Bathing.
The end of the day is the best time for a sponge bath; a sponge and a coarse towel have often cured insomnia where diacodium failed. A bucket of tepid water will do for ordinary purposes; daily shower baths in winter time are as preposterous as hot drinks in dog days. Russian baths and ice water cures owe their repute to the same popular delusion that ascribes miraculous virtue to nauseating drugs—the mistrust of our natural instincts, culminating in the idea that all natural things must be injurious to men, and that the efficacy of a remedy depends on the degree of its repulsiveness. Ninety-nine boys in a hundred would rather take the bitterest medicine than a cold bath in mid-winter. If we leave children and animals to the guidance of their instincts they will become amphibious in the dog-days, and quench their thirst at the coldest spring without fear of injurious consequences; but in winter time even wild beasts avoid immersion with instinctive dread. A Canadian bear will make a wide circuit, or pick his way over the floe rather than swim a lake in cold weather. Baptist missionaries do not report many revivals before June. Warm springs, on the other hand, attract all the birds and beasts that stay with us in the winter time; the hot spas of Rockport, Ark., are visited nightly by raccoons and foxes, in spite of all torch-light hunts; and Haxthausen tells us that in hard winters the thermae of Paetigorsk, in the Eastern Caucasus, attract deer and wild hogs from the distant Terek Valley. I know the claims of the hydropathic school and the arguments pro and con, but the main points of the controversy still hinge upon the issue between Nature's testimony and Dr. Priessnitz's. — Popular Science Monthly.

THE CANADIAN PARLIAMENT AND HOME RULE.—The New York "World" says: "It is by no means surprising that the British Colonial Secretary should have deemed it his duty, more in anger than in sorrow, to admonish the Canadian Government regarding the address in favor of Irish Home Rule voted by the Dominion Parliament this spring, that when Imperial affairs are under discussion Her Majesty is in the habit of consulting the Imperial Parliament only. Lord Kimberley's despatch recalls the reply, as reported by the proprietor of a penny peep-show of Wellington and Blucher, when the Prussian commander asked, 'My Lord Duke, wherefore do you not lead your men on to victory?' His Grace replied, 'It is not for the likes of me to speak to the likes of you.' In point of fact the Liberals of Canada introduced a Home Rule resolution, with an eye to capture the Irish vote in the general election, then but a few weeks distant, and the Conservatives passed it so as not to be outbid.
Neither side really cared a straw for the motion, and it would perhaps have been wiser had the friends of Home Rule taken it at its intrinsic worthlessness. It was merely another evidence of the cynical readiness of Sir John Macdonald (quite unparalleled, of course, in our own beloved country) to take votes where-ever he can find them. Thus it was that he introduced the tariff of 1878, withdraw it, reintroduced it, and passed it all in one day. Thus it was, too, with his original and successful coalition between the Catholics of Quebec and the Orangemen of Ontario. In the good old days when the Canadian Government used to stimulate Fenian raids in order to get the Militia Bill passed, there was not so much eloquence lent to the advocacy of Home Rule."

WHY THE KETTLE WENT.—The committee appointed to collect metal for cannon for General Beaugard's army applied to a planter of Adams County, Miss., for his bell. Not having such an article, he mentioned it to his wife, when she very patriotically offered her brass Kettle. 'The little one rather demurred to the sacrifice, and one of them, with a sweet tooth, said, 'La, pa, what will we do for preserves?' 'My daughter,' said the wag of a father, 'our whole duty now is to preserve our country.' The kettle was sent.
One Sunday morning after service the minister expressed the great satisfaction it gave him to see in his pew a member of the congregation who had not made his appearance at church for several months and was commonly supposed to have gone the way of the world, the flesh and the devil. The neighbour to whom this gratification was communicated simply replied: "You seem to forget that his wife is in the midst of her housecleaning."

A PRIMA DONNAS MAD HUSBAND.—M.
Rouzaud, the husband of Christine Nilson, the great singer, died in a madhouse.
Her wedding was a triumphal one. It took place under the auspices of Lady Agusta Stanley, and the Dean of Westminster officiated. The bridegroom was an amiable Creole. His family was rich and highly respectable, and one of his near relatives was a French admiral.
The late M. Rouzaud had never reason to complain of the gallant attentions of other men to his wife, but he was rendered unhappy by the feeling that he merely revolved around her. The position of Prince Consort to a sovereign lady of the opera house is not an agreeable one. M. Rouzaud chafed under a sense of his own inferiority. When his wife lost a great part of her fortune in American speculation, he was glad of the opportunity to enhance his value in her eyes by rendering her more wealthy.
He fancied that through the kindness of some members of the Rothschild family, who loved her beautiful voice, he might obtain a key to the Bourse. This illusion brought with it utter ruin. Stock Exchange emotions hastened to action of creeping paralysis. The marriage, which commenced under such bright auspices at Westminster Abbey, proved a miserable one long before the intervention of a mad-doctor was required. When Madame Nilsson discovered that her husband was a lunatic and that his mind was unhinged, she forgave all the injury which he had unwittingly caused her, and acted towards him with thoughtful generosity. He was allowed a suite of rooms in a mad house, in which he was confined, and four servants. During his illness his wife remained in absolute seclusion. She bore the misfortunes that overwhelmed her with dignity. But in quitting Paris she shook the dust of that city from off her feet. Her sorrows had been aggravated by attacks upon her in the print, which last winter gave philanthropic articles of M. Jules Simon and daily instalments of "Pot-Bouille."

KING BILLY.—It is announced that the sword of the equestrian statue of King William III., which so effectively ornaments College Green, in Dublin, has fallen from the hand of the monarch's casting. It has withstood the effects of temperature, wind, and fanaticism for upwards of 170 years, without being injured or molested, excepting, perhaps, the freaks of the Trinity students, who, to do honor to the memory of so good a king, blew him off his horse. On another occasion, when it was always profusely decorated with orange lilies, it was tarred and feathered. The watchmen at the bank observed several men erecting ladders against the statue late in the night preceding the memorable day, and asking what their business was, they replied, "We are touching him for the twelfth." When the sun rose next morning the beautiful statue presented a most pitiable aspect, and many who have examined it recently say that even now traces of the tar can be detected in the finer parts of the bronze. It is to be hoped that the accident that has now occurred to it is due to the effects of the weather, which we hope is true, although if another explanation has been offered associating the act with the Dublin roughs, it would not be outside the prospect of belief.

A SCOTCH DOMINIE'S EVEN START.—During service one Sabbath years ago on the eastern shore of Scotland, in the good old times when everybody was entitled to hold all he could clutch from the wreck of a ship, word came that a ship well laden with spoils had just been driven upon the beach a few hundred yards from the kirk. Men, women, and children, forgetful of the sanctities, at once sprang from their pews and broke for the wreck.
The good minister, being in the pulpit and farthest from the door, shouted to the rapidly dispersing audience:
"Hold! hold! sisters and brethren, hold!
For shame! sit down; sit down but one moment!"
Everybody obeyed, whereupon, coming down from the pulpit, he walked down the aisle, the brethren and sisters looking on impatiently to learn what the good man meant. After passing out the door and to a point about fifty yards beyond, he turned to his flock, who were still in the church. "That's right, that's honest, that's all brethren and sisters; now let's all take an even start;" and with that, and without further pause, he bounced off at a regular Hindoo gait, beating all his lambs to the scene of the wreck by 200 or 300 feet. That was what he called "giving everybody an even start."—Louisville Courier-Journal.
