Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, June 14.—(Special).—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market, the receipts of livestock for the week ending June 12, were 2250 cattle, 250 sheep and lambs, 1600 hogs and 1000 calves. While the offerings for local consumption this morning were 1000 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 100 calves. A feature this morning was the fact that fully 75 per cent. of the cattle offered were grassers, which is the first fair run of this class of stock this season, and considering average quality and condition prices were high. The market was by no means as good as it has been of late, owing to the fact that the supply was much larger and this, coupled with hot, muggy weather, tended to check the demand. Cable advices from Liverpool were stronger and noted an advance of 1/4c to 1/2c per pound, with trade firm, but there was little demand from exporters here on account of quality and high prices. Extra choice steers sold at 6 1/2c, choice at 6 1/4c, good at 6 1/2c to 6 1/4c, fair at 5 1/2c to 5 1/4c, medium at 4 1/2c to 4 1/4c, and the common at 4c to 4 1/2c per lb. Hog prices were about steady under a fair demand, and supplies were ample. Good trade was done at $3.50 per cwt. for selected lots, weighed off the cars. Cable advices from Liverpool, London and Bristol on Saturday on Canadian bacon noted a decline of 1c to 2c per cwt. Supplies of small meats were fair, for which the demand was not very urgent. Prices sheep ruled lower with sales at 4c to 5c per lb. Spring lambs were steady at $2 to $6 each, and calves from $1.50 to $8. At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market receipts for the week ending June 12 were 1288 cattle for export account, and 600 cattle, 185 sheep and lambs, 200 hogs and 1333 calves for local consumption. The supply this morning consisted of 200 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 325 hogs and 200 calves. Exports for the week were 2277 cattle.

KING'S CLOSE SHAVES

HIS MAJESTY HAS OFTEN NARROWLY ESCAPED DEATH.

Although He Has Only Once Been Shot at by a Would-Be Assassin, Edward VII. Has Come Near Being Killed by Accident—Windlass on Ship Broke Just After He Moved Away—Close Call From Typhoid.

The King has had quite an alarming number of narrow escapes from death; so often has he been in dire peril that one begins to believe that the sovereign bears a charmed existence!

Only one attempt at assassination has been made upon His Majesty, and that, luckily, proved unsuccessful. The dastardly assassin was a youth named Spido, whose half-imbued idea that he had been ordained to "set things right," as the times were "out of joint." The unfortunate young fellow had read much pernicious literature containing libels upon our royal family and upon the naval and military authorities. It was in the memorable year 1900, when England was at war with the Boers. The King, who was at that time Prince of Wales and heir to the throne, was passing through Brussels on his way to Denmark, and the fanatical Spido contrived, through the carelessness of the station authorities, to gain access to the platform. As the royal train began to move out from the station the young assassin leapt on to the foot board and, drawing a revolver, levelled it at the head of the Prince of Wales, firing two shots in rapid succession. Both bullets miraculously missed the prince, embedding themselves in the woodwork of the saloon. The shots were fired at so short a range that the escape of the prince can only be regarded as miraculous.

The King, while lunching aboard H.M.S. Sultan, was one day watching with much interest the proceedings of the sailors in connection with the trial of a new gun. After regarding the proceedings for some time the King casually stepped back a few paces. The very second that the King moved the windlass broke away, the handle revolving with tremendous rapidity in the exact spot where His Majesty had been standing. Sir Claude de Crespiigny, who witnessed the affair, says, "Had the King not moved away a second earlier he would certainly have been struck and killed by that murderous handle!"

No man ever had a narrower escape from death by typhoid than His Majesty, in the latter part of the year 1871. For days the prince lay unconscious, stricken by the terrible disease, and Queen Victoria journeyed post-haste from Scotland to Sandringham to be present at what was feared would be her son's death-bed. The most skilful doctors could give no hope, and a cloud of awful uncertainty hung like a pall over the country. On the first day of December the prince rallied, and the hopes of the nation brightened, only to be dashed to the ground by the news of a serious relapse, on which occasion hope was finally abandoned, the whole of the royal family being summoned to the bedside. To the astonishment of the eminent physicians the prince still lingered on, and ultimately, to the joy of the nation, he completely recovered.

The serious illness of the King previous to his coronation will be remembered by all, and no one will ever forget the deep sympathy and anxiety that pervaded the whole Empire.

