A DEAL IN BANANAS.

No like da skeenny olda man
Dat com' to dees fanutta stan'
Today an' buy da wan banan'.
He mak' me seek!
Def evra customer ees go
For maka treecks an' talka so Like heem, you bat my life, I no Gat reecha queeck.

Wal, deess man he com' an' say:
"How moocha for banan' today?"
An' so I tal heem right away.
"Ees two for fi."
"O my, I mus' be gattin' deef
Or you ees talka like da t'leff!"
He say to me, an' look as eef
He gona cry.

"Ees two for fi," I say agen.
He shak' hees head at me an' den
He tal me, "Mak' eet fi' for ten An' tak da mon'."
"All right," I say, "I guess weell do."
Den "Fi' for ten ees wan for two,"
He say, "Here ees two cent for you,
I taka wan!"

He tak' da beegges' wan of all!
Ha, w'at you theenka dat for gall?
He ees so meana man, so small,
He mak' me seek.
Def evra customer ees go

Times.

There Were Limits.

Nervous Old Lady—Do people lose their lives here very often?
Old Salt—No, mum; only about once!
—Tatler.

His Dire Threat.

There was determination stamped on his brow.
"Refused, eh?" he hissed, snapping his words like the explosions of a motorcycle. "Then I shall turn on the gas."

The beautiful girl swooned. When she recovered she found him sitting in an easy chair reading the sporting news.

"Ah, you didn't turn on the gas after all, did you?" she asked in trembling tones.

"Yes, I did," he replied coldly.

"You—you turned on the gas, Harold?"

"Of course I did. How could I light it if I didn't turn it on?"

And then she asked his forgiveness and accepted him on the spot.—Detroit Tribune.

Puzzled.

The noted foreigner was perplexed.
"Zis was a strange countree," he remarked, with a frown. "The longer I stay ze less I understand."

"What is the trouble now, count?"
asked his American friend.

"Mooch, monsieur. I get on ze train.
Ze conductor carry me past my station.
I get wild. I wave my cane, I stamp my foot, I shout! Zen ze conductor grab me and hold me. When I ask him why he hold me he say because he think I am off. Ha, ha! He say I am off, and zat is ze very reason why I raise all ze noise—because I am not off, but on."

Made All the Difference.

The June bride frowned.
"These tomatoes," she said, "are just twice as dear as those across the street. Why is it?"

"Ah, ma'am, these—"
And the grocer smiled in pity of her ignorance.

"—these are hand picked."
She blushed. "Of course," she added hastily, "I might have known. Give me a bushel, please."—New York Press.

Serious Handicap.

"Somebody ought to talk to Young-fellow. He'll never get on in politics if he keeps on antagonizing the powers that be."

"But he doesn't. He is very careful to do all that is required of him."

"That's all very well, but it won't help him while his wife persists in copying the boss' wife's new dresses."

—Baltimore American.

A Long Felt Want.

"I hear you're trying to invent a new style of cornet," said Tootie.

"Yes," replied Neddore. "I'm at work on one with a reflex action."

"What's the idea?"

"If I can get it working right it will blow the head off any one that tries to use it."—Philadelphia Press.

Lots Like Him.

"I suppose you'll send your wife to the shore again this summer?"

"Nix. Can't afford it."

"Why, she isn't extravagant, is she?"

"Not at all. But last summer, all the time she was away, I spent a hundred a week."—Des Moines Register.

A Curtain Lecture.

Friend—What is that you are writing so busily, Elise?

Elise (newly married)—A curtain lecture for my husband. I'm not going to sit up until it pleases him to come home.—Meggendorfer Blatter.

A Hard Proposition.

"Charlie Choofer ran into a fat man with his new car."

"Any damage?"

"Yes, one lamp was broken and a mad guard bent, and Charlie thinks of suing the fat man."

No Landlady in the Case.

"I wish I were an elephant?"

"Why?"

"So that I could move my trunk without everybody kicking."—Houston Post.

SELECTIONS

UPTON SINCLAIR'S MENU.

It Doesn't Appeal to Epicures, but He Vouches For Its Efficiency.

