THE ROSS RIFLE.

Opposition papers continue to exploit ignorant allegations with respect to the government's dealings with the Ross Rifle Company. It is alleged that advance payments have been made upon rifles not yet delivered. Fault is found with the method of payment of these advances. Complaint is made that new sights have been purchased.

There is a very simple answer to these grumblings. If there has been delay in the delivery of the rifles it has been occasioned by the introduction of improvements to the arm, and every cent paid by the Government to the Ross Company will be returned in rifles, up-to-date, and of the very latest pattern.

As to the new sights, the government is taking proper advantage of the inventive genius which constantly supplied a better article than the one in use, and in this regard should be commended. In this respect Canada is following the example of the British Government, which since adopting the Lee-Enfield rifle in 1896, has made three distinct changes in the sight used, and last winter the government committee on small arms reported in favor of still a better sight. All these changes are natural and due to progress and increased knowledge.

All advances made are carefully checked, first by an official of the Bank of Montreal and verified again by an officer of the Militia Department, who personally checks the articles, and advances are made only on the basis of a schedule of prices agreed upon.

The Ross factory at present represents an outlay of $1,000,000 in premises and plant, and in time will be one of Canada's greatest manufacturing concerns.

BECOMING SENSITIVE.

The New York Post points out that the soullessness of the corporation has been axiomatic for generations, yet today it is remarkably sensitive. It may have no more moral responsibility or chance of going to heaven than a dog, yet it likes, just as the dog does, to be patted on the head, and shrinks from the harsh word. In practice the entirely soulless corporation is "as mythological an entity" as to borrow a phrase from Professor James—as the "economic man" actuated only by enlightened self interest. The accepted hypothesis has required every one who came in contact with corporations to make violent distinctions between them and their officials and employees. The Western anti-trust agitator, for instance, had to admit that the Standard Oil was represented in the town by one of his most esteemed neighbors, while some of the best men he knew sold policies of Eastern insurance companies, whose very names would rouse him to fury.

NOTHING TO FEAR.

Winnipeg Telegram (Conservative): No good Canadian need fear anything from the rapidly growing sentiment of Canadian nationality. The empire can only attain its greatest height of glory as a confederation of free nations, equals in all that British nationhood implies. There cannot be disparity without difference; there cannot be want of unanimity with equality. Probably these are nowadays rather in the nature of truisms, but it seems as if there still linger on the stage some of the people who believed that to the Family Compact had been delegated by the Almighty the right to govern Upper Canada. As a matter of fact, the member of the Family Compact were not more British than were their opponents who fought—and sometimes fought very unwisely—for Canadian nationalism.

At a meeting of the Irish parliamentary party in the imperial house of commons yesterday, it was decided to fight the government, both in the house and in the constituencies in order to punish the Liberals for failing to give Ireland a broader measure of home rule than contained in the rejected Irish council bill.

VIOLATED SUNDAY LAW.

General Manager Hays in Trouble in Toronto.

Toronto, Ont., June 13.—(Special)—Mr. C. M. Hays, general manager of the G.T.R., was served here yesterday with a summons to appear before the magistrate today at East Toronto to answer to the charge that he did on last Sabbath authorize and solicit and permit employees of the said company to carry on business of the said company at railway yards of said company.

Richard Crowe, yard master, of East Toronto, and Thos. Heolony, also of East Toronto, a fireman, were also summoned, charged with following their usual daily occupations on the Sabbath day.

A SERIOUS MATTER.

It is reported that one of the Mendonshire immigrant children, recently taken by a family near Doaktown, has developed a case of trachoma.

Mrs. Frank M. Merritt, of Marysville, is able to be around again after her recent illness.

St. Andrew's Beacon: The Courier's reference to "bottled" enthusiasm at the recent Moncton convention is in bad taste. Bro. Clarke was not present; therefore he has no ground for suggesting that the "bottle" was more freely used than it was at the Moncton convention he participated in a number of years ago, when a decision was reached that his leader, Mr. Hazen, has been trying to escape from ever since.
