THE STOCK MARKET.

Dealings Quiet Today and Undertone Dull. HERALD

Montreal, July 11.—(Special)—Stocks were generally quiet today. But some selling of Dominion Coal depressed the price a couple of points to 56.

The rest of the market was not able for the same soft undertone as has characterized dealings for the past few days.

Dominion Iron issues were neglected. Some Montreal Power sold at 83½ to 90; Mackay 66½ to 70. Other trading was on fractional lots and non-speculative bonds.

THE LATEST.

By express today Farrell Bros. received another lot of Men's White Vests, which are without doubt the latest that have been shown this season, also a small lot of the new "coin spot" neckwear which is so much in demand at the present. Stylish dressers would do well to examine these goods as early as possible as the stock won't last long.

ON A FISHING TRIP.

A party composed of Messrs. Geo. D. and Fred B. Pratt, of New York, and J. L. Kimmer, of Stanton, Pa., arrived here by the noon train today and are guests at the Queen. They are on their way to the headwaters of the Little Southwest Miramichi to spend the next fortnight in fishing and photographing live game. Mr. George D. Pratt has been a regular visitor to New Brunswick for many years and regards it as the best game country on the continent. It is Mr. Fred Pratt's first visit to the province, but Mr. Kimmer has hunted big game on the Miramichi on several occasions. The famous Pratt Institute of Brooklyn was founded by the father of the Messrs. Pratt.

"They tell me you kissed Miss Sonnet, the actress, on yesterday's automobile excursion."

"Yes; that is true."

"Indeed! And how did you—ah—find her?"

"Miss Sonnet has a marked literary taste."

"You women," complained Mr. Knox, "are forever discussing the faults of your neighbors. If you'd only gossip about their good points it would be more edifying."

"Perhaps," replied his wife, "but who'd care to listen to us?"—Catholic Standard.

Tipping the Cook.

In old times to dine with a nobleman cost more in tips to the servants than a club dinner. Lord Poor, a well named Irish peer, excused himself from dining with the Duke of Ormond upon the ground that he could not afford it. "If you will give me the guinea I have to pay your cook, I will come as often as you choose to ask me"—which was accordingly done. The duke, however, and not the pluck to stop the tipping practice. Lord Taaffe, a general officer in the Austrian service, did what he could. He always attended his guests to the door. When they put their hands into their pockets he said: "No. If you do give it, give it to me, for it was I who paid for your dinner." To Sir Timothy Waldo must be given the credit of putting an end to the monstrous practice. After dinner with the Duke of Newcastle he put a crown into the cook's hand. It was rejected. "I do not take silver, sir." "Very good. And I do not give gold." This outrageous rejoinder "caught on," and the day of vails to cooks was over.—St. James' Gazette.

Taking the Initiative.

There is a certain satisfaction in taking the enemy unawares on his own ground, in dowsing him with his own weapons. President Polk evidently took comfort in his method for mitigating the hand shake, that curse of the chief executive office, and he must have chuckled when he wrote in his diary the bit which is given in James Schouler's "Historical Briefs": "If a man surrendered his arm to be shaken by one horizontally, by another perpendicularly and by another with a strong grip, he could not fail to suffer severely by it. But if he would shake and not be shaken, grip and not be gripped, taking care always to squeeze the hand of his adversary as hard as the adversary squeezed him, he would suffer no inconvenience by it. I can generally anticipate a strong grip from a strong man. I take advantage of him by being quicker than he and seizing him by the tips of his fingers. This is stated playfully, but it is all true.

Former Instruments of Torture.

Instead of gymnastics or games, instruments of torture were used for modeling the figure of the young lady of 1831. An English writer of that year says that "could the modern schoolroom be preserved it would pass for a refined inquisition. There would be found stocks for the fingers (the cheloplast) and pulleys for the neck, with weights attached." Fanny Kemble, to whom nature had been by no means unkindly, was found wanting in deportment, and she writes that, she wore a "back board made of steel, covered with red morocco, which consisted of a flat piece placed on my back and strapped down to my waist with a belt and secured at the top by two epaulets strapped over my shoulders. From the middle of this there rose a steel rod or spine with a steel collar, which encircled my throat, fastened behind." The machine proved a failure, and she was put under the tuition of a drill sergeant, who did for her all that was required.—"Social England."

Travel Free.

"Conductor," said the gasping passenger, vainly trying to raise a window, "there are at least a billion microbes in this car."

"You ought to be able to stand that if the company can," growled the street car conductor. "We don't get a blamed cent for carrying 'em."

Lies Low.

"Of course she doesn't like discussions about ages."

"No. Usually when she's queried about hers she just says nothing, but lies low."

"Yes, or if she says anything she lies low."

Convenient.

"So you have three pairs of glasses, professor?"

"Yes. One pair to read with, another for nearsightedness and a third pair to look for the other two with."

Laws are made by old people and by men. Youths and women want the exceptions, old people the rules.—Goethe.

Disproportionate.

"See here," cried the cat, "are you really determined to drown me?"

"I am," replied the man. "You killed our canary, and I believe in 'a life for a life!'"

"But you're bent upon taking nine lives for a life!"—Catholic Standard and Times.
