Marlanx fell back amazed and stunned. At this juncture Baldos entered the room. Quinnox handed him an envelope, telling him that it was from the princess and that he was to repair at once to the castle. Baldos glanced at the handwriting, and his face lit up proudly.

"I am ready to go, sir," he said, passing the Iron Count with a most disconcerting smile on his face.

CHAPTER XXIII.

BALDOS started off at once for the castle, his heart singing. In the darkness of the night he kissed the message which had come to him from "her highness." The envelope had been closed with the official seal of Yette, princess of Graustark, and was sacred to the eyes of any one save the man to whom it was directed. The words it contained were burned deep in his brain:

You are ordered to report for duty in the castle. Come at once. Her highness has sent an official command to Colonel Quinnox. Count Marlanx has been here. You are not expected to desert until you have seen me. There is an underground passage somewhere.

Baldos went alone and swiftly. The note to Colonel Quinnox had been imperative. He was to serve as an inner guard until further orders. Some one, it was reported, had tried to enter Miss Calhoun's room from the outside during the rainstorm of the previous night, and a special guard was to be stationed near the door. All of this was unknown to Baldos, but he did not ask for any explanations.

He was halfway to the castle when the sharp report of a gun startled him. A bullet whizzed close to his ear! Baldos broke into a crouching run, but did not change his course. He knew that the shot was intended for him and that his mission was to prevent him from reaching the castle. The attendants at the castle door admitted him, panting and excited, and he was taken immediately to the enchanted boudoir of the princess, which but few men were fortunate enough to enter. There were three women in the room.

"I am here to report, your highness," said he, bowing low before the real princess, with a smile upon his flushed face.

"You are prompt," said the princess. "What have you to report, sir?" "That an attempt has just been made to kill a member of the castle guard," he coolly answered.

"Impossible!"

"I am quite certain of it, your highness. The bullet almost clipped my ear."

"Good heavens!" gasped the listeners. Then they eagerly plied him with more agitated questions than he could answer.

"And did you not pursue the wretch?" cried the princess.

"No, your highness. I was commanded to report to you at once. Only the success of the assassin could have made me—well, hesitate," said he calmly.

"A soldier has but to obey."

"Do you think there was a deliberate attempt to kill you?" asked the Countess Dagmar. Beverly Calhoun was dumb with consternation.

"I cannot say, madame. Possibly it was an accidental discharge. One should not make accusations unsupported. If you have no immediate need of my services, your highness, I will ask you to grant me leave of absence for half an hour. I have a peculiar longing to investigate." There was a determined gleam in his eyes.

"No, no!" cried Beverly. "Don't you dare to go out there again. You are to stay right here in the castle, sir. We have something else for you to do. It was that awful old Marlanx who shot at you. He!"

"I left General Marlanx in Colonel Quinnox's quarters, Miss Calhoun," interposed Baldos grimly. "He could not have fired the shot. For two or three nights, your highness, I have been followed and dogged with humiliating persistence by two men wearing the uniforms of castle guards. They do not sleep at the barracks. May I ask what I have done to be submitted to such treatment?" There was a trace of poorly concealed indignation in his voice.

"I assure you that this is news to me," said Yette in amazement.

"I am being watched as if I were a common thief," he went on boldly.

"These men are not your agents; they are not the agents of Graustark. May I be permitted to say that they are spies set upon me by a man who has an object in disgracing me? Who that man is I leave to your royal conjecture."

"Marlanx?"

"Yes, your highness. He bears me a deadly grudge and yet he fears me. I know full well that he and his agents have built a strong case against me. They are almost ready to close in upon me, and they will have false evidence so craftily prepared that even my truest friends may doubt my loyalty to you and to the cause I serve. Before God, I have been true to my oath. I am loyal to Graustark. It was a sorry day when I left the valley and—"

"Oh," cried Beverly pitiously, "don't say that!"

"Alas, Miss Calhoun, it is true," said he sadly. "I am pained up here where I cannot fight back. Treason is laid against me. But, beyond all this, I have permitted my loyalty to mislead my ambition. I have aspired to something I can cherish, but never possess. Better that I never should have tasted of the unattainable than to have the cup withdrawn just as its sweetness begins to intoxicate."

He stood before them, pale with suppressed emotion. The women of Graustark looked involuntarily at Beverly, who sat cold and voiceless, staring at the face of the guard. She knew what he meant; she knew that something was expected of her. A word from her and he would understand that he had not tasted of the unattainable. In one brief moment she saw that she had encouraged him, that she actually had proffered him the cup from which he had begun to sip the bitterness. Pride and love were waging a conflict in this hapless southern girl's heart. But she was silent. She could not say the

Every man has his price and some have two.