As is well known, King Edward is an ardent sportsman. While tiger and elephant-hunting in India His Majesty had many hairbreadth escapes. On one occasion the King was making his way through the thick undergrowth of a Ceylon jungle, when he was crashing of branches close at hand. Almost before he could cock his rifle an elephant burst through the dense trees and charged thunderously down upon the King. Instead of endeavoring to escape, our sovereign coolly pointed his piece at the head of the monster and took deliberate aim. The shot struck the elephant, and, although it did not immediately kill the animal, it caused the great creature to swerve aside within a few feet of His Majesty. Had it not been for that cool shot the King must have been mangled beyond recognition by those ponderous feet and deadly gleaming tusks!

On another occasion a large tiger sprang suddenly from a thicket on to the back of the elephant which the King was riding, and made frantic efforts to get at His Majesty. The cloth on which the howdah rested was completely torn away, the tiger thus slipping to the ground with the tattered cloth. Had the ferocious animal succeeded in getting into that howdah there would have been very little left of our sporting King.

Perhaps the most recent escape of King Edward was on the occasion of his visit to Sir Thomas Sharnock. The great steel mast suddenly snapped under the tremendous strain of the canvas, falling within a foot of His Majesty, who was strolling on deck at the time. It was perhaps the narrowest escape from instant death that he ever experienced.

Accidents to Work People.

Industrial accidents occurring to 273 individual work people in Canada during the month of December, 1908, were reported to the Department of Labor at Ottawa. Of these, 85 were fatal and 188 resulted in serious injuries.

In the preceding month there were 124 fatal and 193 non-fatal accidents reported, a total of 322, and in December, 1907, there were 88 fatal and 195 non-fatal accidents, a total of 283.

A SPEEDY WOOING.

Old Toronto Boy Comes Home and Captures a Bride in Short Time.

An old romance was brought to a speedy culmination in Toronto recently when Miss Jean Frances Boyd, daughter of Mr. J. McG. Boyd, of Davenport road, became the bride of Mr. W. A. Esson, a former Torontonian, and now a prominent business man of Chicago.

More than a decade ago Mr. Esson was manager of the Island Ferry Co., and was known to a wide acquaintance as "Billy" Esson. He was much in the company of Miss "Daisy" Boyd, as the bride was known among her friends. Later Mr. Esson went away to Chicago, and gradually drifted away from his old Toronto associations. Just before Christmas, it being the holiday season, he returned to Toronto to renew old acquaintanceship, and in chatting with them asked if anyone knew where old Mr. Boyd, who is in the employ of the Toronto Ferry Co., lived. Someone volunteered to show him, and he at once went to the house, at that time with no thought of marriage. After a chat with the old gentleman Miss Boyd came into the room. She had not seen him for twelve years or so, and their meeting was rather reserved. Mr. Esson chatted for a few minutes, and then recurring to old memories, asked his former sweetheart to marry. She then wanted him to give an account of himself and his behavior for the past ten years or so. He was so successful in the narration that his sweetheart of other days gave a consent. "Well, then let's get married right now!" said the impetuous Mr. Esson, adding that he had to be back in Chicago by the following Monday.

Again the lady was induced to yield, a marriage license was quickly procured and a minister also. Within a few hours of the bridegroom's first visit he and his old sweetheart were made one in the parlor of Mr. Boyd's home on Davenport road, and a little later were speeding to Chicago. Mr. Esson is obviously the kind of rushing personage who makes good in Chicago.

MILL OWNER TOO ZEALOUS.

Glencoe Temperance Worker Forgot Obligation to Hotelman.

The town of Glencoe failed to go "dry" as far as local option is concerned by the vote at the recent election, but it went so "dry" as far as the Lewett Knitting Co. is concerned, that that industry had to cease running for a day or so, and thereby hangs a tale which has caused considerable amusement in Glencoe.

The Lewett Co. is an industry employing about 15 or 20 hands, which came to the town recently on the understanding that it was to be provided with free water. This stipulation was easily made good, for one of the two hotelmen had a splendid well, running a couple of hundred thousand gallons a day, and he offered water for milling purposes without money and without price.

The knitting company was running nicely when the local option campaign came on. The manager of the knitting company is a staunch temperance advocate and supported the bylaw regardless of the fact that his factory was receiving its water supply from one of the men whom local option would put out of business. The hotelman took it as a joke at first, but finally took the knitting mill man that he would have to look elsewhere for water. The latter did look elsewhere, but looked in vain, and in the end the factory had to shut down.

By this time the town council got interested and sought to effect a settlement. Their efforts at first were futile, but the hotelman being of a genial and forgiving disposition, they succeeded in making an agreement, whereby the water would again be supplied, ostensibly to the council, but through them to the factory, which is once more running as usual.
