STAGELAND---By George O. Baker

CAUSE FOR ALARM.

Actress-Dearest! I have lost the handbag containing all my diamonds. What shall I do?

Manager-Oh! don't make a fuss about a little thing like that.

Actress-But the handbag also contained $250.

Manager-Great Scott! I'll telegraph for a detective at once.

JUST THE SAME.

Friend-So you have had poor luck with your play?

Playwright-Miserable.

Friend-Well, name the next one "The Mystery of the Mustard Plaster."

Playwright-Why so?

Friend-It might draw.

UNKNOWN LUXURY.

De Hammer-How was it you failed to give a production of "Hamlet" in that Oklahoma settlement?

Tragedian-Why, when Barnes went to play the ghost he couldn't find a sheet in the whole settlement.

EXPLAINED AT LAST.

Shade of Caesar-Why did you play the fiddle when Rome was burning?

Shade of Nero-Because I couldn't afford to lower my dignity by running to the fire.

BEHIND THE SCENES.

"What did Dolly Footlight say when you informed her of your intention to hug and kiss her?"

"She said she always appreciated good press notices."

THE KING INQUEST

Evidence Gradually Coming Out Which Points to Incendiarism as Origin of Recent Fire.

Little by little important testimony is being brought out at the inquest being held in connection with the death of the late James W. King, and many witnesses make statements that tend to show that the conflagration was of incendiary origin. Last evening Rev. J. Lyman King was watching the evidence in the interests of his brother, W. E. King.

Geo. B. Baker, lieutenant of No. 1 Hook and Ladder Co. said that he did not think the fire was set. He thought that sparks from the engine was the cause of it.

District Engineer Charles Brown, recalled, said that he thought the fire started in the rear of King's cellar and was of an incendiary nature.

De S. H. McDonald said the death of James King was due to suffocation.

Pelegian Wm. Lee said that a woman had told him early in the evening that the Sweeney building had been on fire, and that Mr. King had jumped it out.

Edward P. Jellicoe stated that Mr. King had never told him that he had intended moving from St. John. The witness said that about 12.40 he and Dr. Packard had to leave his shop as the smoke was coming from his cellar through the trap door. The witness said that most damage was done to the part under King's shop, and the only way to get into the cellar was through a trap door from the shop.

Geo. S. Hoyt, picture framer (the "unknown" young man who helped Mr. King stamp out the fire early in the evening) said that about 10.45 Saturday night he was walking along Waterloo Street when he noticed a peculiar light over Mr. King's store. He stood awhile and finally saw Mr. King come out and lock the door. He called King's attention to the light. They went up to the second floor together, looked through a window in a partition and saw a fire on the floor. The door was locked and he put his fist through the partition and they put the fire out.

The inquest was adjourned until Friday evening at eight o'clock.

NERVOUS AND WEAK
