Fred J. Mashaw of Billings, Montana, who claims to have been stolen by the St. Regis Indians when he was a child, wants to trace his relatives, who live near Ottawa, and also how his name is spelt. Lieut.-Col. McLean of Cummings Bridge, on noticing the letter, wrote Mr. Mashaw that he knew a Joseph Michaud, who lived in North Plantagenet, and had removed to the Costor River in Russell about the year 1847, who was said to have had a child stolen by the Indians early in the forties. It also turns out that Napoleon Michaud of 217 Rochester street, Ottawa, is a nephew of the "old lost boy," and that he has a brother, Xavier Michaud, in Masonville, Delta County, Michigan. These facts have been communicated to Mashaw.

Binnington has resided in Stapledon for several years, and is an industrious, popular man. He has been engaged in farming operations since coming to Canada. The receipt of the princely fortune has made no change in Binnington, who is still one of the boys, acknowledging the name Joe from everyone. He will leave shortly for England to look after his new-found wealth. His good fortune is the talk of the country side.

SHE PATIENTLY BORE DISGRACE

A Sad letter from a lady whose Husband was Dissipated.

How She Cured Him with a Secret Remedy.

"I had for a long time been thinking of trying the Tasteless Samaria Prescription treatment on my husband for his drinking habits, but I was afraid he would discover that I was giving him medicine, and he thought unwell of me. I hesitated for nearly a week, but one day when he came home very much intoxicated and his week's salary nearly all spent, I threw off all fear and determined to make an effort to save our home from the ruin I saw coming at all hazards. I sent for your Tasteless Samaria Prescription, and put it in his coffee as directed next morning and watched and prayed for the result. At noon I gave him more and also at supper. He never suspected a thing, and I then boldly kept right on giving it regularly, as I had discovered something that set every nerve in my body tingling with hope and happiness and I could see a bright future spread out before me—a peaceful, happy home, a share in the good things of life, an attentive, loving husband, comforts and everything else dear to a woman's heart; for my husband had told me that whiskey was vile stuff and he was taking a dislike to it. I was only too true, for before I had given him the full course he had stopped drinking all together, but I kept giving him the medicine till it was gone, and then sent for another lot, to have on hand if he should relapse, as he had done on promises before. He never hit, and I am writing you this letter to tell you how the kuf I am. I honestly believe it will cure the worst cases."

HAIR OF THE SLOTH.

It Is Green In Color and For a Peculiar Reason.

It is a very curious fact that certain plants grow and thrive on the hair of sloths. Apart from its extremely coarse and brittle nature, the most striking peculiarity of the outer hair of the sloth is its more or less decidedly green tinge. Now, green is a very rare color among mammals, and there ought, therefore, to be some special reason for its development in the sloth, and, as a matter of fact, the means by which this coloration is produced is one of the most marvelous phenomena in the whole animal kingdom, so marvelous, indeed, that it is at first almost impossible to believe that it is true.

The object of this peculiar type of coloration is, of course, to assimilate the animal to its leafy surroundings and thus to render it as inconspicuous as possible, and when hanging in its usual position from the underside of a bough its long, coarse and green tinged hair is stated to render the sloth almost indistinguishable from the bunches of gray green lichens among which it dwells. In the outer sheath of the hairs of the al there are a number of transverse cracks, and in these cracks grows a primitive type of plant—namely, a one celled alga.

And for the benefit of nonbotanical readers it may be well to mention here that algae, among which seaweeds are included, form a group of flowerless plants related on the one hand to the fungi and on the other to the lichens. In the moist tropical forests forming the home of the sloths the algae in the cracks of their hairs grow readily and thus communicate to the entire coat that general green tint which, as already said, is reported to render them almost indistinguishable from the clusters of lichen among which they hang suspended.

You can't be healthy if your blood is impure or watery,—if poison is circulating through your arteries instead of rich, pure, life-giving blood.

"I have been using B.B.B., also my brother and sister-in-law, and we find it a most reliable and efficacious blood purifier, and most cordially recommend it. We purchased it from J. R. Ault & Sons of this town." MISS C. M. WATSON, Aultsville, Ont.
