THOUSANDS HAVE KIDNEY TROUBLE AND DON'T KNOW IT

Weak and unhealthy kidneys are responsible for more sickness and suffering than any other disease, therefore, when through neglect or other causes, kidney trouble is permitted to continue, many fatal results are sure to follow.

Your other organs may need attention---but your kidneys most, because they do most and should have attention first.

If you are sick or "feel badly," begin taking Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney, liver and bladder remedy, because as soon as your kidneys begin to get better they will help all the other organs to health. A trial will convince anyone.

The mild and immediate effect of Swamp-Root the great kidney and bladder remedy is soon realized. It stands the highest because its remarkable curative power has been proven in thousands of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best.

WILSON, Conn., Feb. 18th, 1906.

Dear Sirs:

"A man could not be in any worse condition than I was with kidney and bladder troubles. I doctored with several good doctors and one physician told me I had Bright's Disease and that I would not live over six months. Another told me it was gall stones. I had severe pains in my kidneys all the while, could not stoop over, would be dizzy, could not lie down without someone helped me up; my back was weak and pained me; urine was as thick as cream and it would scald me something dreadful. I had to get up many times in the night to urinate.

I took Swamp-Root and today I am a well man and never felt better. All of my troubles have gone and show no signs of returning. I take my oath that Swamp-Root put me where I am today and I can prove it by acquaintances."

Very truly yours,
E. H. RAND.

Swamp-Root is not recommended for everything but it promptly overcomes kidney, liver and bladder troubles, the symptoms of which are—obliged to pass your water frequently night and day, smarting or irritation in passing, brickdust or sediment in the urine, headache, backache, lame back, dizziness, poor digestion, sleeplessness, nervousness, heart disturbance due to bad kidney trouble, skin eruptions from bad blood, neuralgia, rheumatism, diabetes, bloating, irritability, wornout feeling, lack of ambition, may be loss of flesh, sallow complexion, or Bright's disease.

If your water, when allowed to remain undisturbed in a glass or bottle for twenty-four hours, forms a sediment or settling or has a cloudy appearance, it is also evidence that your kidneys and bladder need immediate attention.

Swamp-Root is pleasant to take and is for sale at drug stores in Canada in bottles of two sizes and two prices—75c. and $1.25. Remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTE.—In order to prove the wonderful merits of Swamp-Root you may have a sample bottle and a book of valuable information, both sent absolutely free by mail. The book contains many of the thousands upon thousands of testimonial letters received from men and women who found Swamp-Root to be just the remedy they needed. The value and success of Swamp-Root are so well known that our readers are advised to send for a sample bottle. In sending your address to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., be sure to say you read this generous offer in the St. John Evening Times. The genuineness of this offer is guaranteed.

"What, not your mother?"

"She is never here, or almost never, and I have always been too ashamed to speak to her. It seemed so foolish too. If I am dressed like a boy, I must be a boy, mustn't I?"

Cressingham felt a burning indignation surge over him against the monstrous creatures who had parented this sweet, soft-hearted child. He had hated them all before, with the exception perhaps of Madame, but he now regarded them with feeling of utter loathing and abomination. Before they had seemed devilishly inhuman, now they appeared to him entirely fiendish. He intently watched the girl who had for a moment forgotten his presence in a sudden, deep, rapt contemplation.

"My poor Desire," he said, "you still doubt?"

She nodded, watching him breathlessly.

"Go," he said, "go quietly to your mother, tell her that you know. She will make you understand."

"But if I am really a boy?" she cried, paling suddenly; and the man revered her for the chaste and delicate thought that prompted her words.

"Come here, Desire," he said softly.

The girl went shyly towards him and her face dyed slowly when she met his eyes. He put his hands upon her shoulders and slowly bent his face to hers.

She started back, her cheeks aflame: "What would you do?" she gasped.

"This," he answered; and with reverent gentleness he kissed her softly on the lips. "Poor little girl!" he muttered. There was no treachery to Francine in his act. It was as though he had caressed a child. He was touched to the heart with pity as every good man is at any child's distress.

She gave a low, quick sigh, then as he released her, hid her face in her hands. "Oh, I feel so strange, so lonely, so miserable," she panted.

"Depend upon it, you are a girl, Desire," he said gently.

"I think I am," she muttered. "If I am, I shall never forgive them for not telling me—never, never."

"They have treated you vilely," said Cressingham; "they deserve at your hands nothing but hatred and aversion."

"If I am really a girl, I shall do what you—ah, what am I saying?"

"Speak on, Desire, for what you say is right. You will do what I have asked you?"

"I—I—I cannot tell. You would be kind to me, my Lord?"

"Always, dear; you shall be my little sister."

"And never speak to me like you did a little while ago?"

"Never dear; I thought you a boy then."

"Then I shall go now to my mother, for I should be able to see her now."

