ST. JOHN FAMILY IN CHILEAN EARTHQUAKE

main near the houses which might fall and crush them.

Mr. Heffer, who is engaged in photography, lost over a thousand negatives and a considerable quantity of other effects through breakage. The telegraph and telephone lines, the trains and tramcars were also put out of business.

Mr. Heffer sends a copy of the daily paper—"El Imparcial" of August 17, in which the story of the earthquake is told at length under the following headlines: (The paper is printed in Spanish but Mr. Heffer has written a translation.)

"The earthquake of last night— Terrible panic of the population—Very heavy shocks during the night—Numerous houses thrown out of plumb—Many killed and wounded—Fires and alarms of fire—The parks and public places turned into places of refuge—Revolt of prisoners in the jails—No news as to Valparaiso and the provinces—The disaster in the city of Los Andes—Complete paralyzation of railroad service—Lugubrious aspect of the city—Latest news of the catastrophe—Divers Details."

Writing two days later Mr. Heffer refers to the continuance of the shocks, and the fact that for three days and nights he had not taken off his clothing. The family had been sleeping in the garden. They had rigged up a tent, put carpets and beds in and were quite comfortable.

In a letter written six days later he speaks of the great damage and loss of life in Valparaiso, where the shocks were much more severe than in Santiago. It was estimated that 4000 persons had lost their lives in the earth's upheaval. Thieves were given a quick entry into the other world, over 110 having been shot down. Mr. Heffer sent a number of views illustrating the extent of the catastrophe and showing some of the makeshift dwellings, etc.

PROF. WHITE FIGURES AS THE RESPONDENT

terday before Judge White in the divorce court. Le Blanc seemed ill at ease on the witness stand, and at times became aggressive in his replies to opposing counsel. But he denied all allegations of Mr. Buffinton, reiterating that the relations between himself and Mrs. Buffinton were strictly those of teacher and pupil.

WROTE TO BUFFINTON.

A letter was read by Attorney Daggett from Le Blanc to Buffinton, in which Le Blanc stated he had done "all he could to avoid trouble," but that if Buffinton persisted in following him he would take measures to protect himself.

"You wrote that letter?" asked Lawyer Daggett, for Buffinton.

"Yes, after he had chased me with three or four men. I thought they were burglars. I ran a little way."

"You were escorting Mrs. Buffinton home at the time, were you not?"

"I was."

"And it was 1 o'clock at night?"

"Yes."

LAUGHTER IN COURT ROOM.

At these questions and answers the crowded court room burst into a loud laughter that was with difficulty quelled by officers.

Lawyer Swasey, in his argument for Mrs. Buffinton, said that the only "suspicious circumstances" were when Le Blanc lighted a fire and dried Mrs. Buffinton's clothing after a storm, at Le Blanc's home, and where Mrs. Le Blanc had testified she saw Mrs. Buffinton sitting in the musician's lap with her arms around Le Blanc's neck.

"Nothing very wrong in that, that I can see," said the lawyer, amid laughter, "among these professional people, whose souls are not like that of others."

Attorney Daggett, in closing, declared that Mrs. Buffinton had been guilty of a "reckless disregard for the truth." He described her as a "cunning woman" and one who was thoroughly infatuated with Le Blanc and he with her.

DAGGETT SCORES COUPLE.

"We have Mrs. Buffinton slipping down the stairs to let Le Blanc into the room when he had been forbidden to go there any more. Is this love of music? And we have Mrs. Le Blanc telling of going into the parlor of her house, where her husband and Mrs. Buffinton had been for hours in the dark. When she opened the door there was a great noise, as though some one had jumped up suddenly and a table was knocked over. Now these people may have possessed aesthetic temperaments not like other people's. But was it necessary to knock over half the furniture in the room in their haste?

"Mr. Le Blanc said he wrote this letter for an opera. He knows whom it was written to. This is no opera. It is a love letter, written by a man to the woman he loves. And it's a pretty warm letter, too."

Judge White took the case under advisement.

While the wife of the corespondent, Jerome Le Blanc, sobbed like a child, Mrs. Ernest Buffinton, who is being sued for divorce by her husband, remained calm and self-possessed, while her husband's lawyer summed up the testimony and concluded with a scathing denunciation of Mrs. Buffinton and Le Blanc, characterizing them as perjurers, in the divorce session yesterday.

PRODUCE PRICES HAVE BEEN HIGH

The supply of produce that arrived at Indiantown during the past summer was both plentiful and of good quality but the prices did not meet with the approval of the retailers as well as those of the summer previous.

The vegetables, butter, eggs, and green goods the past summer were not scarce by any means, yet the prices were very high and merchants claim that the farmer is the rich man this year. As compared with the season previous the past summer was one that tested the pocketbook of the citizen, as in every instance the prices were very high.

For some time the farmers up river held their potatoes thinking that they were scarce all over the province and when they were being sold at $1.50 per barrel wholesale from other parts of the province, the up-river farmers shipped their crop to the city and asked $2.10 per barrel. They were unable, however, to obtain that price and were glad finally to accept the market price.

Butter and eggs, though, remained high all summer. This fall has not been favorable to the consumer, for farmers still hold out for high prices and butter and eggs are practically considered as luxuries.

Speaking with the Times several prominent Indiantown merchants stated yesterday that the quantity and quality of the goods last summer and the present fall were good, but the farmers evidently selected this year as one during which they would make profits, for the prices were unusually high and in the majority of cases unreasonable. The prices of butter and eggs, the merchants considered were very unreasonable as they claimed that the farmers could make a good profit on much lower prices. The farmers reply that the scarcity and the demand make the price.

The fall produce is now coming very fast and this week especially the amount landed at Indiantown was very large. One needs only to look at the ware-houses of the Star Line and the May Queen to note the fact. On thursday night the Victoria carried 1067 barrels of apples and potatoes and the May Queen also brought a very large freight.

AT THE OPERA HOUSE

A last chance will be given the patrons of the Opera House to see the laughable comedy Turned Up, which was the bill on Thanksgiving night, and was played to capacity. Monday The Ellis Co. will present for their opening bill of the third week of their engagement, a pastoral drama of unusual interest, viz., Down on the Farm, which has had a successful run in the States. This play will run first three nights of week, also Wednesday matinee. On Thursday night a change of bill when the company will offer Liberty Hall, a comedy full of amusing situations. Liberty Hall will hold the boards during the last half of week. Usual Saturday matinee. October 29th, the strong play, Zira, which brought Miss Margaret Anglin into prominence, will be the attraction, Miss Helen Aubrey in the title role.