In view of the widespread interest manifested these days in the perplexing question of dietetics the following communication of Upton Sinclair, the author, to the New York Times is submitted for consideration and comment:

Apropos of your discussion of Professor Chittenden's sample diet for business men I am moved to present the following sample of the regimen which has proved proper for a man of twenty-eight who weighs 136 pounds and works fairly hard:

Breakfast (8 a. m.)
One cup of cool water (no ice.)
Half a dozen uncooked prunes.
Dinner (2:30)
One lamb chop, or plate of soup.
One small potato.
One saucer of some other vegetable.
Two slices whole wheat bread.
Four one inch cubes of butter.
One saucer of rice pudding, custard or fruit.
Supper (6 p. m.)
Slice of bread and butter.
Saucer of uncooked cereal and cream.
Saucer of fruit and cream.

Three meals of this sort if cheerfully and slowly put away will absolutely cure dyspepsia, headache and constipation. If the person who eats them will also abstain from too much money making, will sleep with his windows open, take a cold bath in the morning and play some outdoor game one hour a day he will find himself forever immune from colds and sore throat, stomach, liver and kidney troubles, alcoholic, nicotine and other abnormal cravings, nervous disorders, insomnia, ill temper, misanthropy, philosophic pessimism and political conservatism. It is cordially recommended to all readers of the Times.

UPTON SINCLAIR.

The Lottery in Austria.

"In Austria-Hungary," writes a Vienna correspondent to a paper in Hamburg, "playing in the various lotteries is so general that the people who do not buy a 'chance' or a fraction of one for every drawing are exceptions.
When a man makes his calculations for the year's expenditures a certain amount is charged to the lottery account with the same belief as to the necessity for the investment as though it were rent, coal or church dues. In addition to the individual playing many men and women are members of lottery associations, to which they contribute a certain sum annually, for which they participate with the other members in the various drawings.
Sometimes when people of moderate means have gambled for years without seeing any return for their investment they stop. But there are thousands who have not yet made the first step who are recalled to the ranks by items such as this, which appeared last week in a Vienna paper: 'The first prize in the Hungarian class lottery, valued at 600,000 marks, was won by a lottery association in Warsaw.' The association has twenty-four members, all poor."

Bootblack Shrewd Business Man.

The sight of a man borrowing $100 from the bootblack in an uptown hotel barber shop the other Sunday morning rather startled some of the customers who were seated in the place. The man that borrowed the $100 is a race track man and was only temporarily embarrassed. The customers didn't pay as much attention to him as they did to the size of the roll that the boot-black carried. This bootblack, by the way, seldom musses up his hands over a pair of shoes. He has three boys to look after that work, and his duties consist of seeing to it that customers get to chairs in proper turn. His easiest money, however, comes from the sale of collars. A lot of folk in the neighborhood of the hotel on Sunday and other mornings haven't been home the night before. They know that collars are to be had at the barber shop.
Of course the customer discards his dirty collar, and it is gathered up by the bootblack, who has the soiled ones laundered and sells them over again.
He charges 25 cents for each collar, no matter what it cost originally.—New York Sun.

American Automobiles.

America now leads the world in the manufacture, sale and use of automobiles. This is the declaration of a French expert who has been keeping a record of the automobile business.
Five years ago the United States built only 314 automobiles of all classes, while at the same time France built 23,711 machines. Last year the production in the United States was 60,000, in France 55,000, in England 23,000, in Germany 22,000, in Italy 19,000 and Belgium 12,000. In nine years in the countries named there have been manufactured, sold and used 550,000 automobiles, representing more than $1, 000,000,000 of money.

Childish Wall Street.

There is no more childish place in the country than Wall street. Stories that are absolutely irrational are accepted there with the utmost gravity.
Even men great in finance and politics accept them with the credence that one would look for only in primitive men or in children. Bankers, brokers and investors all talk at the present time as if some sort of magic had been at work, as if some evil spirit had cast a spell and as if it had become necessary for us to rub the ring which calls up powerful genii to undo the work of malign witchcraft.—Van Norden Magazine.

WHEN THAT COLD COMES.

How is it to be cured? This method is simplicity itself. Rub the chest and throat well with Neroline, use it as a gargle and take some in hot water before retiring along with one of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. Next morning finds you refreshed, free from cold and bright as a dollar. These household remedies are wonderfully successful, and certainly won't fail in Pine Wood and Steel.

Weight for weight, pine wood is stronger than steel.

Green Ants.
