SAD DEATH.

Miss Lena Grass of Lincoln Died
Convulsions on Tuesday.

Miss Lena Grass, the nineteen year old daughter of Mr. William Grass of Lincoln, died yesterday afternoon under exceptionally sad circumstances. She was taken ill on Sunday with convulsions, and a physician who was called from the city found her in an advanced state of pregnancy, and performed an operation with the hope of saving her life. She lingered until yesterday afternoon and passed away without recovering consciousness.

The unfortunate girl was the victim of betrayal and deceit, and her sad case has aroused much sympathy in the community. She had been employed as a domestic at the residence of Mrs. (Capt.) Barker, in this city, and last fall kept company with a young man employed in the lumber woods. He visited her at her home in Lincoln during the Christmas season, and on being informed of her condition, promised to marry her. He went away soon afterwards and never returned to make good his promise.

Reports of the Dom. Coal, absorbing some steel on a basis of equivalent to 50 for common and 60 for pfd., had no effect on the market. Common iron sold at 19.

Five millions of Dominion Textile common was listed today, and the stock was offered at 55. This is an issue on which first dividend of 1 1/2 was recently declared.

SHE WAS RIGHT, AS USUAL.

Higgins Finds It Unpleasant to Argue With His Wife.

Higgins is very fond of his wife, but sometimes they have little scrappy arguments, in which Higgins invariably comes out second best, though he hates to admit it even to himself.

Not long ago Higgins thought he had "got it on" Mrs. Higgins at last so surely that she wouldn't have the last word. He came home one evening with one eye all red and inflamed and not in the best humor on that account. Mrs. Higgins became all concern.

"What on earth is the matter with your eye, Henry?" she inquired sympathetically.

"Cinder," said Higgins shortly. "Let me get it out for you."

"Already out?"

"Well, let me put something on it."

"Well, at least I'd bathe it in salt water."

"No; just let it alone, and it will get well of itself."

"Henry, do let me bathe it in salt water for you," pleaded Mrs. Higgins.

"Don't want any salt water on it, I tell you. The best thing to do for a sore eye is just to let it alone," said Higgins authoritatively.

The next day the eye was still inflamed, but Higgins resolutely declined to let any more "fool" with it. That afternoon he went down to the beach with a gay party of friends and disappeared himself with them in the surf, swimming and diving to his heart's content. At the breakfast table the next morning he noted with surprise that his eye no longer troubled him and seemed entirely well.

"You see now," he announced triumphantly to Mrs. Higgins, "my eye is cured already, and I didn't do a thing for it either."

"Yes, you did," returned Mrs. Higgins calmly. "You did exactly what I told you to do."

"I did nothing of the kind. I didn't touch it, and as a result my eye is already the same as ever. I tell you there's nothing like letting things alone."

"Didn't you go in the surf yesterday afternoon?" inquired Mrs. Higgins subtly.

"Yes, But what's that got to do with my eye?" said Higgins belligerently.

"Everything. The salt water cured it, just as I knew it would," ended Mrs. Higgins, with decision.

Higgins stalked from the room, banging the door behind him in disgust. His wife was right again, as usual.—New York Press.

THEATRICAL TEMPESTS.

The Way a Rainstorm is Produced on the Stage.

Probably not more than one person in a hundred stops to consider how a rainstorm is produced on the stage. Few perhaps have ever given the subject any serious thought.

During the coming up of the storm there is seen vast clouds of dust, the wind blows a gale, and suddenly the rain comes down in torrents. It is an effect so natural that one almost imagines the elements are genuinely on the warpath. Yet, though the rain is real water, not a person is actually drenched, because the water comes down at the very front of the stage, while the players are well back and act at all exposed to its moisture.

It might be thought that to produce a storm many intricate bits of machinery would be necessary, yet such is not the case, for the simplest devices produce the effect desired. These are some gas pipes punctured by myriads of holes, through which the water runs from small barrels, each about half full, at either end. The sound of the wind is made by a revolving barrel which touches a heavy piece of canvas in its rounds. The thunder effect is caused by the artistic manner in which a man beats a bass drum, and the gusts of dust are blown across the stage by an electric fan. The flashes of lightning come from an electric battery connected by wires which when placed in contact throw out the dazzling flashes. A metal plate, which has been specially prepared by first being heated to white heat and then scratched by a knife, is placed in a calcium light machine and gives the effect of lightning in the distance.

POETICAL DEATHS.

Welcoming the Grim Reaper With a Greeting in Verse.

There have been numerous instances of poetical deaths. The Emperor Adrian made a poetical address to his own soul as death was casting the seal of final silence over his lips, and Margaret of Austria while almost within the grasp of death in a terrific storm at sea calmly sat down and composed her epitaph in verse. The ship weathered the gale, however, and the epitaph was not needed.

Philip Strozzi when imprisoned and awaiting death on the gallows resolved to commit suicide. Before he killed himself he carved with the sword upon which a few minutes later he impaled himself the following verse from Virgil on the wall: "Rise some avenger from my blood."

The Marquis of Montrose when he was condemned to have his limbs nailed to the gates of four cities said that he was sorry that he did not have enough limbs to nail to all the cities in Europe, and this he put into beautiful verse as he was walking to his execution.

Patric, a poet of Caen, finding himself at the door of death, composed a poem, and De Barreaux, it is said, wrote while on his deathbed a well known sonnet which was soon afterwards translated into English.

ODD COURTS MARTIAL.

Solemn Farces That Have Been Enacted in the British Navy.

It is a rule in the British navy that when a ship is cast away or otherwise lost a court martial must sit in order to apportion the blame. Sometimes these courts really try and condemn those that are held to be responsible. At other times their duties are, from the very nature of the catastrophe, more or less nominal.

Thus, when the Serpent was lost off the Spanish coast, a court martial assembled and solemnly "tried" three ordinary bluejackets, the sole survivors, although they of course had no more to do with the error in navigation which led up to the catastrophe than the man in the moon.

A similar solemn farce was enacted after the loss of the Captain in the bay of Biscay, when 483 officers and men lost their lives. In this case a gunner named James May, one of the eighteen who escaped from the wreck, was the nominal "culprit." The verdict was that the loss of the ship was due to instability and faulty construction. This really amounted to a vote of censure on Mr. Cowper Coles, the designer, but as he went down with the upgaily monster he had created he was beyond the reach of either blame or praise.

On another occasion a small "middy" of thirteen years of age was put upon his trial, and once it is said, a court martial assembled on a cat, which chanced to be the sole living thing found aboard a derelict frigate.
