THE POPULAR DISEASE.

An ache in the back and a pain in the head—
That's the grip!
A choke in the throat and a yearning for bed—
That's the grip!
A fever of heat, then a shiver of cold.
A feeling of being three hundred years old.
A willingness even to do as you're told—
That's the grip!

An arrow of pain, now in this place, now that—
That's the grip!
A feeling of doubt as to where you are at—
That's the grip!
A stupid sensation—of course, wholly new!
A foolish depression—why should you feel blue?
A doubt as to whether this really is you—
That's the grip!

Strange visions at night that deprive you of rest—
That's the grip!
A taste in your mouth and a weight on your chest—
That's the grip!
A tired sensation that runs through your veins,
A queer combination of aches and of
A rapid admission of absence of brains—
That's the grip!

A marvelous weakness, come on in a day—
That's the grip!
A petulant wonder, "How long will it stay?"—
That's the grip!
A season of fever, a season of freeze,
A quivering weakness that's felt at the knees—
Say, if ever there was a cuss-ed disease,
It's the grip!

Overheard in a Georgia Kitchen.
Not long ago an old colored cook in an Atlanta family was visited by one of her friends, who had but recently come from "down in de country," where both had been raised. The visitor was received with genuine darky cordiality and given a comfortable corner of "de white folks' kitchen." The Atlanta cook asked all kinds of questions as to what had been "gwine on" down in her old home, and among other queries was:
"What's cum er Mandy what use ter stay at Miss Willie's?"
"Law! Ain't you h'yeerd?"
"No!"
"She in jail?"
"Tush!"
"Yass, she is!"
"What fer?"
"I d'no jes' what fer, but de man come an' 'res' her, an' de judge fine her five an' cost, an' put her in de jail house. Miss Willie say hit wuz er shame ter 'res' a good cook like Mandy, an' she sen' her husband down ter pay de fine, but Mandy say, 'Nem mine; she jes' stay whar she wuz till de time wuz out, 'cause she need de rest.'"—Harper's Weekly.

Long Distance.

"Where are you going, old chap?" asked the first youth.
"Going to send Myrtilla a kiss through the telephone," replied the second youth.
"Why, you are slow. Don't you know a kiss through the telephone loses its flavor?"
"Just why I am using the telephone, old man. I have been eating onions."—Houston Post.

The Truant Angel.

Willie looked up into the sky and saw an airship for the first time. It was very high up and looked very small. After watching the wings on the machine flapping up and down, he said:
"Say, ma, look up into the sky! There's an angel playing truant."—Judge.

Most Picturesque.

"What is the most picturesque spot you ever saw in this vicinity?" asked the enthusiastic tourist.
Broncho Bob gave the question some thought before he answered:
"A one-spot when I was drawing to a royal flush."—Washington Star.

Getting Rid of Him.

Eva—Percy squanders money something awful. His father says he is nothing but a debt to him.
Jack—Then why is his father going to send him away on a yacht?
Eva—I suppose he wants him to be a floating debt.—Detroit Tribune.

His Line.

Patience—I understand her husband finds fault with all her acts.
Patrice—Yes, but she doesn't mind that. That's his business.
"What is?"
"He's a theatrical critic."—Yonkers Statesman.

Well Supplied.

Explorer—I don't see how you can stand six months of cold and darkness. Do you have candles?
Resident—Sure. I ate 900 candles last winter.—Chicago News.

Peer Dog!

Gerald—This dog knows as much as I do.
Geraldine—I noticed he had a vacant look.—New York Press.

North Carolina Mica.
There is plenty of evidence to show that the Indians dug for mica in North Carolina long before Columbus landed, though what they used the stuff for is not obvious. The deposits in the mountains of the western part of that state are today by far the most valuable in this country, yielding something like 100,000 pounds per annum of a product superior in quality.
