

On Her Feet

All day long and racking with pain from her head to her heels. That is what many a self-supporting girl must experience. On those days each month, when in other circumstances she would go to bed, she must still be at the desk or counter and struggle through the day as best she may.

Backache, headache, and other pains caused by womanly diseases are perfectly cured by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It cures the cause of these pains. It establishes regularity, dries enfeebling drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

PAIN ALL GONE.

"I have taken your medicine with the greatest satisfaction," writes Mrs. George Riehl, of Lockport Station, Westmoreland Co., Penna. "Your Favorite Prescription" has cured me of uterine trouble that I suffered from for fifteen years, and painful monthly troubles. I can honestly say I can work a whole day and not get tired, and before taking Dr. Pierce's medicine I always felt tired. My pain is all gone and I feel like a new person. I suffered with headache all the time, but have no headache now since taking your medicine. I have been cured of troubles that I suffered from for fifteen years, and the best doctor in the state could not cure me."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to pay expense of customs and mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Lord Rosebery and Cathedral.

When Lord Rosebery is stopping at his seat at Mentmore, he is an excellent host in a quiet way to his neighbors, more especially to the clergy of the district. On one occasion a young vicar, but recently appointed to his benefice, was asked to dinner. When the ladies had withdrawn, the vicar was somewhat embarrassed by his host's suddenly accosting him to this effect: "I have just had occasion to visit two of our largest and most beautiful cathedrals. What is the use or purpose of such vast buildings, that are so rarely filled, and that are so often in very small cities? You come, Mr. —, from a cathedral town, can you kindly solve the problem?"

After a moment's hesitation, the young vicar replied: "I have sometimes heard a question asked by strangers on the roads in this district, 'What is that vast and beautiful house on the high ground yonder?' meaning your Lordship's house of Mentmore. The answer is 'Why that is the seat of one of the King's chief nobles.' With such an answer people are well content. They think the building suitable. And yet, my Lord, it is but seldom, I should think, that all the halls and rooms of Mentmore are filled. We don't grumble at the size of the house; a dignified position requires dignified surroundings." "I am well answered," said Lord Rosebery, and turned the conversation. Some of the company thought he was annoyed, but a little later, as they left the dining room, he put his hand on the young parson's shoulder, and said: "A good answer; I thank you for it."—From M.A.P.

Feather-Bed Officers.

A correspondent sends to Justice, London, England, a copy of a letter from a volunteer just returned from active service in the Transvaal. The writer says:

"The real trouble is always the convoy. Will it be believed that an officer commanding a column I was recently with traveled in a wagon bigger than a railway saloon carriage? The column was halted every day for two hours, during which time a stove and chimney were dug out of this wagon, and this brilliant commanding officer's lunch cooked thereon. The wagon went with us when we went on night marches as a flying column. The other officers traveled with cricket bats, etc., golf and polo sticks, spring beds and mattresses, banjoes, tables and chairs, and a bell tent each, to say nothing of mess tents and other impediments, such as whiskey carts. Result—The men are half the time risking their lives to defend the convoy instead of being able to quickly reinforce any portion of the column attacked."

Remembering His Enemies.

Mr. Edward Wortley Montagu, son of the famous Lady Mary, endeavored to be very sarcastic in his last will and testament. After some insignificant bequest "to my noble and worthy relation, the Earl of —," he adds: "I do not give his lordship any further part of my property because the best part of that he has contrived to take already. Item: To Sir Francis — I give one word of mine because he never had the good fortune to keep his own. Item: To Lord M. I give nothing because I know he will bestow that on the poor. Item: To Sir Robert W. I leave my political opinions, never doubting he can well turn them into cash who has always found such an excellent market for his own."

No Reporters Allowed.

It may appear incredible that there could ever have lived a politician who objected to having his bursts of oratory displayed before an admiring public. From time immemorial, so far at least as American history is concerned, except in case of solemn secret session, in which, as everybody knows, no business of importance is ever transacted, the portals of the historic capitol have been wide open to the knights of the stub.

Yet 'twas not always so, for the records of parliament show that for many decades—indeed all during the great Revolution and for a century after—no reporter was allowed to hear a word of the assembly's doings. The times were troublous. Not knowing that the man he roasted today might not be in a position to relieve him of his head tomorrow, the speaker was naturally anxious to keep as much as possible of the flow of spirit to himself.

Of the endless gems of Bolingbroke, of whom Pitt the elder said that he would rather read one of his speeches than the best masterpiece of antiquity, not a word remains; of Pitt himself, with the exception of a few orations so obviously padded that no reliance can be placed on them, we have nothing, and in earlier, rougher days, King Pym, him whose unbridled genius gained him the name of the most inspiring mover of the time, Hampden and Strode, are all gone. The great mass of these lost orations would throw a valuable light on the history of all time.

The Terrible Hamadryad.

There is only one beast that will track you down to avenge the death of its mate no matter how far you go, and that is a snake.

Moreover, it is the most terrible of all snakes and the largest of the poisonous variety. Its name is the hamadryad. A bite from this reptile will kill the strongest man in two minutes, and of course there is no remedy. No one bitten by a hamadryad has ever survived. It chiefly belongs to the far east.

There are generally two hamadryads if there is one, and if you kill one of them the other will be on your track before long in all probability. Short of taking ship across the sea there is no way of escaping unless you watch for the snake and shoot it. It will follow you for miles for the chance of a stealthy stroke, and you may climb trees or mountains or ford rivers, but there is no way of evading the hamadryad. It is a sort of nightmare hunt to be chased by one, and when the chase begins either one or the other will have to die within a day or so. The mate of the slain snake never makes a mistake, but always kills the slayer of its companion and him alone. This reptile grows to a length of 15 feet sometimes and is fairly common in Malay and New Guinea. One scratch from its fangs is certain and instant death.

Bathing the chest with cold water each morning will greatly strengthen it, and friction should also be used.

LOADED UP WITH IMPURITIES.

IN THE SPRING THE SYSTEM IS LOADED UP WITH IMPURITIES.

After the hard work of the winter, the eating of rich and heavy foods, the system becomes clogged up with waste and poisonous matter, and the blood becomes thick and sluggish.

This causes Loss of Appetite, Biliousness, Lack of Energy and that tired, weary, listless feeling so prevalent in the spring.

The cleansing, blood-purifying action of

eliminates all the pent-up poison from the system, starts the sluggish liver working, acts on the Kidneys and Bowels, and renders it, without exception,

The Best Spring Medicine.
