BISHOP RICHARDSON AND THE SCOTT ACT

Fredericton, Jan. 22, 1908.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Sir,—I was very much pained and disappointed in reading Bishop Richardson's letter of explanation in your late issue on the temperance question, because I had taken a great liking to him since he came among us, although I do not come under his teaching. I always made it a point to attend meetings where he took part, and was charmed with his manly utterances and Christian spirit.

He admits the Scott Act should be enforced, every good citizen believes this, but we know it is not, if it were we would have different results. It is enforced in other towns—Moncton for instance, no trouble, and why not this. He says it is an unwise law, from this we differ. If it was enforced and carried out to the very letter by the proper authorities it would be the best law we ever had on the statute book. This has been confirmed by some of our ablest lawyers and judges.

As for high license, we are surprised and pained to think His Lordship would advocate and welcome such. Why? Because the liquor traffic is an evil—is damnable from beginning to end. High license or low license. Oh never! we would not license an evil. We might make it free to any one and everyone to sell same as other goods, but to license, no never. Then our skirts are clear and clean of its damnable effects. We don't want the money derived from its sale, it is Blood Money.

The influence of the men who are anxiously seeking to repeal the Scott Act is shown by a young man, a good mechanic and an intelligent man on many points, who is under their guidance and influence, who are violators of the law, and in other words "criminals," going about our town asking respectable people to sign a paper to repeal the Act. This young man said he would sooner see his son come out of Dan Canty's on Regent street than from the Y. M. C. A. hall—just think of this. License a business that would make a man wish such of his own flesh and blood—No—oh, no! ten thousand times no.

How can His Lordship in view of such facts advocate and welcome high or any license. A high thinker, a good liver, a teacher of holy things, pure things, so far forget himself and his calling as to say such I am at a loss to know, can't understand it.

"Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color in the cup—for at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Or like the poet:

"Oh the power the gift to give us, to see ourselves as others see us, it would from many a blunder free us and foolish notion."

Oh Lord help us! God help us from this curse of curses! High license, Low License, and the Liquor Traffic. Every where you go you see the evil effects of this traffic, and we hope John Fredericton will reverse his discussion and have no license, no part in it, but advocate the banishment of the accused and damnable stuff from our land or five miles below fiddler's green which is said to be five miles below hell.

Yours respectfully,
SCOTT ACT MAN.

THE SOVEREIGN BANK

The Interests of Depositors has been Amply Safe Guarded

(Montreal Herald.)
Canadians have good reason to be proud of the way the Sovereign Bank went out of existence. There is no panic, there are no stings of depositors waiting for their money; there is no excess of timidity on the part of business men. The keys were turned to close the doors of the Sovereign Bank branches on Friday night, and on Saturday morning they were turned again to open branches of half a dozen other banks. From sun down to sun up the change had been arranged, and all any depositor needed to be curious about was to learn the name of the large bank that had taken over the particular branch in which he had his money. The Bank of Montreal, the Commerce, the Merchants, the Royal, the Toronto, the Dominion, the Imperial, the Standard, the B. N. A., the Hamilton, the Nova Scotia, the Ottawa, one or the other, and all together stood between him and loss. This is the second time in a year that the big banks have thus come to the rescue of the depositors of a small bank. There may be other countries where such things can happen, but we, living next door to a country where things do not happen that way, where the long lines form in front of the bank doors, where peoples' business is ruined because there funds are locked up in banks whose doors are closed, may at least congratulate our selves upon our special good fortune. The lesson of the incident is very clear. It points to the danger run by small and relatively weak banks which expose themselves to the risks that can be successfully encountered by the larger banks, and it shows that the ultimate security for Canadian depositors rests with the great banks. Those responsible for the conduct of the large banks have twice shown the extent of their solicitude for the general welfare, indeed three times, for the recent re-organization of the Sovereign could not have been accomplished but for their aid. But the question arises, can they be expected to go indefinitely discharging the like function? No doubt, self-interest, a desire to prevent anything like a serious disturbance in finance and commerce, has actuated them in these instances, but it might not be wise to assume that here interests, or interests they are bound to consider, would be served very time a demand was made upon them. As, therefore, the tendency in recent expansive times has been towards a multiplication of banks, the tendency in the future is apt to be towards an absorption of the weaker by the stronger. Let us hope it can proceed with no greater inconvenience to the public than has been felt these past few days.

In reply to Coun. Brewer, Mr. Bliss said that there was still $1,000 outstanding from the town of Marysville. A further payment had been promised by the town treasurer in the near future.

JUVENILE OFFENDERS.
Coun. Brewer said that at the July meeting of the council a committee had been appointed to consider a suggestion from Judge Wilson, in regard to finding employment for juvenile offenders committed to the county jail. The matter had been referred to a committee and he wanted to know if there was a report.

Coun. Morgan said that he did not quite understand the matter.

Coun. Brewer said that it had been proposed to fit up a lot in rear of the jail where the boys could be set to working breaking stone for the streets.

Coun. Cropley, the only member of the committee who was returned to the council, promised to have a report later on.

The warden appointed as a new committee Couns. Cropley, Sterling and Skeen. They will report later in the session.

Coun. Sterling, on behalf of the new councillors, invited the members of the board, county officers and reporters to an oyster supper at Lindsay's cafe at eight o'clock in the evening.

On motion the council adjourned until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock, to give the councillors a chance to make up their lists of county officers.

TO POLISH SILVER.

Alcohol Superior to Water in Mixing Powder for a Paste.

Nothing is ever more likely to prove a surer index of the capabilities of a housekeeper than the condition of the silver plate, which is in daily use.

Supervision is nearly always necessary where maids are concerned, an inexperienced servant often devoting much time to the polishing with astonishingly poor results, owing to ignorance of the simple A. B. C. of plate cleaning.

The fact is generally known that alcohol is far superior to water in making the whitening or plate-powder into a paste, although few people are aware that a little gin worked into the former will give a quicker polish, while in the absence of alcohol or wood-alcohol, or as an alternative, gin may with advantage be employed without the spirits. If spoons and forks coated with the whitening are placed at once close to the fire and allowed to dry quickly, polishing is also accelerated, while it must be remembered that a good result will never be obtained if the powder is removed before it is perfectly dry. A purpose, and a leather never utilized soft brush should be employed for the for any process of the final polishing.

Old knitted underwear, cut into squares and hemmed, make excellent cloths with which the give the first rub after using the brush, while many authorities recommend the active use of the finger tips in promoting a polish, a more lasting effect being hereby gained, and the chamois leather only regarded in the light of a finishing touch.

Omission on the part of the maid to steep the forks and spoons in hot soapuds for a few moments after washing them is often responsible for the dull condition of the plate, this simple precaution insuring that every particle of grease is removed before the article is ready to be dried. Unless this is effected, the soft towel with which the silver is dried, and the manipulations of the polishing leather only succeed in diffusing a probable unnoticed speck of grease over the surface of the article.

On the mighty deep,
The great ocean liner rolled and pitched.
Henry, faltered the young bride, do you still love me?

More than ever, darling! was Henry's fervent answer.

Then there was an eloquent silence. Henry, she gasped, turning her pale ghastly face away, I thought that would make me feel better, but it doesn't!
