

LEMIEUX IMPERIAL DRUMMER.

Canadian Postmaster-General Banquetted at London.

Some Notable Speeches by Eminent Men.

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The Canada Club and Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux at the Hotel Ritz tonight. Sir Charles Rivers Wilson, President of the Grand Trunk Railway Company presided over a distinguished gathering which included the Duke of Argyll, Mr. Sydney Buxton (Postmaster-General), Lord Strathcona, Mr. Hemmiker Heaton, Colonel Seely (Colonial Under-Secretary), and many other notable men. Sir Charles Rivers Wilson proposed the toast to the Dominion of Canada, remarking that if the mother country continued to refuse to meet the advances of Canada with respect to preference, circumstances might compel the Dominion to look in another direction, a statement to which there was some dissent.

Lord Strathcona, responding, said he trusted and believed Canada would never look elsewhere. (Loud applause.)

ONE MONTH IN CANADA.

Sir Frederick Borden, in a happy speech, criticised humorously an article in that morning's Times by a gentleman who had spent one month in the Dominion. (Laughter) He declared there was no fear that Canada would step aside from her present path of trade. (Hear, hear and applause) "We claim the right," he said, "to dictate the control of our own trade policy, and we concede to the statement of the mother country the same right. We did not give a preference for the purpose of making a bargain." (Cheers) The United States' action in erecting high barriers against Canada, for on object he would not define further, had only forced Canada to become her greatest competitor in the markets of the world. Canada had defied her neighbor and conquered. (Loud applause.) Canada's heart was with the mother country, and Canada knew that if the United States lowered the barriers it would be only for her own convenience. (Hear, hear, and laughter) Going on to the question of Imperial defence, Sir Frederick asked if Canada was not doing her duty by building up material for an army, while the mother country did that which she was much more fitted to do—namely, maintained a navy equal to the two-power standard, plus ten per cent. (Applause.)

NO STOMACH DISTRESS.

All your stomach misery and Indigestion will be gone in five minutes.

The question as to how long you are going to continue a sufferer from Indigestion and Stomach trouble is merely a matter of how soon you begin taking Diapiesin.

If your Stomach is lacking in digestive power, why not help the stomach trouble to do its, not with drastic drugs, but a re-enforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach.

People with weak Stomachs should eat Diapiesin after meals, and there will be no more Indigestion, no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach, no heartburn, Sour rising, Gas on Stomach or Belching of undigested food, Headaches, Dizziness or Vomiting, and besides what you eat will not ferment and poison breath with nauseous odors. All these symptoms resulting from a sour stomach and dyspepsia are generally relieved five minutes after eating one Triangle of Diapiesin.

Go to your druggist and get a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin now, and you will always go to the table with a hearty appetite and what you eat will taste good, because your stomach and intestines will be clean and fresh and you will know there are not going to be any more bad nights and miserable days for you. They freshen you and make you feel like life is worth living.

LOWER QUEENSBURY

Dec. 3.—The weather for the past week has been fine, but there is a sudden change in the air. The river is about full of ice this morning. We are sorry to learn that Robert H. Jordan had the misfortune to cut his foot quite badly.

MR. SYDNEY BUXTON.

The Duke of Argyll graciously proposed by his Majesty's health, and Postmaster-General Buxton, responding remarked that blood was thicker than water, but printers' ink was thicker than either. The results of Mr. Lemieux's intellectual preference had been starting satisfactory. As regards cable rates, the subject was delicate and difficult, but he favored practical reductions. The scheme must, however, be undertaken only on a business basis.

THE UNKNOWN ISLE.

Mr. Lemieux said that, happily, many things which people did not even suspect came under the observation of a traveller. "In the course of my errands abroad," he said, "I made a real discovery. England is a much abused and atrociously-treated country; in the first place by foreigners, and, secondly, by Englishmen themselves. As a matter of fact, England is not only a land where, 'gilt with friends or foes, a man may speak the thing he will; it is also the home of kindness and refinement, but I confess one must come here to make that discovery. For most people England is still, as a witty French writer puts it, 'The Unknown Isle.'"

Mr. Lemieux next referred to the intellectual preference, and predicted that the volume of British periodicals read in Canada would, in the near future, reach for greater proportions. And he laid down as a general proposition that the true spirit of Imperial unity could only be developed by knowing more of one another. "Let us correspond fearlessly," was his advice. "Imperial penny postage was established for that very purpose. We must in the field of science, speculation and literature commune with each other. Intellectual preference was conceived in that spirit."

ANNIHILATE SPACE AND TIME.

