THE TARIFF AND THE WEST.

What Cartwright Said Last Session in Parliament.

GOOD CANADIANISM AND GOOD COMMON SENSE.

Sir Richard Cartwright, having recently been asked for his views on the tariff controversy, said that they were to be found in his speech at Ottawa last session. It was an excellent speech, and worth repeating.

He said that after long years of waiting western Canada was at last beginning to grow as it ought to do. "I warn our people to beware that they do not check the progress now going on. It is no idle dream to say that if we do as well within the next decade as Dakota and Minnesota have done, we may look for a population of two millions, or at the lowest a million and a half, in the valleys of the Saskatchewan, the Red River and the Assiniboine, and in the vast territory that extends towards the Peace River district; and we may double the volume of our trade. I do not altogether agree with some of the demands of our friends in the north-west; but I heartily sympathize with them in the view they take of the great future that awaits Canada if she will only stretch out her hand and seize the opportunities that present themselves to us there. And let me say further to the people of Canada, if you are desirous of entering into a controversy or a commercial war with the United States, the true way to conquer them is to show them that you have a population increasing faster than theirs, that you have a volume of trade far in excess of theirs. Then, indeed, you may reasonably hope in a comparatively short space of time to have them knocking at your door. This is for Canada the true path to greatness, the true path to wealth. Let us not turn our backs upon it."

Sir Richard also referred to the complaint that Canada was being made a dumping ground for American manufactures. "I have heard plaintive wails that heathen Yankees, not having the fear of God or of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association before their eyes, come to Canada and actually have the audacity to sell goods to Canadian consumers at a lower price than that at which they sell them to their own people. It is even said, though this lacks proof, that they sell them at less than cost, in their greed to monopolize so profitable a trade; and it is said that there are many Canadians so unpatriotic, so dead to all lofty feeling, that they will actually purchase American goods for no better reason than the fact that they can obtain them better and cheaper than they can similar goods in their own country. It is a very sad state of things, no doubt. But to my mind it is a much sadder thing that Canada should be, as Canada was for eighteen years under the National Policy, no better than a breeding ground for people of the United States. Here is where Canada was landed in 1896—in depopulation and stagnation, utter incapacity to utilize her vast territory, and with political corruption practically reduced to a fine art. Now, I counsel the people of Canada no more to copy Yankee vices. I do not want them to imitate the Yankee fiscal policy or Yankee political methods. I desire, like hon. gentlemen opposite, that Canadians should think for themselves; and if they imitate the people of the United States, I advise them to imitate their good qualities, not their bad ones. Let them imitate their pluck, their patriotism, their energy, their push, their skill in developing and utilizing their waste territory. If they do that, sir, I have no fear for the result."

This is good Canadianism and good sense.

MONK IS NO FRIEND OF HIS.

Sir Adolphe Caron, who was Postmaster-General in the Cabinet of Sir Charles Tupper, was very angry a few days ago. He sent a telegram to the secretary of the Club Morin during a picnic held by that organization on Sunday last at Eastache. Among other nice things he said: "I wish success to your club."

In the evening the despatch appeared in La Presse, with some changes, however, for instead of success to the club, it read: "I wish success to my friend Monk."

Sir Adolphe did not like this. There is a suggestion of schism between the former minister and the present Conservative leader in Quebec, Mr. Monk. Rumor has it that Sir Adolphe is not a docile follower of Mr. Monk. At all events he wrote La Presse expressing surprise at the insertion of Mr. Monk's name in his telegram to the secretary of the Conservative club.

Sir Adolphe says in conclusion: "I wanted to say exactly what I said, nothing more, for reasons that Mr. Monk knows as well as I do."

Referring to the change of words, La Presse asks: "Who therefore committed the forgery?" Who wished to mislead the people to think that Sir A. P. and Mr. Monk walked hand in hand? Everybody knows that Sir A. P. Caron and his friends do not recognize Mr. Monk as their chief."

PREMIER OF ONTARIO

Makes a Deliverance on the Tariff Question.

