same place and at the same hour he and the Little Sons were having a birthday feast. A million dollars came to him on that night. Tonight he was poorer by far than on the other occasion, but he expected a little gift on the new anniversary.

Around the board besides the nine Little Sons sat six guests, among them the DeMilles, Peggy Gray and Mary Valentine. Nopper Harrison was the only absent Little Son, and his health was supposed by Brewster almost before the echoes of the toast to the bride and groom died away.

Interruption came earlier on this occasion than it did that night a year ago. Ellis did not deliver his messages to Brewster until 3 o'clock in the morning, but the A. D. T. boy who rang the bell at Pettingill's a year later handed him a telegram before 12 o'clock.

"Congratulations are coming in, old man," said DeMille as Monty looked fearfully at the little envelope the boy had given him.

"Many happy returns of the day," suggested Bragdon. "By Jove, it's sensible of you to get married on your birthday, Monty. It saves time and expense to your friends."

"Read it aloud," said Subway Smith. "Two to one it's from Nopper Harrison," cried Pettingill.

Brewster's fingers trembled, he knew not why, as he opened the envelope. There was the most ghastly premonition that ill news had come in this last hour. He drew forth the telegram and slowly, painfully, unfolded it. No one could have told by his expression that he felt almost that he was reading his death warrant. It was from Grant & Ripley and evidently had been following him about town for two or three hours. The lawyers had filed it at 8:30 o'clock.

He read it at a glance, his eyes burning, his heart freezing.

Come to office immediately. Will wait all night for you if necessary. Jones has disappeared, and there is absolutely no trace of him. GRANT & RIPLEY.

Brewster sat as one paralyzed, absolutely no sign of emotion in his face. The others began to clamor for the contents of the telegram, but his tongue was stiff and motionless, his ears deaf. Every drop of blood in his body was stilled by the shock, every sense given him by the Creator was centered upon eleven words in the handwriting of a careless telegraph operator. "Jones has disappeared, and there is absolutely no trace of him."

"Jones has disappeared!" Those were the words, plain and terrible in their clearness, tremendous in their brutality. Slowly the rest of the message began to urge its claims upon his brain. "Come to our office immediately" and "Will wait all night" battled for recognition. He was calm because he had not the power to express an emotion. How he maintained control of himself afterward he never knew. Some powerful, kindly force asserted itself, coming to his relief with the timeliness of a genie. Gradually it began to dawn upon him that the others were waiting for him to read the message aloud. He was not sure that a sound would come forth when he opened his lips to speak, but the tones were steady, natural and cold as steel.

"I am sorry I can't tell you about this," he said, so gravely that his hearers were silenced. "It is a business matter of such vital importance that I must ask you to excuse me for an hour or so. I will explain everything tomorrow. Please don't be uneasy. If you will do me the honor to grace the board of an absent host I'll be most grateful. It is imperative that I go and at once. I promise to return in an hour." He was standing, his knees as stiff as iron.

"Is it anything serious?" asked DeMille.

"What! Has anything happened?" came in halting, frightened tones from Peggy.

"It concerns me alone, and it is purely of a business nature. Seriously, I can't delay going for another minute. It is vital. In an hour I'll return. Peggy, don't be worried—don't be distressed about me. Go on and have a good time, everybody, and you'll find me the jolliest fellow of all when I come back. It's 12 o'clock. I'll be here by 1 on the 23d of September."

HORSES THAT COUNT.
A Russian doctor has spent a great deal of time finding out what animals can count, and has found that horses can count more numbers than any other animals. He states that a parrot can count four, a cat six, crows ten, and some few dogs twenty. But he found horses that could count more than this. One would plough across a field twenty times, and would then stop and rest, but it never stopped at nineteen or twenty-one; always just twenty. Another horse always counted the miles along the road by the white mileposts that were set up, and stopped every twenty-five miles, as it had been taught to do, to be fed.

CRASHED THROUGH! LO K
Montreal Premises Flooded and One Building Destroyed by Steamer's Act.

Montreal, Aug. 29.—Early yesterday morning the steamer Dundurn of the newly organized Hamilton & Montreal Steamship Company, crashed through the Cote St. Paul lock of theachine Canal, precipitating a solid wall of water nine feet in height into the lower locks at Seigneurs Street.

The lower locks held firmly in spite of the sudden pressure and the water, backed up, flooding the buildings in the immediate vicinity and causing damage to the extent of many thousands of dollars.

The basements of many of the houses on Notre Dame and Fulford streets were also flooded as the water overflowed the banks of the canal basin at that point.

Trouble with the Dundurn's machinery was the cause of the collision. The shock was slight, though the gate is a massive affair, and few of the passengers were aware of the accident until after the boat had stopped above the Seigneurs Street lock. Fortunately the Atwater Avenue bridge was open and there was no other shipping in the canal. Had the bridge been closed it is likely that the Dundurn would have been badly smashed and considerable loss of life might have resulted. As it was she was not damaged to any appreciable extent by her collision with the gate.

The establishments which derived power from the flume nearest the Seigneurs Street locks suffered the heaviest damage. The Belding Paul Company's plant on the corner of Shearers Street, is at the lower end of the flume and consequently had to stand the full force of the water which burst an opening nearly twenty feet in length in the foundation. The water rushed in, filling the basement in which was stored only a large quantity of empty cases.

When the water burst through the foundation, the building which is of brick and three stories in height, sagged down on the side facing the canal. It appeared to be in such a shaky condition that the part of Shearers Street on which it stands was immediately boarded off to prevent danger to pedestrians. It is said that the yield from the ore is eighty-seven per cent. pure iron.