"We must visit each other's shores so as to better understand and grasp the vastness and possibilities of the British Empire. Let us have the all-round route. We must have cheap communications to annihilate space and time. Let us have an all-round cable. (Applause.) We must have trade with each other. We in Canada have given you preference. It was a free gift that policy have benefited the Canadian consumer. It has encouraged trade with Canada's best customer and money lender, and it has offered an inspiring example to the rest of the empire. (Loud cheers.)

AN IMPERIAL DRUMMER.

"In a way I am a commercial traveller. What line of goods do I offer? Cheap communications and cheap cable rates between Canada and the mother country. I claim that the goods are of the best possible quality. They are essential to the consumers of both Great and Greater Britain. (Cheers.) Mr. Hemmiker Heaton has quite a large stock on his hands. He is anxious to provide the whole world with penny-a-word telegrams. (Laughter) I confess I am looking to a more limited market. It includes only North America and the British Isles, but if some day the other colonies follow suit my wares will be consumed by millions of British citizens in the dominions beyond the seas. That market is large enough for me." (Applause.)

THE LOYALTY OF JEAN BAPTISTE.

Having referred to the developments in Canada and the desirability of receiving British settlers, Mr. Lemieux concluded: "If you come to Canada, by all means come via Quebec, or else you will not have seen Canada. Jean Baptiste is a happy man as he is free. Therefore he is loyal. Nothing could swerve his loyalty to his King. (Cheers) He values his British citizenship, and knows what an asset in his national life is the prestige of the British Crown. I conclude in the words of Sir Wilfrid Laurier: 'Between the two races the old enmities have ceased to exist, and now there is nothing more than a spirit of emulation. We are loyal to the great nation which gave us our life and we are faithful to the great nation which gave us our liberty.' (Applause.)

BRITAIN NOT GROWING OLD.

Mr. Hamar Greenwood proposed "Our Guests," and Colonel Seely, responding, paid a tribute to the services of Lord Strathcona. Mr. Lemieux and Mr. Mackenzie King to the empire. He struck a note of patriotism which was warmly applauded when he asked was the old country really getting old. His question was received with cries of "no." Was she really decaying? Was there nothing left but a little money? (Renewed cries of "no.") If so, then we were face to face with the destruction of the empire. No, he agreed, and signs of vigor to be observed on every side rejected such views. (Applause.) Mr. Tatlow also replied.

SUFFRAGE MEANS FEW OLD MAIDS

London Suffragette Declares Right to Vote Will Save Many Women from Fate of Single Blessedness

New York, Dec. 4.—The World today says: According to Miss Ethel M. Arnold, of London, the niece of Matthew Arnold and sister of Mrs. Humphrey Ward, one of the strongest arguments for woman suffrage in England is that it will save many women from the tragic fate of single blessedness.

"The dearth of marriageable men in England is appalling," said the speaker. "Many women in the higher classes have remained unmarried. This hideous and tragic waste of life cannot continue indefinitely."

"With the new status the franchise would give them, the masculine contempt toward this class would disappear. They would seek outlets for their energy elsewhere and go to other countries where women are at premium."

It is economical to use "Salaada" Tea on account of its great strength and delicious flavor. It requires little more than half as much as some other teas in the making.

Mr. J. H. Woods, of Point Rock, Ontario, Co., N. Y., had a hard experience. "A bad attack of Catarrh settled in my forehead and the pain over my eyes was so intense I thought my head would burst. My voice grew very hoarse and I coughed very much, and through the winter could scarcely speak. My voice was gone. Two doctors didn't help me at all. The next doctor ordered 'Catarrhoxone.' It cured me and now many others here use it also. My doctor says he doesn't know anything so good for Catarrh and Throat Trouble as 'Catarrhoxone.' Use it today, you're better tomorrow, 25c. and $1.80 at all dealers. Try Catarrhoxone."

HEADACHES

Suffered From Constant Headaches—Cured by "Fruit-a-tives" When Doctors Failed.

"I was a sufferer from fearful headaches for over two years, sometimes they were so bad that I was unable to work for days at a time. I took all kinds of medicines, was treated by physicians, and yet the headaches persisted. I was rarely free from headache. A short time ago I was advised to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and I did so with, I must confess, very little faith, but after I had taken them for three days my headaches were easier and in a week they left me. After I had taken a box of the tablets my headaches were quite cured. My appetite was always poor and my stomach bad, and now my appetite is splendid and my digestion is excellent. I had become thin and weak from the constant headaches, but now not only have I been cured of all these awful headaches, but my strength is growing up once more, and I feel like a new man. I have taken in all three boxes of 'Fruit-a-tives.' I am exceedingly grateful to 'Fruit-a-tives' for curing me, and I give this unsolicited testimonial with great pleasure, as I hope thereby some other sufferer of headaches will be induced to try 'Fruit-a-tives' and will be cured." (Sgd.) B. Cornell.

