OSCILLATING CANDLE.

It Works Like the Walking Beam of a Watt Engine.

The little motor represented herewith operates not by steam nor by electricity nor by compressed air. It possesses no boiler, no cylinder, no piston and consists simply of a stearin candle. Let the reader take a candle and perform the experiment for himself. Insert in the center of the candle and at right angles with it the heads of two pins previously heated. These pins will constitute the axis of the motor and are to be placed upon the edge of two wineglasses. If the two ends of the candles are lighted they will burn, and a drop of stearin will fall into one of the plates placed beneath in order to receive it. The equilibrium of the scale beam will be broken, and the other end of the candle will descend, causing the end that has just lost the first drop of stearin to rise. This oscillatory motion will cause several drops to fall from the end that has just descended and which in its turn becomes the lighter and will therefore rise, while the other descends, and the oscillatory motion, slight at first, will take on a greater and greater amplitude, the candle, slightly inclined upon the horizon at first, finally taking a nearly vertical position. There is nothing more interesting than to watch this oscillatory motion, which does not cease unless one blows out the two flames or the two candles are entirely consumed—that is to say, at the end of half an hour. If now it is desired to utilize the motion of the candle while it is in operation it may be connected by a thin iron wire with small figures cut out of cardboard and jointed, to which it will give a to and fro motion. It may be considered as the walking beam of a Watt engine, and to each extremity may be connected a small piston moving in a vertical cylinder. Finally and more simply there may be fixed to the axis by means of pins, which will keep it at a distance in order to prevent the contact of the flames, a strip of light cardboard, representing a plank, to the extremities of which may be glued two figures that will play a seesaw and thus render the experiment still more attractive to the young.

THE CANDLE IN OPERATION.

A PATERNAL CRITICISM.

Sir Henry Irving's Comment on His Son's Early Hamlet.

H. B. Irving, son of Sir Henry Irving, was not educated primarily for the stage. Studying for the profession of barrister, while he was still in college he took part in amateur theatricals. An amusing story is told of one of his earlier interpretations of the difficult role of Hamlet. On this particular and early occasion, however, Sir Henry was "out in front," and after the performance several, including his son, crowded about him for an expression of opinion.
"What do you think of Smith as Polonius?" asked one.
"Good, very good," murmured Sir Henry in his quiet, kindly way.
"And Miss Blank as Ophelia?"
"Good, very good," again murmured Sir Henry.
"And Jones as the king?"
"Good, very good," repeated Sir Henry.

"And Thomas as Horatio?"
"Good, very good," came the answer. So the entire cast was gone through with the exception of the principal character, and each received the same precise, neat criticism, "good, very good." Then there was a slight pause, an awkward pause, after which the son, who had been waiting eagerly and anxiously for his father's opinion about his acting, managed to pluck up enough courage to stammer, "But, father—what did you think of—the rest of the cast?"
Sir Henry looked blandly at his son and then remarked dryly, "Are you sure that you want to be an actor, my son?"

MAN AND MONEY.

The Change That Often Comes With the Acquisition of Wealth.

The transforming power of money the moment it gets into a man's possession is one of the unsolved mysteries of the universe. Of course we know that the poison of avarice and greed is in the character and not in the money, but it is unfortunate that the possession of money seems to develop, to bring out, some of the worst human qualities, qualities which never develop in poverty or show themselves under ordinary circumstances.

Before we get possession of money we feel sure that we will not allow it to warp and twist our ideals. We are going to show the world a sane use of money. We are going to help everybody. We are going to help struggling merit, assist poor boys and girls to get an education and to get a start in the world. We are going to be helpful and useful in the largest possible way.

But it is a strange trait in human nature that, no matter how humble or democratic or helpful and companionable people may be while poor, just as soon as the average man gets more than his fellows he begins to domineer over them and to use the very wealth which he was so anxious to get to enable him to help his fellow men to oppress and keep them down.—O. S. Marden in Success Magazine.

Bismarck's Resentment.

The Hamburger Nachrichten contributes the following to the stories relative to the relations between Emperor William II. and Bismarck: "If the Kaiser wished to ride alone," said Bismarck, "I could have found no objection. That he drove me away, though, wounded me. If he wanted to get rid of me he should have told me so frankly, and I would have taken six months' vacation. If things got along without me I would have remained away. Otherwise I should have returned. But this! I was nearly thrown out of my house in the Wilhelmstrasse. I had to pack my belongings in haste, for Captain was waiting at the door."

Walter Pater's Way.

I remember telling Walter Pater about "The Story of an African Farm" and the wonderful human quality of it. He said, repeating his favorite formula, "No doubt you are right, but I do not suppose I shall ever read it." And he explained to me that he was always writing something and that while he was writing he did not allow himself to read anything which might possibly affect him too strongly by bringing a new current of emotion to bear upon him.—A. Symonds in Monthly Review.

After Dark.

Mrs. Gayboy (severely)—What time did you get home last night? Gayboy (cautiously)—Oh, a little after dark. Mrs. Gayboy—After dark! Why, it was daylight when you came in! Gayboy—Well, isn't that after dark?

A Sleeping Bird.
If you have a pet bird look at it closely when it is asleep and you will see that it does not, as is generally believed, tuck its head under its wing. You have heard all your life that a bird sleeps in that way, but it does not. It turns its head and lays it on the soft and yielding feathers of its back, which sometimes entirely hide it.

The Wise Man.
There is a man in our town
Who is so wonderful wise
He knows he cannot sing at all,
And so he never tries.

He also knows he has no wit
Like many funny folks,
And so he never bothers us
By getting off his jokes.

And when he has no word to say
He's wise enough, though young,
To sit about while others talk
And hold his little tongue.
