VIOLENT STORM

Chatham, Ont., Has An Electrical and Wind Storm That Does Damage.

CHATHAM, Ont., June 7.-(Special) -A violent electrical and wind storm passed a few miles south of Chatham last night. Barns were unroofed, trees uprooted or snapped off, and fences swept away. The district which suffered most seriously include the Frederick farm; Munton's slaughter house, Payne's place; and George Stewart's farm. Nearly all these buildings were unroofed and cattle in some cases were blown right over the fields. Woodsheeds and outhouses were swept away and the fury of the wind cracked off pines sixteen inches through, like matches. Rain fell in torrents, and the whole district was literally flooded for several hours.

HE SOUGHT DEATH

CHARLOTTETOWN, P. E. I., June 7.-(Special) -James H. McCannall, aged 35, a well-to-do farmer of Mill Valley, two miles from Kensington, was found by his wife last evening hanging in an outbuilding. He was living, but his neck was broken. There is no hope of recovery. Temporary insanity, brought on by illness and worry over losses, determined him to end his life.

General Linevitch says he will defeat the Japs. St. John might now find a market for Wun Lung. Linevitch will need a ferry to carry him over to dictate terms of peace at Tokio, and Russia is a little short of ferries in those waters at present.

A BLESSING IN DISGUISE.

Mr. Peter Binks is out today with a mission. It is his purpose to do a great and needed work for the city, with the aid of his fellow citizens. Early this morning he backed the Times new reporter up against a building and eagerly unfolded his plan. "There was a circus in town yesterday," said Mr. Binks. "It did not give any performance. Therefore the people did not spend any money on it. They still have that money. But they fully intended to spend it. They had been waiting for the circus and saving up the money. I have figured it out that at least two thousand people would have spent a dollar each at that circus. There you have two thousand dollars. And there I have two thousand dollars, for of course I will get it. 'I propose to appeal to the people to contribute that money to provide a fund to prosecute the search for the Citizens' League. With that amount I am confident it can be located. I do not share the belief of some persons that I went to Philadelphia to help Mayor Weaver, or that it has gone in search of the north pole. Its officers and members were well known citizens--over a hundred of them--devoted and pledged to labor for the welfare of St. John. Some unhappy accident has befallen them. I verily believe they went out, perhaps in search of a new platform, and lost themselves. 'If the people will give me the money they intended to spend on the circus, I am confident that the League will be found.' "Well," said the new reporter, kissing his last dollar and passing it over, "I wish you luck, Mr. Binks. If you can find the Citizens' League we won't miss the circus." Mr. Binks stated at noon that he had already collected five hundred dollars without meeting a single refusal. If the next circus can be stopped, enough money might be collected to buy a touring automobile to carry the mayor and aldermen to Mispee and Lech Lamond.

TOGO IS MODEST AFTER HIS VICTORY

Great Japanese Admiral Takes Little Credit in Himself

SAYS PORT ARTHUR TAUGHT JAPS COOLNESS

Lack of Good Leadership Ascribed as Principal Reason for the Russian Defeat---Terrible Damage to the Rel.

NEW YORK, June 7.-In response to a cablegram from a morning newspaper, congratulating Admiral Togo on his unparalleled victory, the admiral sent the reply: "Sasebo (naval station), June 6.-I appreciate your congratulation. As to causes of victory, we have not yet time enough to study, although no doubt, but experience off Port Arthur gave much courage to our officers and taught our men how to fight with coolness. (Sgd.) ADMIRAL TOGO."

They Had No Leader

GUNSHU PASS, Manchuria, June 7. -The Associated Press correspondent is informed that reports have been received at army headquarters from Vladivostok, indicating that the naval defeat was due largely to lack of leadership after Rostevsky was wounded, the engagement being carried on practically without signals after the first hour and no attempt being made to adapt the movements of the fleet to meet the manoeuvres of the Japanese. Nobody on board any vessel in the fleet was in the secret as to Rostevsky's plans, the commander-in-chief's only confidant being Rear Admiral Voelkersham, who died early in the fight.

Up to the time of the battle, these reports say, fortune favored the Russians, there being almost no sick in the hospitals and all the ships being in good condition.

No one in the fleet cherished any illusions. At the most it was hoped that enough vessels would reach Vladivostok to threaten Japan's absolute control of the sea and to make the Japanese pay as dearly as possible for every ship lost. The hopes of the Russians went no further than this.

The Russian ships had enough coal to reach Vladivostok, but there was an inadequate supply of shells and ammunition for a prolonged battle, whereas the Japanese, operating near the base, were not under the necessity of stowing away enormous quantities of coal and could carry a double quantity of shells or replenish their ammunition from auxiliary vessels.

The Russian officers assert that the ships surviving the first day of the battle must have been practically out of ammunition.

The Japanese guns, the report says, were of greater range than those of the Russians, their heavy shells flying over the battleship division and striking the transports and unarmored cruisers beyond.