In an address at the opening of the Strathroy, Ont., exhibition, Hon. Geo. W. Ross, premier of Ontario, referring to the tariff question, said the Dominion Government had great difficulties in adjusting the tariff to suit everybody. The farmer may want a certain policy that would not be satisfactory to the manufacturer; but the people of Canada can be trusted to settle the difficulty. An adjustment of the tariff will have to be made from time to time for the next generation; there is no finality in it. He cared not by what name it is called. In West Middlesex they used to think they were free traders, and in 1878 they persuaded themselves that the nearer they were to free trade the better, and he believed so still, just as he believed the nearer we are to heaven the better. But free trade in this country is an actual impracticability. Then what are we going to do? Study our own conditions. He cared not who said "No," or who said "Yes." What we want is a tariff to suit ourselves first, last and always. It mattered not to him how that is adjusted, so long as we got the highest degree of prosperity under it, nor did he care whether it suited anybody else or not so long as it suited ourselves. It mattered not whether the Americans liked it or not. We have nothing to do with them, except to keep them on their own side of the line, if necessary. He did not talk retaliation, but, supposing our neighbors' cattle get into our farm and we put up our fences to keep them out, is that retaliation? No, no; we are simply taking care of our own. If we want to take our neighbor's fence down and turn our cattle into his farm that would be retaliatory, but he would build up his fences if he wanted to. This is a pure business matter, and he endorsed Mr. Tarte's motto, "Business is business." He subscribed thoroughly to Mr. Tarte's doctrine of manufacturing our own raw material and keeping our manufacturing industries here and building them up, and when we have done this we have done all that as good Canadians we ought to do and can be expected to do.

U. C. C. OLD BOYS AND DR PARKIN.

The Old Boys' Association of Upper Canada College, at Toronto, has unanimously passed the following resolution respecting Dr. Parkin: The Old Boys' Association of Upper Canada College have learned with regret that Dr. Parkin is about to resign his position as Principal of the college, though they at the same time congratulate him upon his appointment to a wider sphere of usefulness. The association cannot allow Dr. Parkin to leave the college without expressing their sense of the great services he has rendered to the institution, and their sincere regret at losing him.

One Common Cause of Headache.

Perhaps the most general cause of headache and pain across the eyes is nasal catarrh. The simplest cure is to inhale the medicated vapor of Catarrhazone which traverses every air cell and passage of the throat, lungs and nose. It kills thousands of germs at every breath, clears away mucous discharges, preserves and heals the membrane. Catarrhazone is just a splendid remedy for headache, and its action is certain and unfailing in diseases of the throat and Lungs, Deafness, Bronchitis, Asthma and Catarrh. A trial will convince the most sceptical that Catarrhazone is all right. Large size 25c. Druggists, or N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, Ont. Dr. Hamilton's Pills Cure Constipation.

OUR TRADE WITH SOUTH AFRICA.

Ottawa, Sept. 27.—Mr. P. Ryan, of Rose Bank, Cape Town, an ex-member of the Cape Colony Legislature, and for forty years a resident of the colony, is in the capital enjoying the hospitality of friends whose acquaintance he formed during the war period, and looking after trade openings. He is a member of a leading wholesale agency, dealing principally in articles of hardware. But it is not in manufactured products that Mr. Ryan sees Canada's chance in South Africa.

"While I have closed a contract for a sample shipment from Toronto, of canned meats and that sort of stuff," Mr. Ryan explained, "I think that Canada's opportunity for trade in South Africa is in the way of cereals. I have been greatly impressed with the development of your Northwest and its illimitable supply of wheat. We in South Africa will require to be fed for some years to come, and I would much prefer to be fed on Canadian wheat than United States or Russian. I hope Canada will supplant the United States in supplying our food-stuffs. There is a big field as it will be years before our agriculture develops sufficiently to provide for the country."

"I hope that we will be able to buy manufactured goods in Canada. You know we Cape Colonists are all protectionists, and we are hoping for the day when there will be an Imperial Zollverein. I have just come from England and I find 80 per cent. of the public men there are recovering from their free trade beliefs. Needless to say I am pleased to find Canada becoming more and more protectionist. When I think of the money and lives which our war has cost Britain and her colonies, I do not want to see an article of other than British manufacture sold in Cape Colony."

"Take care of the pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves."

Large things are but an aggregation of small things. If we take care of the small things we are in effect taking care of the large things which the small things combine to make.

Take care of what you eat, and your stomach will take care of itself. But who takes care of such trivial things? That is why, someday, the majority of people have to take care of the stomach. When that day comes, there is no aid so effective in undoing the results of past carelessness as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the stomach, and restores the organs of digestion and nutrition to a condition of healthy activity. It cures biliousness, heartburn, flatulence, indigestion, palpitation, dizziness, cold extremities and a score of other ailments which are but the symptoms of disorder in the stomach and its allied organs.

