LITERARY LOG ROLLING.

How Some Famous Authors Sought to Advertise Themselves.

The examples cited by Francis Gribble in his article on "The Comedy of Literary Log Rolling" in the Strand Magazine arouse some suspicion as to their absolute authenticity, but are amusing enough whether true or not. Sainte-Beuve increased the circulation of his books by insisting upon fighting a duel in the rain with an umbrella over his head. Gerard de Nerval used to be seen in the streets of Paris leading a lobster by a string. Mme. Krudener, the author of "Valerie" and the friend of Alexander I. of Russia, made the fortune of her novel by selling at all the Paris shops and asking for various articles of dress "a la Valerie." Of Victor Hugo and of Alexandre Dumas the elder the following stories are told:

Nor was the great poet ashamed to roll his log even at a funeral. He seized the opportunity at the obsequies of one of his own sons. It happened that on the way to the cemetery the procession passed a traveling menagerie and the lions, for whatever reason, stopped roaring just as Victor Hugo was in front of their cage. His companion, a minor poet named Pelleport, drew his attention to the fact. "Master," he whispered, "the lions recognize you and hush their voices. The king of beasts is silent in the presence of the king of men." Victor Hugo bowed and turned the matter over in his mind. Then, after meditation, he said: "Pelleport, that was a happy thought of yours. Couldn't you write something about it?" And Pelleport wrote a sonnet about it, and the fame of the master stood on a higher pinnacle than ever.

And finally there was the case of Dumas, of whom it may almost be said that his whole life was an advertisement. Some one once said of him that his vanity was such that he was capable of getting up behind his own carriage in order to demonstrate that he had a negro footman in his service. He certainly did many things almost as absurd as that in his restless pursuit of reclamation. One of his delights was to clothe his noble proportions in a uniform and to embellish the uniform with decorations to which he was not entitled. He even went so far as himself to design the uniform in which he fought—or, rather, did not fight, for he arrived after the fighting was all over—in Garibaldi's army and he achieved a tremendous advertisement by conducting a well known actress to a court ball to which she had not been invited. He got another advertisement by allowing himself to be sued for non-delivery of a feuilleton. He was utterly in the wrong, and he lost his case, but he kept the court in roars of laughter while he explained his literary methods and the nature of the distractions which had interfered with the fulfillment of his contract. But the best of all his advertisements was attained when the announcement appeared that M. Alexandre Dumas would write the last chapter of a forthcoming romance sitting in a shop window, for all the world to see how it was done. One can understand that that sort of advertisement would suit the authors who are also interested in the sale of hair restorers. They almost owe it to the public to exhibit themselves in this way, killing two birds with a single stone. But for the author of "Monte Cristo" to do it was surely the ne plus ultra of the comedy of log rolling.

The Hanging of Pictures.

A woman bought three pictures in a Fifth Avenue art store. "Shall I send some one up to hang them?" asked the dealer. "I—I don't know," hesitated the woman, who had already exceeded her allowance in buying the pictures. "How much extra will it cost?" "Not a cent," the dealer assured her. "In the case of any important sale, we prefer that one of our men superintend the hanging of the picture. That insures justice for the painting. Without meaning any disrespect for our customers, I must say that not one person in a hundred who has had no special instruction in art can take a picture home and place it in an advantageous position. A man who has been trained to that business, on the other hand, can tell at a glance where to hang it and all the others in the room so that each will bring out the best points of all the rest."

His Luggage.

"Ticket" said the collector as he opened the door of a carriage in which — was a man who was anchored to his seat. The man handed over the required pasteboard, which was duly inspected. Then, looking around, the collector said, "Is there another gentleman in the carriage?" "No." "Is that other portmanteau yours, then, too?" "Other portmanteau?" "Yes, on the floor there by the other." "Those," said the traveler, with dignity, are my feet.—London Globe.

Well Trained.

Old Lady (improving the occasion)—Ah, my poor man, you would not be in this position if you had received an early training in some trade or calling. Tramp—Don't you talk too sudden about wot you don't know nothin' about, missus. No trainin', indeed! W'y, I was in prison afore I was fourteen.—London Mail.

Tactfully Put.

He—Who is that plain lady? She—That is my mother. He—Oh, I beg pardon! I didn't notice the resemblance.—London Opinion.

If you would be a good judge, hear what every one says.—Portuguese Proverb.

Shopping in London.

One of the first things an American man or woman rushes out to buy in London is a serviceable well cut mackintosh, and the second article to be purchased is usually an umbrella. A man can buy in London a smart waterproof which with occasional reproofing will last him a lifetime for 3 or 4 guineas. In New York a very bad imitation will cost him from $40 to $50. The British umbrella is not only a thing of beauty in workmanship, but it will outlast all competitors across the seas.—London Express.

Mixed.

Here is a mixture of kingdoms, if not of metaphors, taken from a history examination paper: "He stretched his sultry length beneath the ewe tree's shade." "Away back as far as the time of Jack Carter England sent her ships into Hudson bay to trade beads and muskets with the Indians for ivory off the walrus tree."

Not an Expert Opinion.

"He has just returned from Mexico. He says a Mexican burro is the most aggravatingly stubborn thing on earth." "He isn't married."
