HAZLETON-BURTT.

former Member of City Teaching Staff Becomes a Bride.

The residence of Mr. Cyrus Burtt, King street, was the scene of a happy event at 6.30 o'clock this morning, when his eldest daughter, Miss Lillian A. Burtt, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony, to Mr. Ernest H. Hazleton of Upper Queensbury, a nephew of Mr. Jacob Hazleton of this city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. H. MacDonald assisted by Rev. Dr. McLeod, in the presence of relatives and immediate friends. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was becomingly attired in white net over white silk, and was unattended. Her two little nieces, Majorie Murray and Muriel Burtt, acted as flower girls, each carrying a bouquet of sweet peas. The bride's going away dress is of brown broadcloth with hat to match.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the happy couple took their departure by the Gibson train for Grand Falls, where they will spend their honeymoon.

The bride's popularity was attested by a number of valuable wedding presents. The Brunswick Street Baptist choir, of which she was a valued member, presented her with a cut glass water bottle with glasses and reflector tray. The bridegroom's present was a gold locket and chain. Mr. and Mrs. Hazleton will make their home at Upper Queensbury.

WHEN I GET INTO BED.

I'm never frightened in the dark,
Though I am very small;
I never sit all scared and hark
For goblins in the hall.
But when my prayers are said
I have one awful dread—
That something waits to grab my toes
When I get into bed!

I try to think of pleasant things
Each time I get undressed
And how each day no evil brings
If children do their best.
But the thought comes in my head
As I'm turning down the spread
That something's going to grab my toes
When I climb into bed!

And when there's nothing more to do,
With bedclothes open wide,
It makes me shiver through and through
A-trying to decide
Which foot shall go ahead,
'Cause I'm sure I'd tumble dead
If something ever grabbed my toes
As I got into bed!

THE HONEY IN FLOWERS.

Pits and Pockets in Which It Is Carefully Concealed.

Before "the bee sucks," as Ariel put it, he must find the wonderful places where the flowers hide away their honey, to be found like the priests' hiding holes in ancient mansions by the right sort of visitor, and to keep away all intruders.

In the recesses of the crown imperial lily at the centre can be seen six large honey pits, one on every floral leaf, and each brimming over with a big drop of honey and glistening like a tear drop. Shake the flower and it "weeps" as the big drops fall from it, soon to be replaced by other tears in the rapidly secreting flower. The simple folk call the flower "Job's tears."

The snowdrop is literally flowing with honey, for in swollen veins traversing its fragile whiteness are rivers of nectar. The petals of the columbine are ingeniously and elaborately designed with a view to providing good places of hiding for the honey. Each is circular, hollow, shaped like a horn. In each the honey is secreted in a round knob at which would be the mouthpiece end of the horn, and the five are arranged in a ring side by side with the honey knobs aloft. Though the honey store is obvious from without, yet the insects who would sip it must creep into the flower and penetrate with a long nose up the curving horn to the knob.

Sometimes the petals are all joined together into a tube, and the sweet nectar simply exudes from the inner side of the wall and collects at the bottom. This is the case in the dead nettle, the tube of which forms so toothsome a morsel that some children call it "suckies." The honey-suckle is similarly planned, and its sweetness is so striking as to have furnished its name.

The monkshood has quaint nectaries. If the hood be drawn back there suddenly spring into sight two objects on long stalks which are sometimes like a French horn, sometimes like a cowl or, looked at sideways, not unlike a pair of doves. Their presence within the hood has provided the nicknames Adam and Eve and Noah's Ark. Thus the honey bags are carefully tucked away and protected.

The Pipe's Antiquity.

In Asia and Africa, besides America, the pipe dates from prehistoric times, and in Europe generally it has been in use since and during the Roman period, if not before. One of the most learned antiquarians says that smoking pipes of bronze are frequently found in Irish tumuli, or sepulchral mounds, of the most remote antiquity.

Descriptive Education.
An old dandy in Alabama called across the fence to his neighbor's son, who is a student at the Atlanta university, says a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger.

"Look hyar, boy," he said, "you goes to school, don't yer?"

"Yes, sir," replied the boy.

"Getting education, ain't yer?"

"Yes, sir."

"Larning 'rithmetic an' figgering on a slate, eh?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, it don't tak two whole days ter make an hour, do it?"

"Why, no," answered the boy.

"Waal," said the old man, "you was going ter bring that hatchet back in an hour, wasn't yer? An' hit's been two whole days sence you borrowed hit."

"What's the use of yo' education ef you go ter school a whole year an' den can't tell how long hit takes ter fetch back dat hatchet?"

African Natives' Drum Signals.

All through the continent of Africa the natives have a very perfect system of signaling with drums, by which means they rap out messages from village to village, and it is quite wonderful how swiftly and how far they are able to spread news.

The drumming is always done at night, when sound travels farther, and as one lies awake on a still, clear night the ear is often gently assailed by the low, musical roll from a drum in the village near, and one waits with pleasant expectancy till the answering echo comes, muffled by distance, from a village sometimes two miles away.—Wide World Magazine.

Bohemia.

Bohemia is youth. Youth is everywhere. It is bounded on the north and east by the barren desert of middle age and on the south and west by the steep and impassable mountains of success. The true bohemian is drunk on nothing but ambitions and ideals, and, though these leave no headache, they frequently leave an emptiness of the stomach. The true bohemian has an appetite the morning after, but there is often no breakfast.—Sydney Bulletin.

Public Opinion.

Public opinion is a will-o'-the-wisp. It is here today and gone tomorrow. Public opinion crucified the Christ, and the centuries have condemned it for its act. Ever since that time the public has been making blunders, committing crimes, furnishing the evidence of its own unwisdom in every time and country.

Business Sense.

"Has that titled son-in-law of yours any business sense?"
"Yes," answered Mr. Dustinstax. "I must say I admire his foresight and sagacity. He absolutely refused to take any chances on my regarding him as a poor relation."—Washington Star.

A cynic says that the jaws of death have no terror for him; he only fears the jaws of life. He is married.—Sporting Times.

Spitful.

Ida—Why, he actually wanted to kiss me! I think he must have lost his senses. May—I think so, too, dear.