CHIPPEWA MURDER.

Chippewa, Ont., Sept. 26.—Further investigation of the murder of Mrs. Franks a widow of this place, shows the crime was a most atrocious one. The body was found in the woman's bedroom, with the top of her head cut and smashed in as though with a club or piece of iron pipe. As the tea things were still on the table, it is believed that Mrs. Franks was eating her supper when the murderer forced his way through the back door. Upon entering he pursued her through the bedroom into the front room and there killed her by striking her over the head with some instrument. Right against the wall there is a pool of blood, where the victim fell when struck, and blood is profusely splashed over the wall. The woman was then evidently carried part of the way to the middle room, but perhaps, finding the body too heavy to carry further, the murderer dropped it to the floor and dragged it into the room where it was found. A struggle had evidently taken place, for Mrs. Franks' calico dress was almost entirely torn from her body, one sleeve of it being torn off.

Mrs. Franks' broken spectacles and comb were found on the floor in the front room, near a pool of blood, and beside the body a silver-plated knife was discovered, which she evidently carried in her hand from the tea table. No clue has yet been discovered, which would in any way go to clear up the mystery as to the perpetrator of the deed.

The motive of the crime evidently was robbery, although as far as is known the amount of money taken was trifling, notwithstanding the fact that the house was ransacked.

And, said the good fairy, for your noble deeds I will grant you any wish you may desire. I will choose, said the lucky person, a ton of coal. Hereupon there arose great consternation in the ranks of the fairies, which terminated in a proposition to arbitrate the matter in order, if possible, to compromise on a ton of diamonds.—Baltimore American.

IDLENESS AND ENNUI

Are the Chief Causes of the Downfall of Women.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE PRACTICAL EDUCATION OF GIRLS.

(Max O'Rell in New York American.)

I was, a few days ago, speaking with a charming Frenchwoman on the subject of the education of young girls. My friend is a woman of society (I don't say a "society woman"), sensible, most intelligent, the mistress of one of the happiest homes I ever was privileged to visit, and the mother of two young girls who are, to my mind, the perfect embodiment of what young girls should be.

All she told me made a deep impression on me, and I should like to make my lady readers acquainted with some of my friend's ideas on this most important subject: How are young girls to be educated? The following is a summing-up of her ideas:

Do not let young girls lose their illusions, but at the same time see that they never become dreamers. A woman must be matter-of-fact, or, if you prefer, not romantic, so that she may never seek the impossible and ask or expect of life what it cannot offer to her. Imagination and exaltation are the enemies of women, and you should avoid supplying girls with plays, books or anything which can feed them.

Your daughter should have many girl friends, but none intimate; no bosom friend to whom she can confide her secrets in mysterious conversations. Her mother should be her only bosom friend.

Idleness and ennui can answer for nine-tenths at least of the misfortunes which befall women, girls especially. Your daughter should be constantly busy. However rich you may be, she should be taught how to make her living in case any disaster should happen in her family.

If she has talent for art, she should be a good pianist or singer or able to draw sufficiently well to illustrate books; if she has literary taste, she should know how to write well an impression she has received, an incident she has witnessed a landscape she has admired.

She should know stenography and typewriting and be a good letter writer. A girl who knows these things can make from $30 to $50 a week in New York. She should be a good dressmaker and know how to keep a house with order and economy at sixteen. She should be taught how to purchase intelligently, how to know good and lasting materials from shoddy.

She should learn the proper use of money by having so much money every month for her own use. She should be taught to invariably pay cash down for all she buys, and never on any account be allowed to run into debt—not for one dollar, even.

She should be taught, gently but firmly, that whatever her parents' position may be, she cannot have all she takes a fancy to. From the beginning she should be led to see how pleasant it is to possess a little more, just a little more, than you need.

Economy is not niggardliness; good order is not avarice. If you see that under your guidance she spends her money sensibly; if, especially, you discover that, without telling you of it, she gives something to the poor, increase her allowance every year.

When that girl marries she will be a most useful wife. If her husband is rich she will spend money discreetly and well, if a misfortune happens to him she will be the very woman he wants to help him repair his losses and soon recover his former position.

Teach her discretion, consideration and the love of her own sex. In her presence always take the defence of women, and never allow a woman to be slandered before her without imposing silence to the slanderer.

Such are, among others, the ideas of my friend on the education of a young girl.
