Beverly of Graustark

"You must remember," Beverly said in reply to one of Rayone's sallies, "that Americans are not in the least awed by Europe's greatness. It has come to the pass when we call Europe our playground. We now go to Europe as we go to the circus or the county fair at home. It isn't much more trouble, you know, and we must see the sights."

"Alas, poor Europe!" he laughed. As he strolled about with her and Candace he pointed out certain men to her, asking her to tax her memory in the effort to recall their faces if not their apparel. She readily recognized in the lean, tired faces the men she had met first at the Inn of the Hawk and Raven.

"They were vagabonds then, Miss Calhoun. Now they are noblemen. Does the transition startle you?"

"Isn't Baldos among them?" she asked, voicing the query that had been uppermost in her mind since the moment when she looked down from the galleries and failed to see him. She was wondering how he would appear in court costume.

"You forget that Baldos is only a guard," he said kindly.

"He is a courtier nevertheless," she retorted.

She was vaguely disappointed because he was missing from the scene of splendor. It proved to her that caste overcame all else in the rock ribbed east. The common man, no matter how valiant, had no place in such affairs as these. Her pride was suffering. She was as a queen among the nobles of the realm. As the wife of Baldos she would live in another world—on the outskirts of this one of splendor and arrogance. A stubborn, defiant little frown appeared on her brow as she pictured herself in her mind's eye standing afar off with "the man" Baldos, looking at the opulence she could not reach. Her impetuous, rebellious little heart was thumping bitterly as she considered this single phase of the life to come. She was ready to cry out against the injustice of it all. The little frown was portentous of deep laid designs. She would break down this cruel barrier that kept Baldos from the fields over which prejudice alone held sway. Her love for him and her determination to be his wife were not in the least dulled by these reflections.

The doors to the great banquet hall were thrown open at last, and in the disorder that followed she wondered who was to lead her to the feasting. The Duke of Mixor claimed the Princess Candace.

"I am to have the honor," said some one at her side, and the voice was the one she least expected to hear utter the words. The speaker was the man who deserved the place beside Yette, Prince Danton himself.

Bewildered, her heart palpitating with various emotions, she took his arm and allowed herself to be drawn wonderingly through the massive doors. As they entered, followed by the brilliant company, the superb orchestra that Beverly had so often enjoyed began to play the stirring "Hands Across the Sea." The musicians themselves seemed to have caught the universal feeling of joy and mirth that was in the air and played as if inspired, their leader bowing low to the young American girl as she passed. It was his affectionate tribute to her. Prince Danton, to her amazement, led her up the entire length of the banquet hall to the head of the royal table, gorgeous with the plate of a hundred Graustark rulers, placing her on his left and next to the slightly raised royal chairs. Candace was on his right, the picture of happiness. Beverly felt dizzy, weak. She looked helplessly at Prince Danton. His smile was puzzling. As if in a daze she saw Grenfall Lorry with the Countess Yvonne standing exactly opposite to her, he, with the others, awaiting the appearance of the princess and the one who was to sit beside her.

The music ceased, there was a hush over the room, and then Yette came forward, magnificent in her royal robes, smiling and happy. A tall man in the uniform of an exalted army official came beside her, gold braid and jeweled buttons across his breast. Beverly felt dazedly white, her figure stilling, and she relaxed.

How she dropped into the servant held for her. She saw his dark eyes were smiling with love and mischief. There was a vague, unsteady feeling of chattering; some one was eagerly to her, but she heard no more. There was a standing to the Prince of Dawsbergen. The gracious ghost of Baldos was giving a ringing response to the festive orchestra was playing Graustark and Dawsbergen. But it was all as a dream. At last she heard Candace calling to her, her face wreathed in smiles. Scores of eyes seemed to be looking at her, and all of them were full of amusement.

"Now, say that a girl can't keep a secret," came to her ears from the radiant sister of Danton. Rayone, at her side, spoke to her and she turned to him dizzily.

"You first knew me as Rayone, Miss Calhoun," he was saying genially. "Then it became necessary, by royal command, for me to be Prince Danton. May I have the honor of introducing myself in the proper person? I am Christobal of Rapp-Thorburg, and I shall be no other than he hereafter. The friendship that binds me to Prince Danton, at last in his proper place beside the Princess of Graustark, is to be strengthened into a deeper relationship before we part."

Are You a Woman

Needing Strength?

Not long ago you were able to enjoy life.

You had vigor, strength, ambition—did everything with zest and pleasure.

Upon your cheeks was the hue of health, in your eyes the sparkle of health, in your eyes the sparkle of vim and animation.

Today—all is a drudge. Not actually sick, but if your work were less imperative, how gladly you would rest.

You are breaking down. Nervous system is out of gear. Digestive powers are weak. Blood lacks nourishment.

Just one thing to do—Build up—Win back your health with Ferrozone.

No remedy restores so fast, builds up so permanently, instills such vigor or surplus strength like Ferrozone.

A case showing how Ferrozone acts is illustrated by the following from Mrs. H. Wright of Enfield, N. S.

"Six months ago I experienced a splitting headache, dull pains through my chest and shoulders. I found it hard to get satisfying sleep—would roll and toss and in the morning felt tired all over. Then I grew worse, lost flesh, got pale and had heavy dark circles under my eyes. My strength got so low I couldn't do housework. It was worried and unable to eat and feared I would not get well. Ferrozone braced me up in a few weeks. It seemed to supply wonderful strength, gained in flesh, looked better and was able to sleep. In all I took twelve boxes of Ferrozone and my cure was complete."

If Ferrozone don't help, and cure you—then nothing ever will; your druggist sells it in 50c boxes—Better try Ferrozone.

A PRETTY DRESSING SACK FOR A YOUNG GIRL.

Daintiness in the small belongings indicate refinement in the girl no less in the woman, and the modern miss is quick to recognize this fact. A pretty negligee which will be glad to possess and perhaps equally glad to make is here sketched. The model is especially desirable because it is suited to development in any soft material, whether silk, wool or cotton. In the present instance fancy stitching lace and ribbon being employed for garniture. The sack may be made in either high or square neck, and is provided with two styles of sleeves. HOW DIPHTHERIA IS CONTRACTED.

One often hears the expression, "My child caught a severe cold which developed into diphtheria," when the truth was that the cold had simply left the little one particularly susceptible to the wandering diphtheria germ. When Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is given it quickly cures the cold and lessens the danger of diphtheria or any other germ disease being contracted. For sale by all dealers.

HAD THIRTY-TWO BOILS ON HIS BACK AT ONE TIME.

TWO BOTTLES OF BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS CURED HIM.

Boils are simply evidence of the bad blood within coming to the surface.

Just when you think you are cured of one, another seems ready to take its place and prolong your misery.

The only way to rid yourself of boils, pimples, and all skin blotches and blemishes, so that they will never return to bother you again, is to have the blood thoroughly cleansed of all its impurities.

For this purpose there is no other blood medicine to equal Burdock Blood Bitters.

It has been on the market for over thirty years, and in that time we have received thousands of testimonials stating positively that it will cure the worst known cases of boils.

Mr. James Combs, Eden, Ont., writes: "I think Burdock Blood Bitters a great medicine for boils. I had them so bad I could not work. I had thirty-two on my back at one time. I used only two bottles of B.B.B. and they completely cured me. I cannot recommend it too highly.
