FOR SHORTER HOURS.

Employees of Risteen & Company's Factory Out on Strike.

Eight employees of the J. C. Risteen Company's woodworking factory, went on strike this morning for shorter hours.

Some days ago the firm announced to their employees that commencing on Feb. 4—today, a ten hour day would be inaugurated. The ten hour system had been in vogue up to the first of May last, when the nine hour system was adopted.

The management claim that they cannot run the factory satisfactorily and get the work out unless the ten hour system is adopted.

The men claim they are not paid as much here as in other places and that nine hours a day is sufficient for the pay they receive. They point out that outside woodworkers and men at other trades only work nine hours a day and their employers are apparently satisfied.

Mr. George O'Neill, manager of the factory, this afternoon informed the Herald that business was going on as usual and about fifteen men were working the ten hour day. Mr. O'Neill stated that the strike would in no way interfere with the company filling its orders and the business would go on just the same, as other hands will be found to take the place of those who went out.

Baring, will cut about 2,000,000 on Clifford and Tomah streams. The Eastern Pulpwood Co. is confining its operations to poplar wood. D. C.
