We Made a Mistake.

Into a Broadway car stepped a man and a woman, both young, well groomed and good looking. There were only two vacant seats, and they were on opposite sides of the car, so, instead of sitting side by side, they were divided. Presently the man at the girl's right hand gallantly arose and stumbled over to the unfortunate young man. "I will exchange seats with you, sir," he said.

The young man hesitated, blushed, but accepted the offer. Everybody was interested and expected to see the young couple strike up a conversation without delay. But they did not speak, and when the conductor came around the man dived down into his pocket for a nickel, and the woman dug around in her purse and brought up another, and they paid their fares independently. An audible sigh went up from the rest of the passengers. The man with the chivalric spirit felt worse than anybody else, unless it was the young people themselves, both of whom understood the situation and blushed furiously.

"Well, I don't care," growled the gallant man finally. "I did my duty anyhow, and he has had the pleasure of sitting beside her even if he doesn't know her."

Romance of Stocking Knitter.

Romance may certainly figure in many of the knitted waistcoats and gaudy stockings worn by our undergraduates today, but these have not so romantic an origin as the first of these articles produced in England, for tradition has it that William Lee, who in the sixteenth century invented the knitting frame on which both stockings and waistcoats were produced mechanically, was driven to this piece of ingenuity by the cruel flogging of the lady he loved, who happened to be a stocking knitter. Enraged at his failure to make an impression on her heart, he sought to make it on her purse by killing her means of livelihood, and one is glad to read that all stocking makers combined to frustrate his cruel purpose, with the result that he fled with his invention to France, where he finally died of a broken heart, whether for love of his lady or of his spoiled invention tradition does not say.—London Chronicle.

How it Feminized.

Husband—Did you discharge the cook this morning?
Wife—Well, you know, I meant to, but before I could do it I gathered from her language that she had discharged me.—Houston Post.

HE SLIPPED.

I clamped the skates upon my feet;
I stepped upon the ice;
I smiled to hear my friends repeat
Their quite well meant advice.

I skated when I was a boy;
I skated quite a lot.
The pastime I could still enjoy;
I knew I'd not forget.

I glided out a yard or so;
My stroke was pretty fair,
When, just as I began to go,
My heels flew in the air.

I saw old Saturn and his rings
And Venus, shining bright;
A comet and some other things
Burst then upon my sight.

Orion and the Milky way
And Mercury and Mars—
I saw, though it was bright noonday,
A perfect blaze of stars.

They showed me later where I fell—
They said it was the place.
I knew it wasn't very well,
Because I'd left no trace.

I knew that this was just a joke,
Some foolish monkey trick.
The ice they showed me wasn't broke,
Though scarce twelve inches thick.

Labrador Fisheries.

Canada has immense resources and, perhaps because of that, inland Canadians are not as fully aware as they should be of the great value of the fisheries along the coasts. The name Labrador is apt to suggest cold, starvation, and hardship, yet the exports from the Labrador coast are large and steadily growing. The fishery figures show that the export value of the fish sent out from Labrador rose from $545,478 in 1900 to $1,237,329 in 1905. The catch for 1906 was a little smaller, and the export value amounted to $1,030,432. This does not make a great showing against the millions of bushels of grain exported from the West, or against the great exports of the Eastern Provinces, but, considering the smallness of the population, and how comparatively neglected this part of the world has been, the figures are striking, and should cause all Canadians to do some thinking.