Vanity is the mirror that reflects many a fool.

Lemon juice will whiten frosting, cranberry or strawberry will color it pink, and the grated rind of an orange strained through a cloth will color it yellow.

The white cinder that you can produce to dust with the finger is what I clean my spoons and polish my tinware with.

Powdered borax seems to be more thoroughly endorsed than any other remedy for croton-bugs and cockroaches. But it will not be of much use unless used plentifully and persistently.

To dispose of dry bread, slice it, taking off the crust; dip first in milk sweetened and flavored, then in a well beaten egg; fry it, and strew sugar over it as you take it from the pan.

He—Have you ever really hated a man? She—Once. I tried for a week to make him propose, and he wouldn't. He was just horrid!

Amelia—Herbert, dear, your office is on Orange street, isn't it?

Herbert—Yes, why?

Amelia—That's what I told papa. He made such a funny mistake about you the other day. He said he'd been looking you up in Brad street.

Mrs. Coburger—It isn't right to charge Freddie with taking that money out of your pocket. Why don't you accuse me?

Coburger—Because it wasn't all taken.

Pardon me, but could I see the thief that was arrested last night? a man asked the sergeant.

Really, sir, you cannot; what communication would you like to make to him?

Oh, nothing; it is only that, as it was my house he robbed, I wanted to ask how he managed to enter without waking my wife. When I come home late at night I never succeed in doing so.

Why are you rising the price of milk two cents, asked the housewife, grimly.

Well, you know, returned the milkman, winter is coming on, and—

Oh, I see, resumed the woman, not softening in manner, the water will not be needed for making ice.

Reginald de Koven, the composer, tells of a grocer and a druggist who attended a Wagner concert. As the program did not please them, they began talking on music in general and on Wagner in particular.

Another example of the fact that every man wants to do something out of his line, said the druggist.

That's right, asserted the grocer. Now, I'm a grocer, but I've always wanted to be a banker.

When a ring happens to become tightly fixed on the finger, take a piece of common twine, soap it thoroughly, and then wind it tightly around the finger. The twine should commence at the point of the finger, and be continued until the ring is reached, and the end of the twine forced through the ring. If the string is then unwound, the ring is almost sure to come off the finger.

A piece of horseradish, put into a jar of pickles, will keep the vinegar from losing its strength.

Many houses would be more enjoyable did they contain less furniture. The contents, like fruit trees, at times, need pruning, for furniture is apt to accumulate.

If the ladies desiring to restore color in certain dress goods will put vinegar in the rinsing-water when washing blue dress goods, especially fine flannels, they will find it restores them to their original color, even though they have faded badly from the sun, or from washing with soap.

Dr. Wood's NORWAY PINE SYRUP

is rich in the lung-healing virtues of the Norway Pine Tree, skillfully combined with Wild Cherry Bark and the soothing and expectorant properties of other pectoral herbs and barks. It is a pleasant, safe and effectual medicine for Coughs and Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Pain in the Chest, Asthma, Bronchitis, Croup, Whooping Cough, Quinsy and all troubles of the Throat and Lungs.

A single dose will convince you that it will stop the cough, soothe the throat, and start you on the road to recovery.

Be sure and do not accept a substitute for Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. The genuine is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark, and the price 25 cents.

Miss C. M. Woodcock, Kinmount, Ont., writes: "For some time I suffered from a lingering cough. I was afraid it would turn to consumption, and, as I had tried many remedies and found no cure I asked my father to get me a bottle of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup. When I had taken that bottle I was so much better I got three more, and I am now completely cured."

A clothier states that the proper way to wash a flannel shirt, is to submerge the garment in hot soap water, never rubbing it, and put it repeatedly through a wringer. The garment should never be wrung with the hands, and never put in cold water.

Dishes browned by use may be cleansed by letting them remain half or three-quarters of an hour in boiling soda-water.

The great secret of French cooking is a knowledge of the variety of food to be had, plenty of time to prepare the food, and a slow fire. American cooks are in such a hurry, that when they prepare a meal, they imagine that what is necessary is plenty of fuel and a roaring fire. With meats this simply bakes or incinerates the fibres, instead of permitting the juices to perform their functions. And this "hurry-up" system is what is slowly perhaps, but surely, making of us a race of dyspeptics.

That ugly iron rust will depart when treated with cream of tartar. Tie a little of the powder in the stained parts, and boil a few moments in clear water.
