Burnt Straw Toques—The Proper Way to Wear a Hat.

For seashore wear a couple of light flannel frocks made in comfortable blouse fashion, with loose short coats, will be found very useful.

Burnt straw toques and hats are ideal to wear with tailor made garments. These can be trimmed simply with detachable bows or foulard to match the costume with which they are worn.

Frenchwomen invariably wear their hats forward to shade the eyes. This is infinitely more becoming, as it throws a soft shadow and protects the face from the glare of the sun. If a woman wishes to wear her hat off her face, she can have it tilted up with a band, but it should still be allowed to extend forward.

Ribbon work is a great deal used, and, in spite of the coming warm days, silk chenille embroidery has by no means gone out of fashion, but is seen on very sheer and delicate gowns.

A smart negligee of pale blue nun's veiling is here shown. It has a wide collar and also ruffles of yellow lace. The back and front hang in full gathers, and the sides are fitted.

A COSMOPOLITAN CITY.

Characteristics of Residents and Visitors of the City of Winnipeg.

The people of Winnipeg, both the residents and the visitors, are the most interesting feature of this truly cosmopolitan city. The residents come from all portions of the earth, though the predominating class are the descendants of the sturdy Scotch settlers whom Lord Selkirk planted along the banks of the Red River during the first quarter of the past century. They are the whole-souled, generous sort of Scotch, imbued with western hospitality. The transient visitor finds this hospitality extended to him only so far as their clubs and places of business are concerned. There he is made more than welcome, but it must be more than a passing acquaintance who gains access to their homes. They do not extend invitations to their homes to every passing stranger, and when such an invitation is given it means that the invited one has passed the stage of mere acquaintanceship and entered that of friendship.

But no less interesting than the residents are the visitors at Winnipeg. On the streets, at the depots and at the hotels one will meet people from every land and every clime. They come garbed in all the finery and furbelows of the far east, or the magnificent fashions of Europe, or the primitive costumes of the far north. In color these visitors are white, black, brown, yellow and red. They represent all classes and stages of civilization from the highly educated white man of Europe to the painted savage of the northern forests, and they speak every language known to man. There is no city on the American continent of equal size where so many varieties of humanity may be seen as at Winnipeg, unless it be at Vancouver. It is a passing point for the people of the east and west.