LIVINGSTONE RELICS.

Thousands See Missionary's Property at London Exhibition.

Judging by the number of visitors who crowd round Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone Wilson's court, the most popular exhibits at the Orient in the London Exhibition, held in the Royal Agricultural Hall, are the relics of the famous missionary and explorer, Dr. Livingstone, many of which are priceless by reason of the mine of romance which lies behind each article. And what lends additional interest to the exhibits is the presence of the noted Doctor's daughter, who is never tired of speaking about her father's love for exploring Africa and his desire to help the natives.

An unusually large collection has been brought together for the occasion, many articles of which have been brought home by his faithful attendant when he failed to return from the last of his marvellous journeys which made his name world-famous.

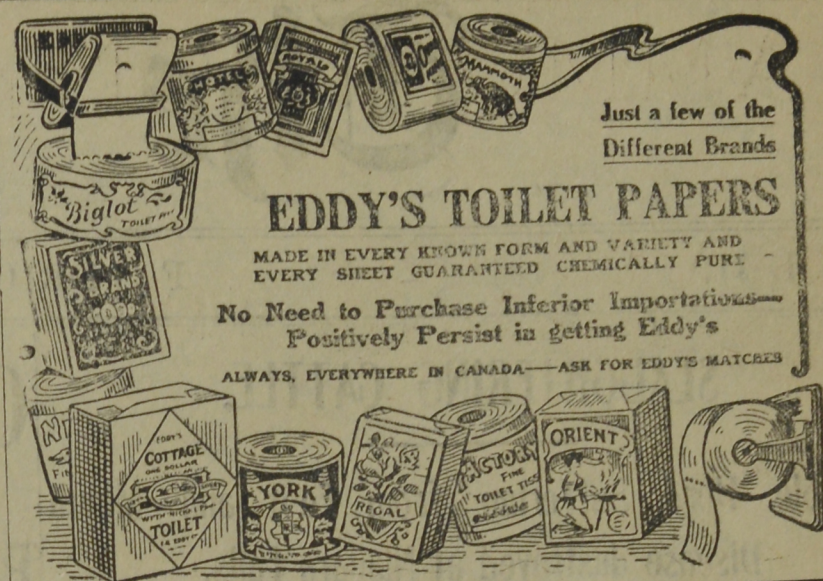

"From morning to night," said Mr. Wilson, "my wife and I are besieged by crowds of interested people who are eager to inspect for themselves the personal belongings of the man whose influence was instrumental in creating an interest in this country for the natives of Africa."

"Which relic has been the most popular? Well, I think the section of the trunk of the tree under which the natives buried Dr. Livingstone's heart after his death has had the lion's share. As you will see, the trunk bears an inscription which was carved by his native followers, but as the tree showed signs of decay it was cut down by the Royal Geographical Society, and is now one of the most cherished possessions of that society."

"His diaries, of which we have seventeen, come in for an equal share of interest. Dr. Livingstone was always careful in regard to his daily records. As you will see, he used to make notes of his geographical soundings, and, in fact, everything of interest, such as curious peoples, animals, plants, and fishes, was noted in his diaries and was frequently accompanied by sketches. The last entry in his diary was made on April 27th, 1873, two or three days before he died. Under the circumstances, marking, as it does, the close of a glorious career, it is of pathetic interest. 'Knocked up quite, and remain—recover, sent to buy milk goats.'"

"When the natives found their master in the morning on his knees, dead, they embalmed his body as best they could, and carried it amidst the greatest perils to the shore, where it was placed in a crude coffin and brought to this country on a British battleship. On arrival at these shores the coffin was substituted for a more elaborate one, and the body buried in Westminster Abbey, whilst his heart still lies in the centre of Africa. The shell in which he was brought home is still preserved by the Royal Geographical Society, and, draped by a Union Jack, is in the Relics Court at the Orient in London."

"Among the other relics of interest are the boxes which were brought home by Stanley, one of which still bears grease spots from the candles made by Livingstone; the model of the hut built by the natives for the doctor to die in, and a piece of bark in which his body was wrapped; a map of Central Africa designed by himself, and his sextant and rulers, watch, boat compass, field-glasses, surgical instruments; two spears that were thrown at him by warlike tribes, and two four-barrelled revolvers which he used for procuring food and protection. It is surely a remarkable testimony to the influence of Livingstone among the natives when we realize that, in the face of many temptations throughout their nine months' journey, they safely brought the body to the coast, and handed all his belongings over to his friends."