She Was Terribly Battered

TOKIO, June 7.-(Special) -A correspondent

dent of the Associated Press has been permitted to inspect the Russian battleship Orel, now lying at Madzuru. The Orel received a terrible battering. Her hull shows forty gaping holes pierced by large shells and many smaller, where she had been hit, while the superstructures, her upper works and upper decks were riddled by shells, steel fragments and splinters. The starboard forward 12-inch gun was smashed ten feet from the muzzle, either by a shell or by an explosion. A fragment of the gun went over the bridge, smashing the rail and after carrying away the breach of a 12-pounder, buried itself in the signal locker.

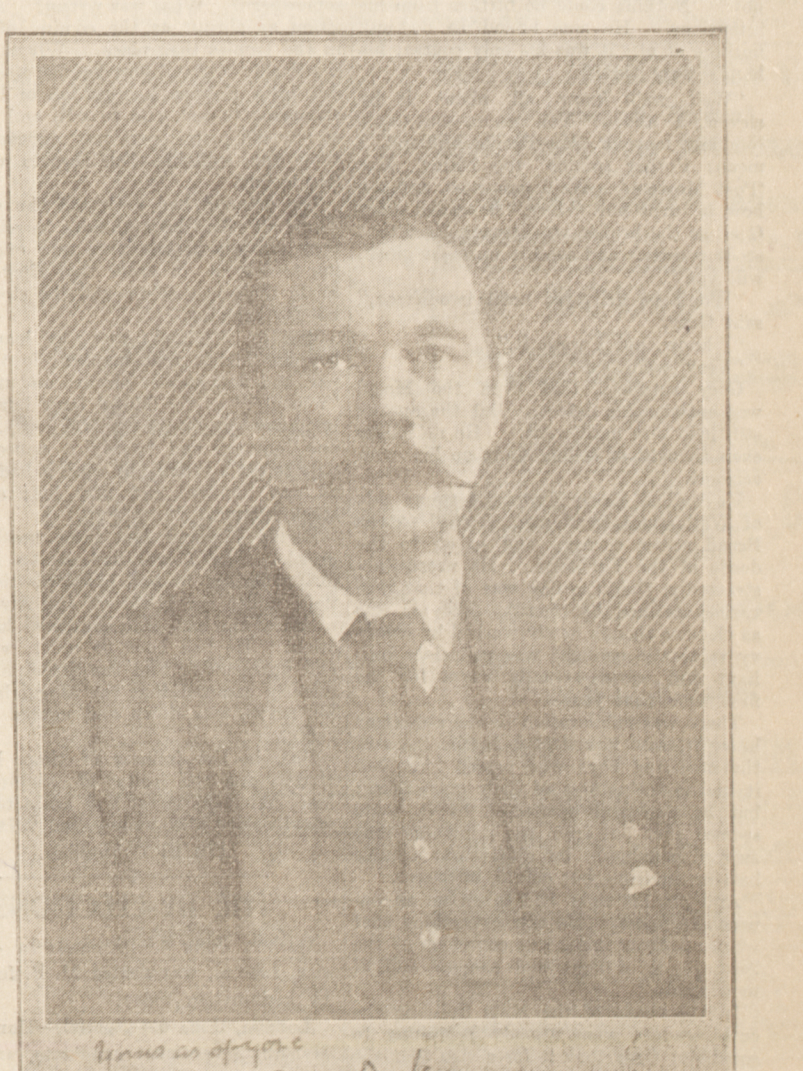

From the main deck upward, the condition of the vessel was terrible to behold. Steel partitions were smashed, the gangway was broken and stanchions wrecked. Gear of various kinds covered the decks and the state of the alleyways shows that the ship was afire several times. The mark of the flames increased the scene of desolation. The main armor belt is intact. The turret armor generally withstood the battering from shells, although two of the six-inch turrets were rendered unserviceable by shells which struck close to their base. Several smaller guns were dismounted and smashed.

A gruesome sight was the bulkhead splattered with blood, fragments of flesh and hair. The Orel is sound structurally, although it will be necessary to practically reconstruct her from the water line up. The condition of the ship shows that the crew underwent a terrible ordeal before they surrendered.

Overhauled Her Cargo

NAGASAKI, June 7.-(Special) -The British steamer Chitram, chartered by the Mitsui Bussan steamship company of Tokyo, bound from Shanghai for Kobe, Japan, was stopped on June 2, eighty miles from the bell buoy off the entrance to Woorung by the Russian transport Rion. A boarding party, after the steamer's papers had been examined, removed her articles and threw overboard 411 bags of beans, 125 bags of cotton and 12 boxes of ammunition. The Russians left again suddenly, stating that the steamer was released. It is supposed that they received a wireless message announcing the approach of German warships.

S. S. Mount Temple, from London, England, landed passengers at Quebec yesterday at 12:30.
