

Arizona Cowboys.

A GRAPHIC PICTURE OF THE LAZY AND DESPERATE RUFFIANS.

The outlaws of Arizona, who have been the subject of a proclamation by President Arthur, are known as rustlers. They are the same breed, however, as the cowboys of Colorado and Texas. Being further away from civilization and in a country singularly well adapted to business such as theirs, they have become habitually vicious. Wherever the cowboy may be put and under whatever circumstances he may be met he will be found to be the same animal—lazy, foulmouthed, desperate, intemperate, full of swagger and bravado, and careless as well of his own life and property as those of others. He wears a buckskin suit, with a hat having a rim wide enough to cover his ears and neck and turn in at the collar-band. In his leather belt hang two large and fine revolvers, generally self-cockers, and in one boot-leg, held in place by two slits in the leather, rests a knife of murderous pattern. The cowboys range in age from 18 to 30. The life which they lead is not conducive to longevity, and it is therefore very rare that a genuine cowboy more than 30 years of age is found. If one succeeds in dodging the bullets of Deputy Sheriffs and the gibbet of Judge Lynch until that period is passed he generally abandons the trade and takes to train and stage robbing as a profession.

The cowboys, who make their appearance occasionally at frontier towns in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado, devote the greater part of their time to the cattle which they are employed to herd, and in the shipping season drive them to the nearest desirable railroad station. On the great ranches they find no opportunity to indulge their lawless propensities. They literally live among their cattle, faring but little better than the brutes which they are hired to guard. The little cooking which is necessary they do themselves. They are their own tailors and doctors, and once or twice a year when near a fine stream, if the weather is not too cool, their solitary shirt is washed after a fashion. When the round-ups occur and the great cattle drive is begun, the cowboy's life begins to take on a different aspect. The drive is often long and always dangerous and laborious. The boys are splendidly mounted, their horses and saddles being with the exception of their revolvers the possessions in which they take the most pride. They ride among the cattle at imminent risk of being trampled to death, and at night sleep on the ground. When the herd has been delivered and the boys have partaken freely of frontier whiskey the trouble begins. If there is a dance-house near at hand they head for it and signalize their presence by attempting to "shoot out" the candles or lamps as the case may be. As a rule, they are not disturbed in pastimes such as this. If they conclude before morning to "take the town," then war is declared and somebody will be killed.

The Arizona rustlers are simply northern cowboy on an unending spree. They are wild men. No Apache that ever lived had less regard for life than they. They pretend to pay some attention to cattle, but as that industry in Arizona is not yet a large one, there is not much in that line for them to do. Their occupation is pillage and murder. They travel in small parties and rob everybody they meet. The other day a cowboy entered a little settlement and purchased a can of corn beef. Taking the meat and a keg out into the road, he sat down on the keg and opened the can. When everything was ready he called to a man, a stranger standing in front of the store, to come and help him eat it. The man was not hungry. "You've got to eat it," came the command, accompanied by a movement of the hand, which rested on a revolver. The stranger advanced slowly and partook of the meat, evidently in an unhappy frame of mind, but his host seemed to enjoy the repast and the society of his newly-made acquaintance not a little.

A cowboy entered a hotel dining-room, sat down opposite to a young man whom he addressed as a tenderfoot, and began to throw the dishes and their contents on the floor. The young man endeavored to remonstrate with him, but before he could finish his first sentence he was pierced by a bullet from the desperado's revolver. Events like the above are of daily occurrence in Arizona.—Cor. Phil Times.

Says the Court Circular:—"Cream is much more becoming for the broad light of day than pure white, and as the occasion is a nervous one, and brides are traditionally pale, it is well to avoid anything that increases the pallor of the skin. The palest butter colour is charming in satin or brocade, and should be used by brunettes with clear complexion."

ALABASTINE.

A Natural Material for finishing

Walls, Ceilings,

ROUGH STONE, NEW SMOOTH SAND FIN-

ISH, A SOLID, HARD, FINISH. PAINT-

ED WALLS, WOOD CEILINGS, WALL

PAPER, BRICK, ROUGH BOARDS,

CANVAS, Etc., Etc.

Superior to Kalsomine.

READY FOR USE BY ADDING HOT WATER.

CAN BE MIXED BY ANY ONE.

Any Housekeeper can Apply it without the aid of Skilled Labor.

Alabastine is a Valuable

Discovery.

It constitutes a permanent finish for Walls,

assimilating with the plaster, and will not run off. It does not deteriorate by age; in this respect it is unlike all other preparations of a similar character. ALABASTINE is a disinfectant, and renders apartments healthy. Cracks in the Walls can be filled by mixing the ALABASTINE thick, which cannot be done with Kalsomine.

Five pounds of ALABASTINE will cover 50 square yards, or 450 square feet, two coats.
