ONTARIO ELECTIONS.

Belief that Contest will Take Place Early in June, Legislative Business Rushed.

TORONTO, Ont., March 30.—(Special.)—The Globe today says that unless the unforeseen happens, an early end to the present session of the provincial legislature to be followed by an early election, is probable. Government business will now take precedence and will be pushed forward just as quickly as the opposition will allow.

With regard to the date of the election of the voters' list for unorganized districts, much depends upon the completion of the work. The work is well under way and if the list of new constituencies can be completed in time it is considered by some who are in close touch with the Government that the general election will take place on June 10 or 11.

DARING OUTRAGE.

New York Socialists threw Bomb into Police Squad.

Two attempted Assassins fatally injured.

NEW YORK, March 30. — A red flag fluttered in Union Square Saturday; a bomb fell; two men lay dying in the people's playground, and New York awoke to the fact that it harbored those prepared for armed resistance to constituted authority. The bomb was intended for the police who with rough firmness had broken up a meeting of 10,000 unemployed. It exploded prematurely in the hands of the assassin, Selig Silverstein, horribly wounding him, killing his companion, Irwin Raskin; injuring slightly four policemen, and throwing to the ground a score of those who were massed in the vicinity.

Bomb throwing in the foreign settlements of the East Side is a rather common occurrence, but Saturday saw for the first time here, an engine of destruction openly and deliberately directed at police officers. It was meant for Captain Reilly's squad of men, and had the fuse burned longer or slower, would have made a perfect instrument of death to probably every man of the squad. A labor, or more exactly, a laborless meeting without police sanction park benches, the police contented and that gathered were many of a riotous disposition and a large number wore red hats, whilst here and there a red flag was displayed. Suddenly an order to clear the park was given and the 150 police, half of them mounted, charged the jeering, hooting, crowds, and drove them back to the streets of the square circling the park.

In the wide streets the crowds, fast assuming the characteristics of a mob, fell into an indifferent formation and marched about the square. Having cleared the park of all but a few apparently harmless men on the park benches, the police contented themselves with keeping the paraders moving. Encouraged the procession grew; shouts of derision and oaths directed at the police filled the air, and then as though by prearrangement, the strains of The Marseillaise rose from 10,000 throats. The police, hastily reinforced, held themselves in restraint. Captain Reilly's squad, which had been stationed at the east side of the park, started as a double quick pace, two abreast, across the park. As they neared the fountain that marks the centre of the recreation grounds, a slightly built man darted out from the shadow cast by the statue of George Washington, and ran towards the officers, whose backs were now turned. A large man kept at the other's heels. Within twenty paces of the moving squad the two men halted, and the smaller raised his hand, in which was a smoking bomb. Just as he drew back his arm to throw the deadly missile it exploded. The shock that shook the sky-scrappers of the square threw a score of people to the ground. The would-be assassin and his companion fell, the latter lifeless, with his breast torn open. The bomb was blown off, both of his eyes were thrown still lived, but his hand had gouged out, and his skull and shoulder fractured. The four policemen who brought up the rear were injured, but not seriously, one of them being hit in the foot by a piece of the bomb.

A panic followed the explosion and the thousands who surrounded the park were jostled together as perhaps half their number rushed toward the scene of death, and many more turned in flight from the square. Many were injured as the mounted police surrounded the injured and again drove back the mob. A half-dozen arrests were made off-hand of those nearest the bomb-thrower, but no particular importance is attached to these arrests. Little is known of the bomb-thrower, beyond what he has told himself. Rendered unconscious at first, he later regained his senses at a hospital and under prolonged questioning, declared that he had been commissioned to kill the police. They had beat him, he said. At first he insisted that he acted alone, and later, when he said that his act was inspired, he refused to reveal the identity of his companion.

ed his sweetheart more than a year ago, was successfully electrocuted in Auburn prison this morning at 6:18.

ADVOCATED SCOTT ACT

Two of the City Clergymen Delivered Vigorous Addresses at Crowded Opera House Meeting.

The temperance people of the city to rally to the support of the Scott Act.

REV. MR. MCCONNELL.

Rev. J. W. McConnell followed in a brief address, during the course of which he handled the liquor dealers without gloves. He did not think that the people would consent to Frederickton coming down from the high vantage ground which it has occupied for thirty years, to the low level of a license town. Referring to Scott Act he said it was doubtful if the petition for the repeal of the such a collection of hieroglyphics had been seen since Pharaoh's time. He admitted that the names of some intelligent business men appeared on the list, but they were lending themselves to a wicked purpose. While a license law might reduce the number of places where liquor is sold it will not reduce the consumption of liquor. A license law would not close out the small dealers, but they would continue to sell and the license dealers would supply them. This plan had been followed in other places and it would be followed here, no matter what the opponents of the Scott Act might say. It was to him very amusing to hear the statement made that licenses would only be issued to men of good character. Imagine a man of good character being engaged in the liquor business. Talk about having a license inspector to see that the law is not violated. Why the might as well appoint the devil to inspect hell. Some people complained that the taxes in Frederickton were already high enough, and that the revenue from liquor licenses was needed in order to carry on the affairs of the city. He did not believe that the people wanted blood money to go into their public works.

In closing the Rev. gentleman said that the battle was now on, and it was up to the temperance people to take off their coats and fight. In the last election 900 women had signed a petition in favor of the Scott Act, and he believed that a movement should be inaugurated to secure the support of the women in the coming contest.

The very successful meeting closed with the doxology and benediction. Announcement was made that Rev. Dr. Kierstead would be the speaker at a meeting to be held next Sunday evening.

REV. MR. RIDEOUT.

Rev. Mr. Rideout, who was first called upon delivered an able address, which was frequently punctuated with applause. He took up considerable time at the outset, replying to statements which have lately appeared in the local press over various names de plumes. He claimed that this correspondence emanated from one person who was retained by the liquor interests to uphold their cause. The Scott Act he considered a good law if properly enforced. The men who now so persistently violated the Scott Act would be just as ready to violate a license law, as their future conduct could be only judged by their conduct in the past. He stated that two liquor dealers recently before the courts had promised the temperance people to sell no more liquor while the Canada Temperance Act remained in force in Frederickton. The temperance people had entered into this compact in good faith, and regretted to learn that it had been most shamefully violated by the other parties. Gars to their customers, and afterward exchange liquor for the cigars. The liquor sellers were out for the dollars and cared not how many homes they ruined in serving their ends. The temperance cause on the other hand was a righteous one, and was deserving of the support of all who took an interest in the social and moral welfare of the city. He closed with a strong appeal to the electors