Andrew Carnegie once delivered a little homily to the pupils of a public school in Washington, says Harper's Weekly, wherein he endeavored to demonstrate that the judgment of men is apt to be warped by sentiment and feeling.

"In Scotland," asserted Mr. Carnegie, "the people abominated hymns simply because the Episcopalians sang them. The Presbyterians sang only the Psalms of David. The Episcopalians used stained glass in their church windows, and for that reason the Scotch looked upon stained glass as something of unholy origin."

Continuing, Mr. Carnegie told a story of a Presbyterian minister who had been bold enough to introduce this hated innovation. He was showing it in triumph to one of his parishoners, and asked her how she liked it.

"Ay, fit is handsome," said she, sadly, "but I prefer the glass just as God made it!"

U. I. I. BUILDING PROGRESS.

It has now been definitely decided that the Grand Trunk Pacific will construct its own line from Winnipeg to Portage la Prairie, and it is probable that the contract for the work will be given to Messrs. McDonald & McMillen, who are building the section from Portage la Prairie westward.

There had been negotiations between the management of the G. T. P. and Canadian Northern with a view to a joint ownership or working agreement so far as the line from Winnipeg to Portage la Prairie is concerned, but the contemplated arrangements fell through and the Portage people will be well provided with facilities in having three trunk lines connecting them with the prairie capital.

Track-laying has now been commenced by Messrs. McDonald & McMillen on their section, and General Manager Morse will fall upon a busy scene when he arrives there a few days hence. The one difficulty that the contractors appear to have to contend against is the inability to secure sufficient hands to carry the work forward sufficiently vigorously. It is expected that a solution of the difficulty will come in about three weeks' time when some thousands will be released from the harvest fields.

The section from Touchwood Hills to Saskatoon, which is being built by the Canada White Co., is expected to be graded by the end of the year, and a large number of men are at work on the grading between Saskatoon and Edmonton, a section which is in the hands of Messrs. Foley & Larson.

IT RINGS IN YOUR EARS.
That same cough is everywhere you go, deep and hollow because consumptive. First it was catarrh which could have been cured by Catarrh-one. Moral, never neglect a 'cold,' never trifle with cough, go to your druggist and get Catarrh-one. It's instant death to colds, cures them in a few minutes. Throat trouble and catarrh disappear as by magic. Catarrh-one is the great throat, nose and bronchial remedy today. Though sands use it, doctors prescribe it, why, because it does relieve quickly and cure thoroughly. Two sizes, 25c. and $1.00 at all dealers.

WHY DO THEY GO ASTRAY.
Many a young man "goes wrong" because his home is distasteful and forbidding. Where love and peace and joy should reign, fault-finding, wrangling and discord abound. He does not find in the home what his heart longs for, hence flies to the outside world for brightness and cheer. The refuge that is denied him under the parental roof, he seeks for elsewhere. And too often is it that he designs his downward course at the same time.

It out boys and young men are to be kept in our homes, there must be something in the same homes to attract them. There must be good, wholesome food, good housekeeping, good family government, good comradeship, and good—not spurious—religion.

The mother must have the moral and spiritual, as well as the mental, good of her children at heart. What wealth, or fame, or society, or welfare of our boys?

Mothers, teach your boys that no young man is safe who is disloyal to his father. (He will see, for himself, that the same is true with regard to being disloyal to his mother.) This is an ancient law, older than "the memory of man." It is a law of nature. Respect for parents, filial obedience, and filial love lies at the foundation of every character. Very few men ever broke the law of a state without first breaking the laws laid down by their parents. Disloyalty to parents paves the way for almost every other kind of disloyalty.

"I began my downward career by disobeying my parents, by disregarding their wishes and by trampling upon their love and counsel." is the confession of more than one victim who had lost manhood and all that accompanies it.—E. Bartlett Simmons, Colorado.

A MOUNTAIN OF IRON.
The most remarkable mountain in the world, in many respects, is found in the state of Durango, Mexico. It is 2,000 feet high, and its three-quarters of a mile of thickness at the base is almost entirely of solid iron substance. Speculators have tried to lease the mountain from the government, to work it as a mine, but the Mexican authorities are waiting to do this themselves, when financial arrangements can be made. It is said that the yield from the ore is eighty-seven per cent. pure iron.

Diarrhoea

MAY attack you at any time of the year, but it is more prevalent during the summer months. When this trouble attacks you, it does not pay you to experiment with untried remedies, but always procure one that has stood the test of time. Such a one is Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry. It has been on the market for 60 years and is considered by thousands of people as the best cure for all bowel complaints.

MRS. WILFRID TOMLINSON, Victoria Harbor, Ont., writes: "I always keep Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the house, knowing from past experience that it is a sure and efficient remedy in diarrhoea and kindred bowel complaints."

A FOUR-FOOTED BIRD.
A South American traveller has captured a rare bird of great interest to scientists, because it has four feet. It is known to the natives as the cigana, or gypsy bird. For many days after hatching, before it is able to fly, the young one uses its claws to climb up the bushes and trees. The front feet gradually develop into wings. The favorite haunt of this strange creature is among the huge calla-lily flowers of the tropics, in low, muddy places. In size the cigana is about as big as the ordinary pheasant. It has a weird mournful cry calculated to disconcert the traveller when he is in the midst of a wild, unfrequented country.

WINNIPEG BUILDINGS.
Winnipeg, Aug. 29.—Building returns have now reached $8,900,000, which is $100,000 in excess of the returns this time last year. Permits for the grain exchange and imperial bank have not yet been taken out, and will swell the total some $650,000 more.
