"That is his death whoop," said Du Lhut composedly.

As he spoke the two others came back, Ephraim ramming a fresh charge into his musket.

"Ah, he's gone," said Du Lhut. As he spoke the Indian gave a last spasmodic with his hands and feet and lay rigid.

"He's a great chief," said Du Lhut. "It is Brown Moose of the Mohawks, and the other is his second son. We have drawn first blood, but I do not think that it will be the last, for the Iroquois do not allow their war chiefs to die unmolested. He was a mighty fighter."

"They turned away, leaving the red figure stretched under the silent trees. As they passed on they caught a glimpse of the lad lying doubled up among the bushes where he had fallen. The pioneer walked very swiftly until he came to a little stream which practiced down to the big river. Here he slipped off his shoes and leggings and waded down to his companions for half a mile or so.

"They will follow our tracks when they find him," said he, "but this will throw them off, for it is only on running water that an Iroquois can find no trace. And now we shall lie in this clump until nightfall, for we are little over a mile from Fort Polton, and it is dangerous to go forward, for the ground becomes more open."

And so they remained concealed among the alders while the shadows turned from short to long, and the white drifting clouds above them were tinged with the pink of the setting sun. Du Lhut coiled himself into a ball, with his pipe between his teeth, and dropped into a light sleep, pricking up his ears and starting at the slightest sound. The two Americans whispered together for a long time, but at last the soothing hum of a gentle breeze through the branches lulled them off also. De Catinat alone remained awake, his nerves in a tingle from a strange, sudden shadow which had fallen upon his soul. So clear it was and so vivid that it was with a start that he came suddenly to himself and found that the night was creeping on in the forest and that Du Lhut had roused himself and was ready for a start.

"Have you been awake?" asked the pioneer. "Have you heard anything?"

"Nothing but the hooting of the owl."

"It seemed to me in my sleep that I heard a gunshot in the distance."

"In your sleep?"

"Yes, I hear as well asleep as awake and remember what I hear. But now you must follow me close, and we shall be in the fort soon."

"Peste! You are a woodman indeed!"

"I believe that these woods are swarming with Iroquois, although we have had the good fortune to miss them. So great a chief as Brown Moose would not start on the path with a small following or for a small object. They must mean mischief upon the trail."

"Then we have come through them?"

"Yes, we have come through them. They would keep their camp today and send out scouts. Brown Moose and his son were among them and struck our trail. Tonight—"

"Tonight they will attack Ste. Marie!"

"It is possible. And yet with so small a party I should scarce have thought that they would have dared. Well, we can but hasten back as quickly as we can and give them warning of what is hanging over them."

And so they turned for their weary backward journey, though their minds were too full to spare a thought upon the leagues which lay behind them or those which were before.

Dark as it was, Du Lhut walked as swiftly as during the sunlight and never hesitated about the track. His comrades could see, however, that he was taking them a different way from that which they had gone in the morning, for twice they caught a sight of the glimmer of the broad river upon their left, while before they had only seen the streams which flowed into it. On the second occasion he pointed to where on the farther side they could see dark shadows.

"Iroquois cañons," he whispered. "There are ten of them, with eight men in each. They are another party."

"How do you know that they are another party?"

"Because we have crossed the trail of the first within the hour."

Dream Happenings.
"We haven't that article in stock," said the druggist.
"Can't you give me something equally as good?"
"No, sir. There isn't anything equally as good."

"Why do you cease talking?" inquired the visitor to the opera box. "Do I interrupt a tete-a-tete?"
"Oh, no!" replied the charming hostess. "But the curtain is up. Conversation now might disturb the audience or perhaps those on the stage."

"Missus," began the cook. "I have been with youse now a year. I hopes my services pleases."

"They do, Marie Antoinette. You may consider your position quite secure."

"Thank yez, mum."—Washington Herald.

A Sorry Prospect For the Future.
Dupre had been rather a naughty boy on the street car, and after they reached home his mother corrected him in the good old fashioned way, though not anything like so severely as he imagined.

"Now, Dupre," she said, "I hope you will remember what happens when boys do not obey their mothers and next time we are on the cars that you will sit quietly, as mother tells you."
"Yes, m-m-mother," he sobbed. "I will if I am e-e-er able to s-sit down anywhere a-a-again."—Woman's Home Companion.

False Alarm.
Fraulein Laura had put a stopper on the poet's protestations and refused his suit, and the poet, in a great state, drew his knife out of his pocket.

"For heaven's sake," shrieked Laura, "don't kill yourself! I will listen to you!"

"Good!" said the poet, returning his knife to his pocket. "But I was only going to sharpen my pencil to write you a farewell poem."—Lustige Blätter.

Couldn't Hurt His Pride.
"Biggley tried to humiliate his hired man the other day by shoveling the snow from his walk after the man had made a bluff at doing it."
"Did the man profit by the humiliation?"
"No. He tried to get Biggley to humiliate him again the next time it snowed and Biggley fired him."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

SKIN DISEASES

Salt Rheum, Pimples, Erysipelas, Ringworm, Shingles, Scald Head, Itching Sores.

All diseases of the skin are more or less directly caused by a bad state of the blood, which produces acid humors and corrupts the secretions.

No one can expect to have a clear, bright skin when the blood is in a disordered condition, and the stomach, liver and bowels acting feebly in consequence.

All the above skin diseases, in fact, any disease arising from a bad condition of the blood, are curable by through its wonderful cleansing, purifying powers on the blood, and its renovating action on the system.

Mr. A. Squire, Dominion, N.S., tells how he was cured of Salt Rheum. He writes: "For years I suffered with Salt Rheum, and was unable to find a curable remedy out of all the medicines I took, and Physicians consulted. Finally I was urged by a friend to try Burdock Blood Bitters, and after a very short space of time I was completely cured. I shall always recommend B.B.B. for such cases, as I consider it an indispensable remedy." Price $1.00 per bottle or 6 bottles for $5.00.

HE SLIPPED.

I clamped the skates upon my feet. I stopped upon the ice. I smiled to hear my friends repeat their quite well meant advice.

I skated when I was a boy. I skated quite a lot. The pastime I could still enjoy. I knew I'd not forget.

I glided out a yard or so. My stroke was pretty fair. When, just as I began to go, My heels flew in the air.

I saw old Saturn and his rings And Venus, shining bright; A comet and some other things. Burst then upon my sight.

Orion and the Milky way— And Mercury and Mars—I saw, though it was bright no day. A perfect blaze of stars.

They showed me later where I fell— They said it was the place. I know it wasn't very well. Because I'd left no trace.

I knew that this was just a joke. Some foolish monkey trick. The ice they showed me wasn't broken. Though scarce twelve inches thick.

Dice.

Dice are said by some to have had their origin in occult sources, but more reasonably they are ascribed to Psalmedes of Greece B. C. 1244. Those exhumed at Thebes are identical with those used today, and the games played with them are the simplest and most widely known games of chance in the world.

Irish Bog Oak.

Irish bog oak is probably the best known example of workable wood dug from the ground. It is perfectly black and has good grain for carving.

To Prevent Bunions.

Easy shoes with wide soles and straight heels will be found the most effectual preventive of bunions on the feet. When they exist they can be relieved by spreading thickly with cold cream or some healing salve before going to bed. A round piece of court-plaster over the salve will keep it in place and save the bedclothes.
