THE PREMIER'S DUTY.

Sir Wilfred Laurier is not the man to flinch from duty however disagreeable it may be. If there are objectionable men in his councils they will have to make room for more desirable advisers of His Excellency. It didn't take Sir Wilfred long to dispose of Mr. Tarte for instance, when he grew rebellious and sought to commit the government to an objectionable policy, and in later instances the premier has shown that he can act and act promptly in a crisis.

A great many earnest Liberals feel that at the present time, the federal government could be greatly strengthened by a change in some of the heads of departments.

There are at least two vacancies in the cabinet which must be almost immediately filled, and the creation of others and the calling of younger men to the cabinet would be hailed with satisfaction by the Liberal party all over the country. Sir Wilfred will doubtless receive lots of advice; he is getting it from even the Tory party, but he may be depended upon to do what is best, not only from a party standpoint but for the interests of the country.

The Liberal party has plenty of strong, clean, capable men to fill the cabinet offices, to the satisfaction of the people and Sir Wilfred himself will be satisfied with nothing less than a body of colleagues who will command the confidence and respect of the country and the enthusiastic support of the Liberal party.

Sir Wilfred has been looking after the affairs of the empire and of Canada especially during his European travels, and now that he is home in excellent health, and with the plaudits of his fellow-countrymen ringing in his ears, he will soon be putting on his apron and rolling up his sleeves to do some necessary cabinet repairing.

LAURIER'S PREFERENCE.

It was that aggressive Conservative newspaper the Montreal Star, which in its enthusiasm at the great success of Sir Wilfred Laurier's mission at London and exuberance over his return home, nominated the premier for a seat in the House of Lords and Canada's representative in the High Commissioner's office at London.

Modest Laurier however shatters the Star's plans by declaring that he desires no further honor than the premiership of Canada, and when he is done with that he wants to spend his remaining days at Ottawa, preferring a place on the Ottawa Improvement Association to the position to which the Star has nominated him.

There is no doubt Sir Wilfred can remain premier of Canada as long as he cares to, or at least as long as his health and strength permits him to occupy that exalted position, and he craves nothing better than the unstinted allegiance and affection of his fellow countrymen which are extended to him in such generous quantities.

The enthusiasm with which he has been greeted on his arrival home, the great popular demonstrations at Quebec and Montreal ending up with the joyous welcome at Ottawa, have warmed the premier's heart to his native land and show him that in spite of the malevolence of the attacks on him by the Tory press and politicians he easily retains the admiration and confidence of the great mass of the people of Canada, who when opportunity offers will record their opinion by extending to him and his government a renewal of place and power.

No statesman who has ever ruled Canada—not even Sir John A. Macdonald in his palmiest days has enjoyed to as great a degree the allegiance and the affection vouchsafed to Laurier by his grateful fellow countrymen, and the Liberal party, happy in the possession of such an able and distinguished leader and the country with such a patriot at its head, are to be heartily congratulated.

Laurier sees Canada advance by leaps and bounds under his administration of the government and his country's progress, prosperity and happiness delight his heart and arouse him to renewed effort in his great and successful labors of nation building.

World wide fame, the admiration and devotion of not only Canada, but the whole British Empire, have not puffed him up, nor made him forget that his first love and duty is for Canada which he is serving so faithfully and well.

A PROMPT DENIAL.

SLUG TWO

Unfortunately for Mr. Hazen and his friends who have been bewailing the alleged awful condition of New Brunswick finances, on the strength of distorted reports of a newspaper interview with Premier Robinson, that gentleman has positively denied the accuracy of the statements attributed to him, and declares that the province in financial matters is in good shape.

The Premier says he never for one moment hinted at selling crown lands to raise funds, but on the contrary, he declared that it was and is the settled policy of the government to retain absolute ownership and control of its valuable assets.

Mr. Hazen and his newspaper organs are left high and dry on the beach by the Premier's prompt and unequivocal denial of the false premises upon which his opponents have built their latest fabrications against the government.

"E Pluribus Unum."

We are indebted to John Adams for our national motto, "E Pluribus Unum." While he was minister to England Sir John Prestwick suggested it to Mr. Adams as a good motto to indicate the union of the colonies. It was submitted to congress and adopted by act of congress June, 1782. The eagle in its beak bears a ribbon on which is the motto. In the early days of its use the eagle bore also in its talons a bundle of thirteen arrows, but when, in 1841, a new seal was made to take the place of the old one, which had become worn, only six arrows were placed in the talons. Whether this change was ordered by law or not is not known. The old Latin motto was in use in England as far back as 1730 on the Gentleman's Magazine.

Roasting Coffee.

In Norway, where superb coffee is made, a bit of butter is added to the beans while they are roasting in the covered shovel used there for that purpose. In France as well a piece of butter the size of a walnut is put with three pounds of the coffee beans, and also a dessertspoonful of powdered sugar. This brings out both flavor and scent and, moreover, gives the slight caramel taste which will be remembered as a pleasing part of French coffee.

The Bloody Meadow.

Tewkesbury, where a famous battle was fought during the war of the roses, is in Gloucestershire at the confluence of the Avon and the Severn and 180 miles from London. The battle was fought on the bloody meadow just outside the modern town, and, according to local tradition, one night in every year on the anniversary of the conflict the adherents of the white and red roses meet and fight the battle over again.—London Academy.

Doesn't Know It All.

"What do you study at school, my little man?"
"I am studying the history of France, sir."
"Indeed. What can you tell me about Charlemagne?"
"Oh, sir, we have only got as far as Adam and Eve."

Can't Be Coined.

Gally—Why don't you cheer up? Every cloud has a silver lining. Dumps—That may all be, but did you ever see anybody that could coin it?

The London Ladies' Field has discovered that "successful people are usually quite devoid of humor."

No Hessians Need Apply.

Aunt Sally Linnekin was looking admiringly at a collection of souvenir postal cards brought back from Europe by one of her summer boarders.

"Now, this one," said he, showing a handsome card, "is from Hesse, where those Hessian soldiers came from, you know."

Aunt Sally put down the cards and rose up in intense indignation.

"Land sakes!" she exclaimed in horror. "Did you go there?"

No Secret.

"Well, well," exclaimed Miss Passay, "so she's twenty-five today. I guess it would surprise her if I should tell her I was the same age."

"Oh, no," replied Miss Knox; "she knows that, of course."

"She knows that I'm twenty-five?"

"No; that you were."
