The Faithful Wives of Weinsberg.

Weinsberg is in the northwestern part of Wurtemberg, about thirty miles from Stuttgart. It is early mentioned as a capital city of the bishopric of Wurzburg, and later we read that in the year 814 Emperor Louis I. established the Frei-herrschaft of Weinsberg. About 1129, Freiherr Wolfram von Weinsberg transferred the castle to the Rhenish Palgravi-ne, Gottfried of Caled. The latter gave it as a marriage gift with his daughter Uta to Duke Welf VI., who regarded it as a part of the allodial estate of his wife, and refused to deliver it to Konrad III., when this emperor claimed it as a rever-sionary fee. An intense hatred existed between the Hohenstaufens and Welfs.
It began in the time of the unfortunate Henry IV., and culminated when in 1079 Henry sent for Frederic of Hohenstaufen, and, in a solemn speech in which he acknowledged his loyalty, gave him his daughter Agnes in marriage, and the Dukedom of Suabia as a dowry. The death of Henry in 1139 brought new complications and feuds, and Konrad welcomed any event that might make Welf feel his power. He accordingly appeared with his army before the castle, having in the meantime defeated the forces of Welf at Esslingen as they were hastening to the help of the besieged Weinsberg.
The attack upon the castle was begun.
After a determined struggle, Welf fell, wounded, and the surrender seemed to be inevitable. "Without grace or mercy," were the words of the emperor, and the town was to share the fate of the castle.
The greatest terror prevailed. Then the highborn dutchesses and the wives of the town officers held a council, and determined to go in procession to the emperor, implore them to let them escape, and also allow them to carry away with them their most precious possessions. The emperor, who had no desire to wage war with women, received them kindly, gave them permission to leave the besieged town, and to take with them all that they could carry with them upon their shoulders. The woman went away, night passed, and the morning came. At an early hour Konrad's army was drawn up in file, the gates were opened at the command of the emperor, when Duke Frederic, the emperor's brother, turning espied, down in the valley street and along the steep path that led from the castle a long line of women, carrying on their backs, not clothing, jewels, and silver, but each her husband; and, behold Uta, the stately duchess of the castle, leads the procession, the wounded Duke Welf upon her back! Had not the emperor distinctly said, "Take with you all that you can carry upon your shoulders?" When Duke Frederic, beheld this sight, the like of which had never before been witnessed since the world began, he cried out angrily to the emperor, "That was not the compact!" but the emperor, whose face showed quite plainly that he was not displeased by this exhibition of womanly faithfulness, answered, "a king's word is not to be broken;" and while the emperor and his army looked on in mute surprise, the strange procession wended its way, patiently and silently, down the steep hillside, out into the country road, carrying away the men, and leaving the castle and town to the troops.
The emperor generously ordered that all the treasures should at once be collected and carried out to them.

To perpetuate this instance of womanly fidelity, the muns have ever since borne the name "Weibtreue"—woman's faithfulness.—Harper's Magazine.

Lady visitor—"Your boy looks very bad, Mrs. Jones; what's the matter?" Mrs. Jones—"Yes, ma'am, he is very bad; an' what's more, the doctors has made him worse. I'm sure we poor people need to pray with all our hearts.
'From false doctrin' good Lord deliver us.' I never saw its meaning before."

A new contribution basket has been invented which rings a gong every time a button without an eye or a ten-cent piece with one is dropped into it. The first sunday it was tried in an Amsterdam church it went off like a Gatling gun the whole round trip.

Eighteen women met together at With-water, Wis., and prayed for rain, and when the rain descended, seventeen of them screamed because they had no umbrellas.

Clergyman, who has caught a boy stealing, "Don't you know that the devil gets naughty little boys?" Boy: "I know it now."

A New York correspondent of the Chicago News recalls this story about Labouchere, the proprietor and editor of London Truth, and his wife, who is known professionally as Miss Henrietta Hodson.
The incidents occurred some twenty-five years ago. Labouchere was then an attache of the British legation, and Miss Hodson was a member of the Wallack company. Had they "met by chance the usual way," we don't know, but met they had, and Cupid on his part, and possibly epiduity on hers (for Labouchere was then, as now, rich), had made them lovers. Brougham's Pocahontas was then on the boards, and she was the beautiful savage. One evening 7.30 came, and the call-boy repeated "No Miss Hodson." She was however a quick dresser, and all preparations proceeded as usual. Curtain time came, and still no Pocahontas.
Pocahontas (Brougham), and Captain Smith (dear old Walcot) amicably aided him, but in vain. The house was full.
What was to be done, especially as there was no understudy? "I have it!" said Brougham: "I'll play my daughter as well." Everybody laughed. He rang up, made an apology for her absence, and sure enough, whenever Pocahontas was to come on, or stand, or speak, or sing, Brougham would fill her place and do all her lines and business and singing, saying, "If Miss Hodson were only here, she would say this," etc., etc. It is needless to say the effect was ludicrous, and the burlesque thus burlesqued went so well that at first it was determined to run the piece in that way. However a substitute was sent for, and the next day "the murder was out." Pocahontas and Labouchere had eloped and sailed on the previous afternoon in a Cunarder for home. An explanatory letter had miscarried. Mrs. Labouchere is the dramatic teacher of Mrs. Langtry, and it is said that she is coming to this country with her much talked of pupil.

A QUEER STORY.—Charles Fox told us of an American friend who once felt a concern to get somewhere he did not know.
He ordered his gig, his servant asking where he was to drive. "Up and down the road," said the master. At last they met a funeral. "Follow this funeral," said the master. They followed the procession until they came to the churchyard. While the service was being performed the friend sat in the gig; at its conclusion he walked to the grave and exclaimed solemnly: "This person now buried is innocent of the crime laid to her charge," and then returned to his gig. An elderly gentleman in deep mourning came up to him in great agitation and said: "Sir, what you have said surprised me very much." "I can't help it; I can't help it," replied the other; "I only said what I was obliged to say."
"Well," said the mourner, "the person just buried is my wife, who for some years had lain under the suspicion of infidelity to me. No one else knew of it, and on her deathbed she again protested her innocence, and said that if I would believe her then, a witness to it would be raised up even at her graveside."—Memoirs of Old Friends—Caroline Fox.

"What an economy?" began Brother Gardner, as he got a brace for his feet and looked himself in the left eye. "I answer dat economy am de art of extracting' de most value for de least money. Economy am de art of making time count. Take de plumber, for instance. All he wants to begin life on am a solderin'-iron, a fire-pot an' a bar of solder. Economy does de rest. He gets pay for the hours he works. Likewise, moreover, fur his helper. Time am cash to him. Ebery five minutes gone while he am huntin' fur a leak am so much added to his capital. Take de house painter. Ebery minute he gains am dead cash. He could save ten cents a day by economizin' on cigars, but he doan' have to. He can save fifty by economizin' on de man who hires him half a day."

Sir Bernard Burke, who knows all about such matters, says in his new book, called "Reminiscences, Ancestral, Anecdotal, and Historic," that the children of Queen Victoria have no surname. His words are:—"I feel persuaded that the Royal House of Saxe-Coburg—atavis edita repub-lis—has no surname. When the adoption of surnames became general, the ancestors of that illustrious race were kings, and needed no other designation than the Christian names added to the Royal title."

"What plan," said an actor to another, "shall I adopt to fill the house at my benefit?" "Invite your creditors," was the tart reply.
