DR. NORT'S CHOIR.

The Accomplishment of Great Things Without the Aid of Traditions.

When Dr. Vogt was tendered a banquet by the Clef Club of Toronto, one of the speakers pointed out that the success of the Mendelssohn Choir had been remarkable from the very fact that it had no traditions. The great Bach Choir of Leipzig and other organizations of similar type in Europe have had a long and glorious history. Some of the greatest composers have been proud to wield the baton for them, and in fact, they have had a vital and always interesting part in the musical development of the world. Such noble traditions undoubtedly should inspire enthusiasm and devotion to the society. But the Mendelssohn Choir without any traditions, has won a standing equal to that of these notable choruses of Europe. And all this proves that good things need not be old and stricken in years. For example, the Goulay Piano is not over four years old, yet already it has taken a deserved place as the leading piano of Canada. It is constructed with the greatest care by expert workmen. Only the finest material is used, and the result is an instrument which will compare favorably with the most notable pianos of the world. Musicians all over Canada, in South Africa, an even in China, unite in approval of its rich and luscious tone. Its staying-in-tune abilities, and its durable construction. The Goulay has been able to win recognition without the aid of traditions; therefore, it is worthy to be bracketed with the Mendelssohn Choir.
