Mrs. Rev. E. LeRoy Dakin and family and her brothers Earl and Vernon Barton of Union Corner, are spending a few days with Mrs. W. J. Hatfield.

Mrs. Chas. Hillman visited relatives at Springhill recently, she was accompanied home by her brother, Mr. Gordon Currie and wife, who is spending the week here.

Percy M. Moir arrived home on the 14th inst., having spent the past five months in Maine.

Chas. Hagerman of Presque Isle, Me., has visited relatives in this place. He returned home on the 20th inst. Mikes Hagerman accompanied him home and expects to spend the summer in Maine.

On the eve of the 15th inst. the majority of the young folk of this community assembled at the home of Mrs. Bruce Hillman and spent a very pleasant time. Numerous games were indulged in, and no pains were spared by the hostess in making the evening one of enjoyment. After a sumptuous dinner had been partaken of by all, the party broke up.

Merrill Hatfield spent his Easter holidays in Fredericton.

Sydney C. Ingraham, who is teaching the school at Temperance Vale spent his vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. Ingraham.

Mr. Spurgeon Dow, and his daughter, Lois M., spent Easter with relatives in St. Stephen.

Lawyer—So you want a divorce from your wife because she throws things at you, eh?

Client—Nothing of the kind—She's too smart to throw things at me.

Lawyer—But thought—

Client (interrupting)—She invariably throws things at the dog, but she always manages to hit me.

THE FOUR D'S.

Charles Spurgeon once said there were three great enemies to man—"dirt, devil and the devil." He might have added one more and included dyspepsia. The evil results of this disease could hardly be exaggerated. It's effects are felt in mind and body and are so far reaching as the effects of the curse that was laid on the Zoroastrian of Rheims which was cursed in "eating and drinking and sleeping, in standing and sitting and lying." The good effects of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery are most marked in aggravated and chronic cases of dyspepsia. It enables the stomach glands to secrete the necessary quantity of digestive fluids, and this at once removes that craving or gnawing sensation so common to certain forms of indigestion. It tones and regulates the stomach, invigorates the torpid liver, and gives the blood making glands keen assimilative power. "Golden Medical Discovery" cures ninety-eight per cent of those who use it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are superior to all other laxative medicines when the bowels are obstructed.

DISTINGUISHED CAREER.

The Late Premier of Great Britain for 40 Years a

The Right Hon. Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, G.C.B., P.C., M.O., LL.D., D.L., late Prime Minister and First Lord of the Treasury in Great Britain from 1905 until a fortnight ago, and who died at London on Wednesday, was born in Glasgow on the 7th Sept., 1836. His boyhood passed without anything more than the incidents common to the Scottish boys of his day. Glasgow University gave him the most substantial part of his education and he got the finishing touches and inhaled the higher academic atmosphere in Trinity College, Cambridge. With his educational advantages, and the prestige of a good classical scholar Sir Henry was not long in finding his way into Parliament. The electors of Sterling burghs sent him to the House of Commons thirty six years ago, and they remained faithful to their allegiance to him in no fewer than seven subsequent general elections. He was at the time of his retirement the doyen of Scottish members, and in a sense the father of the House and there could be little doubt that Sterling was his for the asking as long as he pleased.

In 1871 Mr. Gladstone gave him the position of financial secretary of the War Office. He was then elected Mr. Henry Campbell for the accident of inheritance, the death of a maternal uncle who made it a condition that he should become a Barrister, had not necessitated the compound and the additional, atrophic. He held the office till his death, the Liberal party into Opposition.

RETURNED WITH GLADSTONE. Mr. Gladstone's turn came again in 1880, and "C.B." was again given his old post. Since 1885 he had official experience at the Admiralty, the Irish Office and again at the War Office was greater than that of any living politician. It was through the War Office that the blow came that drove the Liberal party from office in 1895. It was alleged that in pursuance of a parsimonious policy the War Minister had neglected to provide the country with a sufficient reserve of the new cordite ammunition. Sir Henry denied the imputation that the service was being starved. The amendment that upset the Rosebery administration which succeeded in that of Mr. Gladstone who retired after the defeat of the second Home Rule Bill was moved by Mr. St. John Brodrie, now Lord Middleton, and Sir Henry always described it as a discreditable political manoeuvre. After the defeat of the Liberal administration in June 1895, Sir Henry was a vigilant critic. The fortunes of the party were at a low ebb when he assumed the leadership in succession to Sir William Harcourt. The war had split it into factions, each suspected of the Government. As a leader he developed qualities that few suspected, although many hoped for. He quickly established himself in the affections of the new House of Commons, and the expression of his wish counted for more than the most strongly worded "whip."

His replies during the question hour, which is a feature of the British Parliament, were always anticipated eagerly, with the assurance that he would say some good thing. He seldom disappointed the House.

IMPORTANT ACHIEVEMENTS. While much of the legislation which Sir Henry promoted was frustrated in Sir Henry's premiership he must be credited with several measures of first class importance. There was the Workmen's Compensation Act, which has placed the laborer and the citizen in a position as regards payment for injuries sustained in the course of his employment in which he never stood before, and the Army Reorganization Act, which has introduced the principle of a territorial army and improved the efficiency while reducing the cost of the services.

Sir Henry was a man of great wealth. He was one of the few Liberal politicians with an income of £250,000 a year. At one time his mansion in Grosvenor-place, overlooking Buckingham Palace was one of the most celebrated political saloons, and "C.B.'s" dinners were unimpeachable. At Belmont Castle, Perthshire, "C.B." entertained large parties.

David Lloyd-George, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on receiving the news of Sir Henry's death said: "I never met a great public figure since I have been in political life who won so completely the attachment and affection of men who came in contact with him."

St. Andrew's Manse, Cardigan, P.E.I., Jan. 1908. Though I have never been sick myself, and have not had occasion to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, I thought you ought to know of the remarkable cure they have wrought in Mr. Olding's case.

During a visit to my house in Merigomish, N. S., some years ago, I was grieved to find our next neighbor and friend, Michael Olding, very low. "He is not expected to live," my mother informed me, "and you must go over and see him as he is liable to pass away at any moment."

"Not expected to live," that was the opinion not only of the doctor who attended him, but of his wife and family as well. Upon visiting him myself, I found abundant evidence to confirm their opinion.

Mr. Olding had for years been afflicted with asthma and bronchitis, but now a complication of diseases was ravishing his system. He had been confined to his bed for months and was reduced to a skeleton. Though evidently glad to see me, he conversed with the greatest difficulty and seemed to realize that it was the beginning of the end. He was daily growing weaker; his feet were swollen to twice their natural size, and the cold hand of death was upon his brow. "It's no use," he said feebly, "the doctors medicine is not helping me and I am going down rapidly."

I prayed with him as for a man soon to pass into eternity, and when I took his hand in parting it was the last time I expected to see him in the flesh.

Three years later while on another visit to my mother's Michael Olding was seemingly in better health than I had ever seen him, for, as I said, ing.
