FEARED NOT KITCHENER.

Brilliant Career of Young French-Canadian, Sir Percy Girouard.

The approval by the King of the appointment of Sir Percy Girouard to be High Commissioner of Nigeria brings the young French-Canadian of whom Britain is so proud once more into the public eye.

Sir Percy Girouard, who is just under 40 years of age, is one of "Kitchener's young men," and his brilliant career forms a striking testimonial to the great general's remarkable knack for knowing a good man at sight.

At 23 he was traffic manager of the Royal Arsenal at Woolwich, where Lord Kitchener's keen eye detected him as the very man for the construction of the Soudan Railway in the Dongola expedition. With wonderful inventiveness and resource he laid a line across 500 miles of desert for the advance on Khartoum, and the world immediately recognized him as the finest railway engineer the service had produced.

Anticipations Justified. His subsequent career more than justified anticipations. At 29 he was awarded the D.S.O., and at 33 he was a K.C.M.G. And still on the sunny side of 40, he has ample opportunities of enhancing an already unrivalled reputation.

He is a French-Canadian, the son of a Justice of the Supreme Court of Canada. He had a share in building the Canadian Pacific Railway before entering the Royal Engineers. After his Woolwich and Egyptian experiences he became Kitchener's railway chief throughout the South African war. It is said that he was the only person on the staff who did not stand in fear of K.

On one occasion, in Egypt, the general thought a railway was getting on too slowly. "You must go quicker," said Lord Kitchener. "I can't," replied Girouard. "I am not being properly supplied with materials." "I have no use for a man who says 'can't'," returned the general. He sent Girouard to Cairo. Within a week he recalled Girouard and admitted that he was wrong.

When "K." began his South African campaign, Girouard was the first man for whom he telegraphed. The incarnation of energy and force of will, Girouard triumphed over the most formidable obstacles in the way of transporting our troops in the face of the swiftly moving enemy. He spent every hour, day and night, fitting about in the trains directing this arduous, puzzling work.

From North to South. Lord Kitchener was delighted with the result, and Girouard's reward was his lieutenant-colonelcy and the K.C.M.G.

After the war, Sir Percy was appointed Commissioner of Railways in the Transvaal and Orange Free State, on which occasion Lord Kitchener paid him this striking tribute: "He has been my principal adviser in the numerous and intricate questions pertaining to railway administration in South Africa. He is an officer of brilliant ability and I wish him success as head of a great civil department." When he gave up his important post in 1904, a gratifying proof of his popularity with those who worked under him reached him in the shape of a silver casket presented by 2,700 employees of the line.

He has been employed on the staff of the recent Fourth Army Corps during the past few years.

Sir Percy Girouard married in 1903 the eldest daughter of Sir Richard Solomon, legal adviser to the Transvaal Administration at Pretoria, who lately surrendered to the Boer party, and is bidding for the Premiership of the Transvaal.

The Minister of Railways.

Hon. H. R. Emmerson, the man who declared he is going to make the Intercolonial pay, is a New Brunswick statesman, and received his training in statecraft in the Maritime Province before he entered the larger field. He was born in Sunbury County in 1853, the son of a Baptist minister. Educated at various academies in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick and at Boston University, he graduated from the latter institution in 1877, and was called to the Bar of his native Province the year following. He made an able attorney, and soon built up a reputation as a leading practitioner in New Brunswick. But all his attention was not devoted to law. Mr. Emmerson became interested in the petroleum and copper industries of his Province, and took an active part in developing them. He entered into politics in 1887, when he unsuccessfully contested Westmoreland against Mr. Josiah Wood, who has since been made a Senator. Next year he entered the Legislature, and soon after as a member of the Provincial Legislative Council, which in abolishing the body. He was while a member of the Provincial Upper House that he entered the Blair Ministry as president of the Executive Council. In 1892 he became Commissioner of Public Works, and in 1897, on the resignation of Hon. James Mitchell from the Premiership, became head of the Provincial Government. Three years longer he spent in the Provincial House, and then entered the Dominion Parliament, succeeding his old chief as Minister of Railways in July, 1903.

Grand Banks' Fisheries.

In all, about a thousand vessels of different nationalities, crewed by 20,000 men, are dispersed over the Grand Banks during the long and pleasant summer days, the height of the fishing season. The region is covered with the Arctic flocks until well up in April, and scarcely has it cleared away than from the countless Cis-Atlantic harbors the fishing craft flock out, driving before the robust winds with full sail set, like flocks of gulls on the wing, speeding for the best trawling ground about the Bank. Here, on a bright, sunlit noctide, the marine picture that is presented is unequalled elsewhere in the world. Far as the eye can reach in every direction is spread an animated panorama. The whole horizon is dotted with the sails of the "bankers"—white, black, brown, red and motley.

Skyscrapers For Egypt.

American skyscrapers from nine to ten stories high are to be erected near the pyramids of Gizeh, in Egypt. Permission for the erection of homes and hotels in the great plain extending from Eskebich to the Nile and covered with ancient sphinxes and structures has been granted by the Egyptian government. Several associations have been formed for the building of large hotels in this district.
