

TEARFUL,

Trembling, frightened, she knows not why. Between her sobs she tells her husband of her misery. It is not enough for the husband to comfort the wife in this condition, she needs help. In those early days when the shadow of maternity first begins to fall upon the woman she is often nervous, sleepless, without appetite, and full of vague fears.

The help needed by women at this crisis is fully furnished by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It nourishes the nerves and so quiets them. It restores the appetite and induces refreshing sleep. It gives physical strength and mental buoyancy to meet the trial of motherhood, and makes the baby's advent practically painless.

"I will be very glad to say a few words for Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. P. S. Douglas, of Mansenville, Brome Co., Que. "During the first four months when I looked to becoming a mother I suffered very much from nausea and vomiting, and I felt so terribly sick I could scarcely eat or drink anything. I hated all kinds of food. At this time I wrote to Dr. Pierce and he told me to get his 'Favorite Prescription' and a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery.' I got a bottle of each and when I had taken them a few days I felt much better, and when I had taken hardly three parts of each bottle I felt well and could eat as well as any one, and could do my work without any trouble (I could not do anything before). I feel very thankful to Dr. Pierce for his medicine, and I tell all who tell me they are sick to get these medicines or write to Dr. Pierce."

KIPLING AND HIS WORKS.

"Perhaps no one receives such large prices for his work as Mr. Rudyard Kipling. He has contracted to write eight stories for one of the magazines next year, for each of which he will receive about £240. This is simply for the English serial rights of the stories. In addition Mr. Kipling receives payment from America, India and the colonies. This will probably bring up the price of the stories to about £500 each, making £4,000 for the year. In addition to this, Mr. Kipling receives the royalties for book publication in England and America. This will not amount to less than about £4,000, so that for each story the author ultimately receives not less than £1,000. Whether these high prices will be kept up is very doubtful. If the cheap magazinism succeeds in injuring the older periodicals they cannot be maintained. It remains to be seen whether the public cares much for names, and it must be remembered that the papers with the largest circulation in this country do not depend upon names at all. I remember some years ago Mr. Kipling contributed one of his best pieces of work, better work by a great deal than he has been doing lately, to a monthly review. The editor informed me that not one extra copy of the periodical was sold."

Among the first of the stories of Kipling to attract attention was "The Man Who Would Be King," and later came from his prolific and versatile pen such fascinating stories as "The Phantom Rickshaw," "The Taking of Lungtungpen," "The Strange Ride of Morrowbie Jukes," "The Matter of a Private," "The Rout of the White Hussars" and "The Story of the Gadsbys," a number of which are included in "The Plain Tales From the Hills," which give vivid and interesting pictures of native and garrison life in India. Kipling's fame as a poet is not less well merited than his reputation as a writer of fiction. "The Truce of the Bear," in which he attacked the aggression of Russia, is one of his strongest poems, while "Betroted" may be regarded as one of the most delightful of the products of his poetic genius. Other poems which have attracted wide and favorable attention are "The Seven Seas," "McAndrew's Hymn," "The Mary Gloster," "Tommy Atkins" and "Files on Parade." His latest poems, which all the English speaking world know almost by heart, "The Recessional" and "The White Man's Burden," have given him enduring fame as a poet.

Chimneys That Lean.

"It's just this," said the man with the restless eye, who was gazing skyward—"some ten years ago some man who had a grudge against me, I guess, called my attention to the fact, if fact it be, that if a chimney leans at all it always leans to the east."

"I didn't believe it, and I can hardly believe it yet, but I've spent hours and days and weeks and months squinting at chimneys from car windows and from sidewalks, but I'll be darned if I ever yet have been able to discover a leaning chimney that didn't slant to the east. I've looked at factory chimneys, hotel chimneys, farmhouse chimneys and city house chimneys, and they all, like the adobe gods on the temples of Yucatan, bend their heads toward the rising sun."

And the man with the restless eye once more began an inspection of the sky line.

MAN IS NOT MONARCH.

His Senses Are Less Acute Than Are Those of Animals.

Man's vaunted faculties are far less acute than some of the lesser creatures.

The human eye is a wonderful piece of mechanism, with its little bundle of nerves that in some mysterious way make visualization possible. Yet this eye, with all its delicacy of discernment, is but a circumscribed organ as compared with the eye of the eagle, which sees infinitely farther than can any human eye. The same is true of the human ear. The rats and the mice that haunt our houses, the squirrels that caper about the woods and the numberless other little animals all hear better than we do. They may not trace refinement in sound as accurately as can man, but for catching sound at long range theirs are the ears most perfectly constructed.

The sense of touch is more accurately developed elsewhere in the animal kingdom than in man. No man made device for measuring water pressure equals that of the fish, whose sides all strung with nerves register the water pressure correctly every time and inform his fishship just how much he can stand and when to move up or down.

A dog's sense of smell is always respected by man, who frequently, as in the case of a hunter, relies on it to supplement the findings of his own less active olfactory nerve.

When it comes to the human voice, there are birds with whose music man's music cannot be compared. Not Patti herself ever sang more sweetly than the meadow lark at break of day.

Cod Liver Oil From Beans.

During the wait between acts a medical student and a young woman who sat together became slightly embarrassed for topics of conversation. Finally and not unnaturally in view of the nature of the young man's studies their talk drifted to the subject of disagreeable tasting medicines. Among the horrors they mentioned were cod liver oil and castor oil.

"I don't see," mused the young woman, "how any one can bear to eat the beans that stuff is made of."

"What kind of beans do you mean?" inquired the young man.

"Why, cod liver oil beans, to be sure."

"Aren't you thinking of castor beans?" ventured her companion.

"Why, I always thought cod liver oil was made from beans," she said, and the good breeding of the young man was shown by the fact that he didn't even smile, but several of those who sat near by hadn't equal control over their features.

Under Cover of Darkness.

The minister of a Scotch parish was going from home and procured the clergyman of a neighboring parish to officiate on Sunday. His servant, who was also the beadle, was sent over to the station to drive the reverend gentleman to the manse.

When the train arrived, the beadle asked him to wait awhile, as he had some messages to do before he went. It was two hours before he returned. The good man was furious and threatened to report him to his master.

"Weel, sir, ye can dae that if ye like," said the beadle, "but he tell't me himsel' to wait till it was dark afore I drove ye ower, for if the folk o' the village saw wha was to preach the morn nobody wad turn oot ava."
