

ANECDOTE OF THE CAMEL.—A year or two ago it chanced that a valuable camel, working in the oil-mill, was severely heated by its driver, who, perceiving that the camel had treasured up the injury, and was only waiting a favorable moment for revenge, kept a strict watch upon the animal. Time passed on. The camel, perceiving that he was watched, was quiet and obedient, and the driver began to think that the beaten was forgotten, when, one night, after the lapse of several months, the man, who slept on the platform in the mill, while, as is customary, the camel was stalled in a corner, happened to remain awake, observed by the bright moonlight, that when all was quiet, the animal looked cautiously around, rose softly, and stealing towards a spot where a bundle of clothes and a berous, thrown on the ground, resembled a sleeping being, cast itself violently upon them, rolling with all his weight, and tearing them most viciously with his teeth. Satisfied that his vengeance was complete, the camel was returning to its corner when the driver sat up and spoke. At the sound of his voice, and perceiving the mistake he had made, the animal was so mortified at the failure and discovery of its scheme, that it dashed its head against the wall and died on the spot. Such was the story as related by the dragoman and the owner of the mill vouched for its authenticity.

JUST IN TIME.—It was an Ohio man, who, when a terrible storm set in one night, rushed into the house of a neighbor, and cried out:

"Jones, this is the ending up of the earth!"

"I'm afraid so—I'm afraid so!" was the reply.

"And what shall we do?"

"Make our peace with heaven."

The wind blew still stronger, the house began to shake, and the excited man exclaimed:

"Jones, you lost five bushels of wheat last fall."

"Yes."

"And you have your suspicions?"

"I have; the man who took my wheat had better own up."

"Can you forgive him?"

"I can."

"Well—"

Here the wind suddenly dropped, and after a look through the window, the conscious stricken man turned and finished: "Yes, if I ever meet him, I'll advise him to call around."

Among the Washington young men who move in the extremely select circle of the army and navy, it is highly improper to attend a concert or theatre with one's fiancee, without the chaperonage of mamma or maiden aunt. A ride alone, or even the presence of a third person, is not to be spoken of, and young men find their maidens well guarded. But one evening the mother was too ill to go to the play, and a young woman for once consented to go alone with the man to whom she was engaged. Speaking of it afterwards, she said, "I suffered agony all the time for fear we should meet somebody we knew, and I never felt so common in all my life."

Edward Murray went out on the big St. Louis bridge to commit suicide. He made the preparations so deliberately and openly that his purpose was divined by the time he was ready to take the plunge. Among them was the tying of his legs together at the ankles with a cord so that he could not swim. Several pilots blew their whistles to draw attention to him, and men ran to him, but he fought his way to the parapet and jumped over. Soon after he was making frantic efforts to sink, but floated in spite of himself, his baggy trousers acting as a life-preserver. He was taken out only slightly choked.

LOTS OF FUN AHEAD.—An old miner was brought up before Judge McDowell one morning, for being drunk. The judge gave the old fellow a good whole-some lecture on the sin of drunkenness.

"Were you ever drunk?" asked the old veteran.

"No, sir," said his honor. "I never was."

The old man hung his head for a moment, and then ejaculated:

"Well, I'll be—! But it ain't too late yet, judge; there's fun ahead for you—heaps of fun."

The old fellow was discharged amid a roar of laughter.

There are millions of pins used every hour, and the wonder is what becomes of them. As we shiver over the stove to-day, we wish that one might have been arranged in the lap of Spring before Winter sat down in it.