"Go, then, dear; you need not accompany me to the cavern, I shall find my way."

"Good-night, my Lord."

"Good-night, Desire."

"My Lord?"

"Yes, dear."

"Do people often kiss each other in England?"

"Friends do, and relatives or sweethearts, dear; why?"

"Because I have never been kissed before."

"You poor little girl." said Cressingham.

He wandered through the cold and slimy darkness of the tunnel deep in thought, and in his fancy working out plans for the future. He resolved that if he ever escaped he would really prove a brother to Desire.

Soon he reached the cavern, where for a while he forgot everything in making a hearty meal. That finished, he fastened one end of the ball of twine to a pillar, and lamp in hand strolled down the passage by which he had entered the cavern until he reached the cross-cut. There arrived, he turned into the broader path and commenced the ascent of a sloping and exceedingly damp and dismal staircase hewn out of the mountain's solid matrix. He was often puzzled by cross-way cavern chambers and the branchings of the path, but at such times he closely examined the floor and always choose the road which seemed most trodden.

He judged he had traversed five hundred yards of steps and sloping passages when he came at last to a level cutting from which these separate roads divided. Here he had but little difficulty, for the ground was dry and worn only in one direction. He now proceeded with the utmost caution, for his cord was nearly expended and he guessed that he must be within the confines of the castle. He opened the lantern's slide and prepared at an instant's notice to "douse the glim."

The cord gave out entirely at the end of fifty feet, but the path, so far as he could see, showed no sign of branching, so he tied the cord to a stone and laid it on the ground. Another fifty feet showed him a blank wall through which there issued a faint medley of sounds.

Blowing out the lamp, he was surprised to find the darkness less dense than he had expected, for at the height of a man's shoulders from the ground two tiny eye-holes appeared in the wall, through which shone a subdued glow something like the light of a firefly. He approached these eye-holes and peering through discovered that he stood behind the wall of a large, old-fashioned chamber very near the ceiling, the floor of which was quite sixteen feet beneath his feet. He looked out immediately upon a brass-railed, narrow gallery that ran all round the apartment whose outer walls were hidden behind huge oak bookshelves which contained many thousands of volumes. The railing of this gallery as hung with curtains, through one narrow slit of which Cressingham could catch a glimpse of the opposite side of the gallery, a patch of richly-carpeted floor and one corner of a table far below. The hum of voices reached him, but dim and undistinguishable.

Very cautiously he felt with his fingers over and about the eye-holes for some spring or latch which might enable him to find a door. His search was soon rewarded. His fingers encountered a small circular disc of metal which yielded to his pressure, and with noiseless ease a portion of the bookcase opened inwards on the tunnel. Instantly the voices grew louder, and he became aware that an excited disputation was in progress in the chamber.

The tunnel door was small and narrow, but pricked on by eager curiosity he crawled through, and lying at full length, his stomach upon the floor of the gallery, he looked cautiously down into the room, himself perfectly concealed by the curtains. Three persons were seated before a table littered with flasks and flagons: the Count d'Attala, the man whom he had known as Prince Carlos, and another whom he had no difficulty in guessing was the Turk Yussef el Jibaloff, the father of Desire and Madame Katherin's first lover.

SUIT FOR SMALL BOY.

The suit portrayed in the illustration is an excellent model for a boy of from three to six years of age, the design being a modification of the popular Russian blouse. Dary blue cheviot serge is a very useful material for such a suit, which consists of bloomer trousers and a blouse made in one piece, long enough to reach from the neck to just above the knee. This blouse was made with a stitched panel in the middle of the front and back, with yoke sections on either side, to which the plaits were attached.

NO WOMAN CAN BE STRONG AND HEALTHY UNLESS THE KIDNEYS ARE WELL

When the kidneys are ill, the whole body is ill, for the poisons which the kidneys ought to filter out of the blood are left in the system. Then how important it must be to see to it that this system of sewerage be not clogged up. Those who have never been troubled with kidney trouble know not the misery and suffering which those afflicted undergo.

Doan's Kidney Pills

are a specific for all kidney troubles. They begin by healing the delicate membranes of the kidneys and thus make their action regular and natural.

They help the kidneys to flush off the acrid and poisonous impurities which have collected, thus clearing out the kidneys, bladder and all the urinary passages.

Doan's Kidney Pills are entirely vegetable, and may be safely taken by young and old.

Let Doan's Kidney Pills do for you what they have done for thousands of others, that is, cure you. Mrs. John Young, Harwood, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with my kidneys for some time and my back was so lame I could scarcely get around. After using two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, I am completly cured. I find there is nothing like them for the cure of all kidney troubles."

Doan's Kidney Pills are 50 cents per box or 3 boxes for $1.25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The Doan Kidney Pill Co., Toronto, Ont.
